DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Weather Review of India for the week ending at 8 a.m. on Saturday, January 28th, 1899.

The week under review was remarkably free from disturbance throughout the Indian region, with the exception of Kashmir, the extreme south of the Peninsula and Bengal. The first of these areas obtained light snow on the 25th and 26th due to a slight depression in the North Punjab, the second area some local showers from intensified north-east winds on the 22nd and 23rd, and the last-named locality numerous thundershowers on the 27th due to the passage eastwards through that area of a low pressure wave. The temperature conditions of the week were much less abnormal than during the previous two weeks. Temperature was in steady moderate defect in Madras due chiefly to low night temperature accompanying great dryness of the air caused by the prevalence of dry land winds. Very cool weather prevailed over the whole of Bengal during the first three days of the week, and remarkably low night temperatures were recorded at Calcutta and Saugor Island on the night of the 21st. On the mean of the whole weak temperature was approximately normal over the whole of the Indian area, excepting Assam, Bengal, Bihar and Madras, where it was in moderate defect.

Daily Summary.—Sunday, January 22nd.—Pressure had decreased throughout the Indian area, and was now practically normal. Light irregular airs and calms obtained over the whole of Northern and Central India, where pressure was approximately uniform. Moderate gradients obtained in the Peninsula and the Bay of Bengal, and winds were strong in the south-west of the Bay. Skies were densely clouded in the North-West Himalayas, the South-East Punjab and the adjacent districts of the North-Western Provinces. They were moderately clouded in the south of the Peninsula and Ceylon, and moderate rain had fallen in East Ceylon and showers in the extreme south of Madras. Temperature was in considerable to large defect of the normal in Assam, Bengal, Orissa, Chota Nagpur, the Gangetic Plain, Berar and the Central Provinces and practically normal in the remainder of India and Burma. Temperature was, on the other hand, in considerable excess in Baluchistan due to much higher day temperature than usual.

A

Monday, January 23rd.—A rapid rise of the barometer had occurred in Baluchistan and Upper Sind, and pressure was now upwards of a tenth of an inch above the normal in that area. Pressure had increased slightly to briskly in the Punjab and Lower Sind, and was in slight excess. In the remainder of India the barometric changes were too small to affect the relative distribution of pressure. Winds were unchanged in direction, but were somewhat lighter in the south-west of the Bay and the Coromandel Coast districts. The air was very dry in West Rajputana and the hill districts of Northern India. Skies had cleared in Upper India, and were now free from cloud over the whole of the Indian area, except Southern India and Ceylon, where they continued moderately clouded. Moderate rain had fallen in Ceylon and showers in the extreme south of Madras. A rapid fall of temperature had occurred in Baluchistan, and temperature was now practically normal in that area. Temperature had, on the other hand, increased slightly to rapidly in India, thus reducing the deficiency in that area. The mean temperature of the previous 24 hours was from 3° to 7° below the normal in North-Eastern India and approximately normal in other districts. The chief feature of the temperature conditions was the unusually large diurnal range in the Punjab and Rajputana (11° above the normal).

Tuesday, January 24th.—Pressure had given way over the whole Indian area. The fall was rapid in Sind and the Punjab, slight in Burma and Southern India and brisk over the intervening region. Pressure was below the normal throughout India and Burma by amounts ranging from ·04″ in Burma and Southern India to ·13″ in the North-West Punjab. Pressure was unusually uniform over the greater part of the interior of India, and winds were light and unsteady. Winds had shifted to north-westerly directions in South Madras, and caused a very rapid decrease of humidity. Skies had clouded over in Kashmir and the Punjab due to the formation of a slight disturbance in the North Punjab and Chitral. Skies were clearing in Southern India and Ceylon. Practically no rain or snow had fallen at any of the meteorological stations. Temperature had increased to a moderate extent in North-Eastern India, but was still in moderate to considerable defect. Temperature had decreased briskly in Southern India and also in Gujarat and Baluchistan, and averaged 2° to 3° below the normal. The variations of temperature from the normal were small and unimportant in other districts.

Wednesday, January 25th.—Pressure had increased slightly in Bengal, Assam and Upper Burma and briskly in the North-West Punjab. Pressure was steady in Lower and Central Burma and Baluchistan, and had fallen over the remainder of the country—briskly in Rajputana and Central India. Pressure was in moderate excess in Baluchistan and more or less in defect in India and Burma. The deficiency was least in amount in East and North Bengal and greatest in Rajputana, Central India and the central and northern districts of the Central Provinces, where it was slightly upwards of a tenth of an inch. Winds had shifted to southerly directions in Bengal and easterly directions in the Gangetic Plain. Humidity had increased very rapidly in Gujarat and the hill districts of Upper India, and decreased in Sind, Rajputana, the Central Provinces and the Peninsula. Skies had cleared in the North and West Punjab, but were overcast in Kashmir and heavily clouded in the South-East Punjab, the North-Western Provinces and East Rajputana. Light snow had fallen in Kashmir and probably also in Chitral. Temperature had increased rapidly in Orissa, Sind and Rajputana and briskly in Bengal, Gujarat and Berar. The temperature conditions were now much less abnormal than for some days past. The mean temperature of the past day was in moderate defect in Bengal, Assam, Bihar, Mysore and Madras and in moderate excess in Berar, Sind and Rajputana.

Thursday, January 26th.—Pressure had fallen slightly in Baluchistan and increased slightly to briskly in North-Western India, and was now practically normal over the whole of that area. Pressure had increased briskly to rapidly in Kashmir, and the feeble disturbance in that area on the previous day had passed away. Pressure had decreased slightly to briskly in North-Eastern India, and was nearly an eighth of an inch in defect of the normal in Chota Nagpur. The pressure changes were small and irregular in the Peninsula, and the pressure conditions remained unchanged in that area. Winds from between south and east prevailed in Bengal, Bihar and Chota Nagpur, and skies were clouding over in that area. Skies were lightly clouded in Southern India, and were clear in the remainder of India and Burma. Light snow had fallen in Kashmir and a local shower at Mymensingh. Temperature had decreased slightly in the southern half of the Peninsula, and averaged 3° below the normal in Mysore and Madras during the previous 24 hours due almost solely to much lower night temperature than usual. Temperature had again increased briskly in North-Eastern India, and was now approximately normal over nearly the whole of Central India, the Central Provinces and Upper India. It was 2° in defect of the normal in Burma, Assam and the North-Western Provinces and 5° below in Baluchistan.

Friday, January 27th.—Pressure had recovered briskly over the greater part of Northern and Central India and Upper Burma and slightly in the Peninsula and Baluchistan. Pressure differed to no important extent from the normal over by far the greater part of the country. It was in moderate to considerable excess in Upper Burma and Assam and in moderate defect in Berar and the Central Provinces. Winds were shifting back to northerly directions in Bengal. Humidity had increased generally in India and fallen in Baluchistan. The air was very dry in Berar, Gujarat and the West Punjab. The lowest humidity recorded at 8 A.M. in that area was 20 per cent. at Deesa and Bhavnagar-Para. Skies were heavily clouded in Baluchistan and Kashmir and partially clouded in North-Western and Central India. Local thundershowers had occurred in Bengal, but skies were now clearing in that area. A brisk to rapid increase of temperature had occurred in Chota Nagpur, Bihar and Bengal, and the mean temperature of the previous 24 hours was 5° above the normal in Chota Nagpur, 3° in Orissa and 2° in Bengal and Bihar. Temperature continued in moderate to considerable defect of the normal in Mysore and Madras. Temperature was practically normal in North-Western and Central India and the Deccan. The diurnal range of temperature was, however, unusually large in the Punjab, where the day temperature averaged 4°·3 above the normal and the night temperature 4°·4 below it.

Saturday, January 28th.—The barometric changes of the previous 24 hours were generally small in amount, and produced no important change in the pressure conditions prevailing on the previous day. Winds continued light and unsteady in Northern India. Winds were much below their normal strength in Madras and Mysore. A further slight decrease of humidity had occurred in Gujarat and Upper Sind, and the air was now unusually dry in that area. The percentage of humidity at 8 A.M. was only 18 at Bhavnagar-Para and 28 at Bhuj. There was much cloud in Baluchistan, North-Eastern India and South Madras. No rain had fallen anywhere in the Indian area beyond a light shower at Colombo. Temperature was in moderate to considerable excess in Orissa, Chota Nagpur, Rajputana, Central India and Berar and 3° in defect in the West Coast and Bihar. Elsewhere the variations from the normal were small and of no significance.

Temperature.—The mean temperature conditions of the week varied to a much less extent from the normal than during the preceding two weeks. The chief feature was a persistent moderate deficiency of temperature in Madras due chiefly to low night temperature accompanying the prevalence of dry land winds. Another important feature was the unusually large diurnal range of temperature in North-Western India due to the day temperature being in considerable excess and the night temperature in defect by nearly equal amounts. Thus the diurnal range averaged 11° above the normal in the Punjab and Rajputana on the 23rd and 11½° above in Sind, and 9° above in the North-Western Provinces on the 24th. Temperature was very low in the Bengal Presidency during the first three days of the week, but increased rapidly on the 25th and 26th and was more or less above the normal on the last two days. Temperature was in considerable defect of the normal in Berar and the Central Provinces at the commencement of the week, but rose rapidly during the next two days and was from 1° to 3° above the normal during the remainder of the week. Temperature differed but little from the normal throughout the week in Burma. On the mean of the whole week temperature was normal over the whole of the Indian area, with the exception of Assam, Bengal, Bihar and Madras, where it was in moderate defect.

The following statement gives the variations of the mean daily temperature from the normal for the 20 divisions of the Empire on each day of the week and for the whole week:—

Rainfall.—Light snow fell in Kashmir and Chitral on the 25th and 26th due to a slight and ill-defined disturbance in the North Punjab and light to moderate showers in Assam, Deltaic, East and Central Bengal, Chota Nagpur and South Bihar between the 26th and 28th due to the advance eastwards of a low pressure wave across that area. The total amounts in these areas were, however, small and less than the normal, except in the case of East and Central Bengal and Assam (Surma) which divisions obtained from two to three times the normal fall of the week. Weather was unusually fine and dry over the remainder of the Indian area throughout the week, except locally in the extreme south of Madras, where light showers were received on the 22nd and 23rd from intensified north-east winds. Hence the chief feature of the weather of the week was the absence of cold weather storms and the consequent prevalence of quiet settled weather over Baluchistan, North-Western and Central India, which areas receive light to moderate rain during the period in years of ordinary meteorological conditions.

During the period 1st to 28th January less rain than usual has fallen over by far the greater part of the country, the only exceptions being Bengal, Chota Nagpur, Bihar, Oudh and the east of the North-Western Provinces. The deficiency is, on the whole, most marked in Baluchistan and the Punjab, which usually obtain moderate to heavy rain, but where practically or absolutely no rain has fallen since the beginning of January.

HEM RAJ,

Offg. Asst. Meteorological Reporter to the Government of India.

SIMLA, the 2nd February 1899.

T. W. HOLDERNESS,

Secretary to the Government of India.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Weekly Report on the state of the Season and Prospects of the Crops.

Madras.—For week ending 4th February.—Some rain fell in the southern part of Tinnevelly and light scattered showers in the remaining parts of the southern districts and Circars. The water-supply is generally sufficient. Some sowings under irrigation are being made. The standing crops are in good condition except in parts of the Deccan. The harvest outturn is fair to normal. Pasturage is scarce, but fodder is generally sufficient. The condition of cattle is normal. Prices are falling generally.

Bombay.—For week ending 8th February.—Slight rain fell in two talukas of the Upper Sind Frontier. The standing crops have been damaged by frost in parts of three districts of Sind, by white ants in one taluka of Thar and Parkar, and by rats in one taluka of Bijapur. Jowari (Sorghum vulgare) has been injured by drought in one taluka of Poona, and wheat in one taluka of Dharwar by excessive wind. Reaping of the late crops is progressing in twelve and preparations for next season in six districts. Cotton-picking continues in parts of Gujarat and Kathiawar. Fodder is sufficient except in parts of Sind. Agricultural stock are generally healthy. Prices have risen in five and have fallen in the same number of districts.

Bengal.—For week ending 6th February.—There was rain during the week in various parts of Bengal Proper and in some places in Bihar and Chota Nagpur. The general prospects of the crops are favourable, but some damage is reported to have been done by hail in Gaya, Monghyr, and the Sonthal Parganas. Some of the spring crops are being harvested, and sugarcane is being pressed. Poppy has come into flower. Spring rice is still being transplanted. Ploughing for autumn rice and jute is in progress. There is no want of fodder anywhere. Prices show a slight fall in some districts and a slight rise in others, otherwise they are fairly stationary.

North-Western Provinces and Oudh.—For week ending 8th February.—Showers of rain are reported from a few districts and hail in Muzaffarnagar and Aligarh, otherwise the weather has been clear. The standing crops are doing well, but more rain is said to be needed in parts. The damage done to crops by frost has been slight, except in a few districts. Irrigation and sugarcane pressing continue. Harvesting of peas has begun. Prospects are favourable. Supplies and fodder are sufficient. Prices are stationary or rising slightly.

Punjab.—For week ending 8th February.—Rain has fallen in all districts, except Hissar, Delhi, Ferozepore and Sialkote. More rain is urgently needed. Sugarcane pressing still continues in some districts. Watering of the spring and ploughing for and sowings of the extra spring crops are in progress. The standing crops are generally in fair condition: they have benefited by the recent rain in most districts. Irrigated crops are flourishing, but those on dry land are still suffering from an insufficient rainfall. Crops are being damaged by rats in parts of Umballa and by caterpillars and rust in parts of Ferozepore. Cattle are generally in good condition. Fodder is scarce in Delhi, Umballa, Shahpur and Dera Ismail Khan, insufficient in Lahore but ample elsewhere. Prices, especially of wheat, are unchanged in Hissar, Delhi, Multan and Amritsar: they have fallen in Dera Ismail Khan, and have risen elsewhere on account of the continuous dry weather. Prices have again generally shown a tendency to rise, but the late rainfall, though light, may result in a check. Wheat is selling from $15\frac{1}{8}$ to 20, gram 21 to 24, barley 32, bulrush millet 20 to 24, maize 24 to 32, great millet 25 and rice 13 to 14 seers per rupee.

Central Provinces.—For week ending 7th February.—The weather is occasionally cloudy and cold in Betul, Chhindwara, Wardha and Bilaspur, but is warmer than usual elsewhere. Slight showers of rain fell in Mandla, Seoni, Bilaspur and Balaghat, and are said to have been beneficial in Mandla. The prospects of the winter crops are fair to good in all districts except in Saugor and parts of Damoh and Chanda. The spring crops have suffered from want of rain in Raipur. Crops have been damaged extensively through the recent frost in Saugor and through frost and cloudy weather in Bhandara. The reaping and threshing of the autumn crops have almost been completed and the pressing of sugarcane continues. The reaping of the winter crops has begun in some districts. Employment for agricultural labour is scarce in Saugor and Damoh. The cheapest prices are wheat 20, gram 30, rice 26 and juar 29 seers per rupee. The dearest prices are wheat $11\frac{3}{4}$, gram $14\frac{1}{2}$, rice $11\frac{7}{8}$, and juar $19\frac{15}{16}$ seers per rupee. Wheat continues to sell above the normal rate in the south, east and west of the provinces, but the price of gram is still low in the northern districts.

Burma.—For week ending 4th February.—In Lower Burma agricultural operations have been nearly completed: the outturn being generally less favourable than was anticipated. In Upper Burma cultivation of the dry weather paddy and miscellaneous crops continues, island crops are being reaped in places and standing crops are generally in good condition. The price of paddy has risen slightly in Akyab, Rangoon, Prome, Thongwa and Thaton, and fallen slightly in Amherst and Minbu. Prices are stationary elsewhere.

Assam.—For week ending 7th February.—Slight rain fell in Sylhet and the Naga Hills. It has benefited the young tea plants and nurseries in the former district. Harvesting of the late rice crop is finished, the outturn being generally good. Gathering of mustard and pulses, pruning of tea and pressing of sugarcane are in progress. Prospects of the sugarcane, mustard and pulse crops are generally good. Ploughing for early rice has commenced. Fodder is scarce in Cachar and the Naga, Khasi and Jaintia Hills. Water is insufficient in the Khasi and Jaintia Hills. Prices—common rice, Silchar 15 to $15\frac{1}{4}$, Sylhet, Dhubri and Gauhati 16, Tezpur, Sibsagar and Dibrugarh 13, and Nowgong 14 seers per rupee.

Mysore and Coorg.—For week ending 8th February.—MYSORE: The standing crops are in good condition. Ragi (Eleusine coracana) has been harvested in Bangalore, Kolar and Chittaldroog. Prices have fallen in Bangalore, Kolar, Tumkur, Mysore and Kadur.

COORG: The threshing of rice and coffee-picking continue. Water and fodder for cattle are sufficient. Prices of food-grains are stationary.

Berar and Hyderabad.—For week ending 8th February.—BERAR: The weather is cool. Harvesting of the winter crops has commenced. Ploughing continues in five districts. Fodder and water are inadequate in parts of Akola, Amraoti and Wun. Prices are almost stationary.

HYDERABAD: No rain fell during the week. The spring harvest is progressing. Rats have harmed jawari and the wheat crop in a few talukas. The sowing of winter rice continues. Prices are stationary. Prices—wheat 9, coarse rice $10\frac{3}{4}$ and jawari $21\frac{1}{4}$ seers per current sicca rupee.

Central India.—For week ending 8th February.—Slight rain fell in the Baghelkhand Agency during the week. Agricultural operations have been completed in Bundelkhand and are in progress elsewhere. The standing crops are in fairly good condition, though they have been slightly damaged by frost throughout Central India. Agricultural stock and pasturage are in good condition. Prices are above normal in Bundelkhand, but normal elsewhere. The condition of opium in Bhopal, Malwa and Bhopawar is good.

Rajputana.—For week ending 6th February.—No rain fell during the week. Irrigation of crops continues. The state of the crops is generally good, but they have been slightly damaged by frost in a few villages of Ajmere. Cattle are generally in good condition. Distress is spreading and increasing in Merwara. Fodder is scarce in parts of Sirohi, Marwar, Kherwara, Meywar, Haraoti, Ajmere, Jeypore and Bikanir. Prices are rising in Ulwar and Jhallawar, fluctuating in Kotah, falling in Meywar, and are steady elsewhere. Emigration from the distressed Ajmere villages and from Merwara continues: 71 persons emigrated during the week. The total emigration from Merwara up to date amounts to 3,963 persons. The numbers employed on relief works were—387 in Ajmere, 3,273 in Merwara and 1,057 in Marwar. Prices—Ajmere 20, Beawar 22 and Marwar 14½ seers per rupee.

Kashmir.—For week ending 7th February.—The weather is snowy and cloudy. Prices continue below normal. The price of rice is 27 seers per rupee.

JAMMU PROVINCE :—For week ending 8th February.—Good rain fell during the week. The condition of the standing crops is generally fair. Fodder is sufficient. Prices are generally stationary: wheat selling at 18 and maize 24 seers per rupee.

Nepal.—For week ending 4th February.—No rain fell during the week. Prospects of the wheat crop are good. The price of rice is 9 seers per rupee.

INLAND STEAM-VESSELS ACT (1884) AMENDMENT BILL.

The Hon'ble SIR JAMES WESTLAND presented the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to further amend the Inland Steam-vessels Act, 1884. He said :—" The Select Committee have proposed to amend the Bill in two points, both of which I noticed when I moved the appointment of the Select Committee. The first is the provision of authority to Local Governments to prescribe for the carriage and exhibition of lights by vessels on inland waters on which steam-vessels ply. These vessels are obviously a source of danger if of any size and if they do not carry proper lights, and it is desirable to give power to compel them to use proper lights. The other point is that the declaration or certificates of competency of service which are given by one Local Government are to be current throughout India even in the case of other Local Governments. It will be observed that this provision is not made with reference to certificates of survey which are given to vessels. The certificates of survey given to vessels have reference to the particular route, or the particular trade in which they are employed, and it would not be advisable to declare, for example, that a vessel which had passed a survey for purpose of traffic in the Irrawaddy should be competent without further special examination to ply, say, on the Brahmaputra."

CURRENCY-NOTES FORGERY BILL.

The Hon'ble SIR JAMES WESTLAND moved that the Bill to amend the law relating to the forgery of currency-notes and bank-notes be referred to a Select Committee consisting of the Hon'ble Mr. Chalmers, the Hon'ble Mr. Rivaz, the Hon'ble Mr. LaTouche, the Hon'ble Mr. Mehta and the mover. He said :—" This is for the most part a purely legal amendment ; that is to say, the existing penal provisions regarding the forging of currency-notes and bank-notes are not sufficient protection to the public. There is a special law in England relating to this class of offence, and we have adopted that law for India, the Bill which is now before the Council being practically based upon the English Statute."

The motion was put and agreed to.

INDIAN EVIDENCE BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS moved that the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to further amend the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, be taken into consideration. He said :—" In making this motion I need say but very little. As Hon'ble Members are aware, the system of authenticating documents and identifying persons by means of what are known as finger-impressions is now acknowledged to be the most trustworthy system we at present possess. Till very recently it was almost impossible to employ the system for identifying persons because of the difficulty of classifying or indexing the impressions for the purpose of reference. This difficulty has now been overcome by the laborious ingenuity of Mr. Henry, the Inspector General of Police in Bengal. The Government therefore now think that the time has come for giving legislative recognition to the new system and they propose to give the Courts the same powers of taking evidence concerning, and of dealing with, finger-impressions, as they have in the case of handwriting."

The Hon'ble MR. TOYNBEE said :—" Your Excellency, I feel some doubt as to whether the words 'finger-impressions,' used in this Bill, will be legally held to include 'thumb-impressions.' The history of the introduction of the use of finger and thumb impressions into the Registration Department in Lower Bengal leads me to think that it would have been safer to have used the words 'digital impressions,' or to have added to section 3 of the Indian Evidence Act, I of 1872, the five words: 'finger-impressions include thumb-impressions.' The system of taking finger-prints was first tried in Bengal by Sir William Herschell when he was Magistrate and Collector of the Hooghly District. After his retirement from the service, he recorded a note on the subject, and, in 1892, sent it from Oxford to the Inspector General of Registration, who in April, 1893, recommended to the Government of Bengal the introduction of Sir William Herschell's system into the Registration Offices in Calcutta and in the districts of Hooghly and the 24-Parganas. In May, 1893, Government accepted the above recommendations and directed that every executant of a registered deed should make an impression of his first and third fingers, both on the deed itself and also in a register to be kept for the purpose. In March, 1894, the Inspector General of Registration recommended that an impression of the right thumb should be taken, instead of impressions of the first and third fingers. Government approved of this proposed change in April of the same year; but in the following April they substituted the left for the right thumb, and, from that date to this, only the impressions of the left thumb are used in the Registration Department. It seems to me, therefore, that if any Criminal Court should hold, in the absence of any definition of the words 'finger-impressions', that they do not include 'thumb-impressions,' there is considerable risk of a failure of justice."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS said:—"The point raised by the Hon'ble Mr. Toynbee was, I may say suggested to the Select Committee from one or two quarters. We considered it and we came to the conclusion that such an objection surely could not be entertained by any Court. These impressions, whether finger-impressions or thumb-impressions, are popularly known as 'finger-impressions.' They certainly are technically known as 'finger-impressions,' and if you leave aside both the popular name and the technical name and look at the matter etymologically you still find that 'finger' includes 'thumb.' I took the trouble of going to the latest and most authoritative English Dictionary—Murray's Dictionary of the English language—and on looking at the term 'finger' I found the entry as follows:—

'Finger: one of the five terminal members of the hand; in a restricted sense, one of the four excluding the thumb.'

"But the primary meaning is, one of the five members of the hand, that is to say, primarily the term 'finger' includes 'thumb' according to the dictionary. I think, if I remember rightly, that in Oriental languages the same rule prevails: the thumb is commonly known as the big finger. Of course I may be wrong, and it is a matter as to which I should certainly follow the opinion of the Council. It seemed to us in the Select Committee that it would be almost as gratuitous to put in an explanation that 'finger' includes 'thumb' as it would be to put in an explanation that 'toe' includes 'great toe.' If Hon'ble Members here, who have very much more experience of Indian Courts than I have, think that a Court could go wrong, it would be better, of course, to provide against an error of interpretation. I do not think that in England the slightest difficulty would arise. Perhaps the discussion which has taken place in the Council to-day may be sufficient to call attention to the matter, but I am entirely in the hands of the Council."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS moved that the Bill, as amended, be passed.

The motion was put and agreed to.

GLANDERS AND FARCY BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. RIVAZ moved that the Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to Glanders and Farcy be referred to a Select Committee consisting of the Hon'ble Mr. Chalmers, the Hon'ble Major-General Sir Edwin Collen, the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Pandit Suraj Kaul, the Hon'ble Mr. Spence and the mover.

The motion was put and agreed to.

CARRIERS BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS moved that the Bill to amend the law relating to Carriers be referred to a Select Committee consisting of the Hon'ble

Mr. Rivaz, the Hon'ble Mr. Allan Arthur, the Hon'ble Mr. Smeaton, the Hon'ble Maharaja Bahadur of Darbhanga and the mover.

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Council adjourned to Friday, the 17th February, 1899.

No. 438-I.A.—Whereas the Governor-General in Council has power and jurisdiction within the Cantonment of Baroda:

In exercise of this jurisdiction and of the powers conferred by sections 4 and 5 of the Foreign Jurisdiction and Extradition Act, 1879 (XXI of 1879), and of all other powers enabling him in this behalf, the Governor-General in Council is pleased to issue the following orders:—

PART I.

The provisions, so far as they may be suitable, and as amended for the time being by subsequent enactments of the Acts mentioned below, are hereby declared to apply to the Cantonment of Baroda:—

The Judical Officers' Protection Act, 1850 (XVIII of 1850).

The Indian Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860).

The Indian Evidence Act, 1872 (I of 1872).

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898 (Act V of 1898).

PART II.

For the purposes of the exercise of criminal jurisdiction within the Cantonment of Baroda, the following arrangements shall be made:—

(1) The Cantonment Magistrate of Baroda shall exercise the powers of a Magistrate of the first class, as described in the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898;

(2) The First Assistant to the Agent to the Governor-General at Baroda shall exercise the powers of a District Magistrate and those of a Court of Session as described in the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898;

(3) The Agent to the Governor-General at Baroda shall exercise the powers of a Court of Session and those of a High Court, respectively, as described in the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, in respect of all offences over which the jurisdiction of a Magistrate and of a Court of Session, respectively, is exercised by the First Assistant: Provided that—

(a) the First Assistant shall not commit any accused person for trial to the Agent to the Governor-General acting as a Court of Session; and

(b) in cases in which the Code requires the sentence of a Court of Session to be confirmed by the High Court, the sentence shall be referred for confirmation to the Governor-General in Council instead of to the Agent to the Governor-General;

(4) In exercise of the jurisdiction of a Court of Session conferred on him by these orders, the First Assistant to the Agent to the Governor-General may take cognizance of any offence, as a Court of original criminal jurisdiction, without the accused person being committed to him by a Magistrate, and shall, when so taking cognizance of any offence, follow the procedure laid down by the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, for the trial of warrant cases by Magistrates;

(5) A trial before the First Assistant to the Agent to the Governor-General of an accused person who has been committed by a Magistrate may be without jury or aid of assessors;

(6) This part of these orders applies to all proceedings, except—

(a) proceedings against European British subjects or persons jointly charged with European British subjects; and

(b) proceedings pending at the date of this notification, which should be carried on as if this notification had not been issued;

(7) The Notification of the Government of India in the Foreign Department, No. 1163-I., dated the 23rd March, 1888, is hereby cancelled.

No. 439-I. A.—In exercise of the powers conferred by sections 4 and 5 of the Foreign Jurisdiction and Extradition Act, 1879 (XXI of 1879), and of all other powers enabling him in this behalf, the Governor-General in Council is pleased to direct that in section 7 of the Cantonments Act, 1889 (XIII of 1889), as applied to the Cantonment of Baroda by the Notification of the Government of India in the Foreign Department, No. 1977-I., dated the 8th May, 1891, for the words "the powers of a District Magistrate and such other powers" the words "such powers" shall be substituted.

Rules under the Indian Stamp Act, 1899.

Chapter I.

Preliminary.

Definition.

1. In these rules, the expression "the Act" shall mean the Indian Stamp Act, 1899.

Kinds of stamps.

2. There shall be two kinds of stamps for indicating the payment of duty on instruments chargeable with duty under the Act, namely:—

(a) impressed stamps, and

Chapter II.

Of Impressed Stamps.

Hundis.

3. (1) Hundis, other than hundis which may be stamped with an adhesive stamp under section 11 of the Act, shall be written as follows, namely:—

(a) A hundi payable otherwise than on demand, but not at more than one year after date or sight, and for an amount not exceeding rupees thirty thousand in value, shall be written on paper on which the necessary stamp bearing the word "hundi" has been engraved or embossed.

(b) A hundi for an amount exceeding rupees thirty thousand in value, or payable at more than one year after date or sight, shall be written on paper, supplied for sale by the Government, to which a label has been affixed by the Superintendent of Stamps at Calcutta, Madras, Bombay or Lahore, and impressed by such officer in the manner hereinafter prescribed by rule 10.

(2) Every sheet of such paper shall be of a size not less than 8⅜ × 5½ inches, and no plain paper shall be joined to it.

(3) The provisions of sub-section (1) of rule 6 shall apply also in the case of hundis.

Promissory notes and bills of exchange.

4. A promissory note or bill of exchange shall, except as provided by section 11 of the Act and by these rules, be written on paper on which the necessary stamp, with or without the word "Hundi," has been engraved or embossed.

Other instruments.

5. Every other instrument chargeable with duty shall, except as provided by section 11 of the Act, be written on paper, on which the necessary stamp, not bearing the word "Hundi," has been engraved or embossed.

Provision where single sheet of paper is insufficient.

6. (1) Where two or more sheets of paper on which stamps are engraved or embossed, are used to make up the amount of duty chargeable in respect of any instrument, a portion of such instrument shall be written on each sheet so used.

(2) Where a single sheet of paper, not being paper bearing an impressed hundi-stamp, is found insufficient to admit of the entire instrument being written on the side of the paper which bears the stamp, so much plain paper may be subjoined thereto as may be necessary for the complete writing of such instrument:

Provided that in every such case the side of the sheet which bears the stamp, shall be covered by a substantial part of the instrument before any part of the latter is written on the plain paper joined to such sheet.

One-anna impressed stamps.

7. The duty payable on any instrument which is chargeable with a duty of one anna under the Act, may be denoted by a coloured impression marked on a skeleton form of such instrument by the Superintendent of Stamps at Calcutta, Bombay, Madras, or Lahore, the Commissioner of Stamps at Allahabad, or the Sub-Registrar of Deeds at Rangoon.

"The proper officer."

8. The following officers are empowered to affix and impress labels, and each of them shall be deemed to be "the proper officer" for the purposes of the Act and of these rules :—

(a) the Collectors of Calcutta and Karachi, and the Huzur Deputy Collector, Karachi, when the Collector is absent from head-quarters;

(b) the Collectors of Godavari, Tinnevelly, Malabar, and South Canara, and the Treasury Deputy Collectors of those districts when the Collectors are absent from head-quarters;

(c) the Sub-Registrar of Deeds at Rangoon; the Treasury Officers, Moulmein, Akyab, and Bassein;

(d) the Deputy Commissioner of Kamrup (at Gauhati), and the senior Assistant Commissioner present when the Deputy Commissioner is absent from head-quarters;

(e) the Superintendents of Stamps at Madras, Bombay, and Lahore;

(f) the Commissioner of Stamps, North-Western Provinces and Oudh; and

(g) the Superintendent of Stamps (Political Resident), Aden.

Affixing and impressing of labels by proper officer permissible in certain cases.

9. (1) Labels may be affixed and impressed by the proper officer in the case of any of the instruments mentioned in Appendix A, and of the counterparts thereof.

(2) Labels may likewise be affixed and impressed by the proper officer in the case of any of the instruments mentioned in Appendix B, when written in any European language, and accompanied, if the language is not English, by a translation into English.

Mode of affixing and impressing labels.

10. (1) The proper officer shall, upon any such instrument as is referred to in rule 9 being brought to him before it is executed, and upon application being made to him for that purpose, affix thereto a label or labels of such value as the applicant may desire and pay for, and impress such label or labels by means of a stamping-machine, and also stamp or write on the face of the label or labels the date of impressing the same before returning the instrument to the applicant. In the case of instruments written on parchment, the labels shall be further secured by means of metallic eyelets.

(2) On affixing any label or labels under this rule, the proper officer shall, where the duty amounts to rupees five or upwards, write on the face of the label or labels his initials, and, where the duty amounts to rupees twenty or upwards, shall also attach his usual signature to the instrument immediately under the label or labels.

(3) In Calcutta, the Deputy Collector and the Superintendent of the Stamp Department of the Collector's Office; in Lahore in the absence of the Superintendent of Stamps, the Superintendent of his office; and, generally, any principal assistant of the proper officer, if empowered by the Local Government in this behalf, may discharge the functions of the proper officer under sub-section (2) of this rule.

11. (1) Instruments (other than instruments which, under section 11 of the Act, may be stamped with adhesive stamps) executed out of British India and requiring to be stamped after their receipt in British India shall be stamped with impressed labels.

Certain instruments to be stamped with impressed labels.

(2) Where any such instrument as aforesaid is taken to the Collector under section 18, sub-section (2), of the Act, the Collector, unless he is himself the proper officer, shall send the instrument to the proper officer, remitting the amount of duty paid in respect thereof; and the proper officer shall stamp the instrument in the manner prescribed by rule 10 and return it to the Collector for delivery to the person by whom it was produced.

CHAPTER III.

Of Adhesive Stamps.

12. Bills of exchange payable otherwise than on demand and drawn in sets, when the amount of duty does not exceed one anna for each part of the set, may be stamped with adhesive stamps.

Bills of exchange.

13. When any instrument of transfer of shares in a Company or Association is written on a sheet of paper on which the necessary stamp is engraved or embossed, and the value of the stamp so engraved or embossed is subsequently, in consequence of a rise in the market value of such shares, found to fall short of the amount of duty chargeable under Article No. 62 (a) of Schedule I to the Act, one or more adhesive stamps bearing the words "Share Transfer," as hereinafter prescribed, may be used to make up the amount required.

Supply of deficient duty on transfer of share.

14. Except as otherwise provided by these rules, the adhesive stamp used to denote the duty of one anna shall bear the words "One Anna."

One-anna adhesive stamp.

15. The following instruments, when stamped with adhesive stamps, shall be stamped in the manner hereinafter prescribed, that is to say:—

Special adhesive stamps to be used in certain cases.

(a) Bills of exchange, cheques, and promissory notes drawn or made out of British India and chargeable with a duty of more than one anna, shall be stamped with adhesive stamps bearing the words "Foreign Bill."

(b) Transfers of shares of Public Companies and Associations shall be stamped with adhesive stamps bearing the words "Share Transfer."

(c) An entry as an advocate, vakil or attorney on the roll of any High Court shall be stamped with an adhesive stamp bearing the word "Advocate," "Vakil" or "Attorney." Such stamp shall be affixed under the superintendence and responsibility of a gazetted officer of the High Court, who shall obtain the stamp from the Superintendent of Stamps and account to him for it. Such officer shall after affixing the stamp write on the face of it his usual signature with the date thereof before parting with the instrument.

(d) Notarial acts shall be stamped with adhesive foreign bill stamps bearing the word "Notarial."

(e) Copies or extracts, certified to be true copies, or extracts of baptismal, marriage or burial certificates, certified copies granted under the provisions of the Births, Deaths and Marriages Registration Act, 1886 (VI of 1886), and copies of maps or plans certified to be true copies, shall be stamped with adhesive Court-fee stamps.

CHAPTER IV.

Miscellaneous.

16. When an instrument bears a stamp of sufficient amount, but of improper description, the Collector may, on payment of the duty with which the same is chargeable, certify by endorsement on the instrument that it is duly stamped:

Provision for cases in which improper description of stamp is used.

Provided that if application is made within three months of the execution of the instrument, and the Collector is satisfied that the improper description of stamp was used solely because of the difficulty or inconvenience of procuring one of proper description, he may remit the further payment of duty prescribed in this rule.

17. The Collector may require any person claiming a refund or renewal under Chapter V of the Act, or his duly authorized agent, to make an oral deposition on oath or affirmation, or to file an affidavit, setting forth the circumstances under which the claim has arisen, and may also, if he thinks fit, call for the evidence of witnesses in support of the statement set forth in any such deposition or affidavit as aforesaid.

Evidence as to circumstances of claim to refund or renewal.

18. Where the Collector makes a refund under section 55 of the Act, he shall cancel the original debenture by writing on or across it the word "Cancelled". and his usual signature with the date thereof.

Mode of cancelling original debenture in case under section 55 of Act.

19. On the conviction of any offender under Chapter VII of the Act, the Collector may grant to any person who appears to him to have contributed thereto, a reward within a limit to be fixed by the Local Government.

Rewards.

NOTICES.

All communications relating to Act V (the Inventions and Designs Act) of 1888 should be addressed to the "Secretary to the Government of India, Department of Revenue and Agriculture (PATENTS BRANCH), CALCUTTA."

The office of the Secretary under the Act is open for the transaction of business from 11 A.M. to 4 P.M. on all days except Sundays and gazetted holidays.

The Government of India are advised that, as trade marks are not "designs" within the meaning of the Act, they cannot be registered under Part II.

The fees payable under the fourth and sixth schedules are now collected in cash and applicants are warned that they must be responsible for any delay in cashing cheques.

Copies of the weekly notifications, and of the quarterly lists, of applications and specifications filed in the Secretary's office are now on sale to the public at one anna and eight annas a copy, respectively.

Attention is requested to the rules made by the Government on the 10th October, 1895, in regard to the preparation of applications, specifications and drawings.

All applications made under the Inventions and Designs Act, V of 1888, will from this date (December 19th, 1896) lie in the visitor's room of the Patents Office for ten days from the date of the Gazette of India in which their filing may have been notified; or, if the tenth day is a holiday, till the evening of the office day next following.

At the time of delivering or sending an application for leave to file a specification, the applicant shall cause a duplicate copy of the application to be delivered or sent therewith to the Secretary.

G. W. FORREST,

Secy. under the Inventions and Designs Act, 1888.

THE INDIAN LAW REPORTS.

PUBLISHED UNDER AUTHORITY.

The Indian Law Reports, published under the authority of the Governor-General in Council, appear in monthly parts, published as soon as possible after the first of each month, at Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, and Allahabad, and comprise four series,—one for the Calcutta High Court, a second for the Madras High Court, a third for the Bombay High Court, and a fourth for the Allahabad High Court. The cases heard by the Privy Council on appeal from each High Court are reported in the series for that High Court. Cases heard by the Privy Council on appeal from Provinces in India not subject to any High Court are reported in the Calcutta Series.

The Calcutta Series is distributed by the Bengal Secretariat Book Depot, and the Madras, Bombay, and Allahabad Series are distributed direct from Madras, Bombay, and Allahabad respectively.

In supersession of the previous advertisements, on and from the 1st January, 1889, the terms of subscription and sale will be as follows for current issues, as well as for back numbers of the Reports from 1870:—

PART IV.

Acts of the Governor General's Council assented to by the Governor General.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Act of the Governor General of India in Council received the assent of His Excellency the Governor General on the 17th February, 1899, and is hereby promulgated for general information:—

ACT No. VI OF 1899.

An Act to amend the Indian Contract Act, 1872.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the Indian Contract Act, 1872; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Short title, commencement and application.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Indian Contract Act Amendment Act, 1899.

(2) It shall come into force on the first day of May, 1899; and

(3) It shall apply to every contract in respect of which any suit is instituted, or which is put in issue in any suit, after the commencement of this Act.

Substitution of new section for section 16, Act IX, 1872.

2. Section 16 of the Indian Contract Act, 1872, is hereby repealed, and the following is substituted therefor, namely:—

"Undue influence" defined.

"16. (1) A contract is said to be induced by "undue influence" where the relations subsisting between the parties are such that one of the parties is in a position to dominate the will of the other and uses that position to obtain an unfair advantage over the other.

(2) In particular and without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing principle, a person is deemed to be in a position to dominate the will of another—

(a) where he holds a real or apparent authority over the other, or where he stands in a fiduciary relation to the other; or

(b) where he makes a contract with a person whose mental capacity is temporarily or permanently affected by reason of age, illness, or mental or bodily distress.

(3) Where a person who is in a position to dominate the will of another, enters into a contract with him, and the transaction appears, on the face of it or on the evidence adduced, to be unconscionable, the burden of proving that such contract was not induced by undue influence shall lie upon the person in a position to dominate the will of the other.

Nothing in this sub-section shall affect the provisions of section 111 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872.

Illustrations.

(a) A having advanced money to his son, B, during his minority, upon B's coming of age obtains, by misuse of parental influence, a bond from B for a greater amount than the sum due in respect of the advance. A employs undue influence.

(b) A, a man enfeebled by disease or age, is induced, by B's influence over him as his medical attendant, to agree to pay B an unreasonable sum for his professional services. B employs undue influence.

(c) A, being in debt to B, the money-lender of his village, contracts a fresh loan on terms which appear to be unconscionable. It lies on B to prove that the contract was not induced by undue influence.

(d) A applies to a banker for a loan at a time when there is stringency in the money market. The banker declines to make the loan except at an unusually high rate of interest. A accepts the loan on these terms. This is a transaction in the ordinary course of business, and the contract is not induced by undue influence.'

Amendment of section 19 of, and addition of new section to, Act IX, 1872.

3. In section 19 of the said Act the words "undue influence" are hereby repealed, and after the same section the following is inserted, namely:—

Power to set aside contract induced by undue influence.

"19A. When consent to an agreement is caused by undue influence, the agreement is a contract voidable at the option of the party whose consent was so caused.

Any such contract may be set aside either absolutely or, if the party who was entitled to avoid it has received any benefit thereunder, upon such terms and conditions as to the Court may seem just.

Illustrations.

(a) A's son has forged B's name to a promissory note. B, under threat of prosecuting A's son, obtains a bond from A for the amount of the forged note. If B sues on this bond, the Court may set the bond aside.

(b) A, a money-lender, advances Rs. 100 to B, an agriculturist, and, by undue influence, induces B to execute a bond for Rs. 200 with interest at 6 per cent. per month. The Court may set the bond aside, ordering B to repay the Rs. 100 with such interest as may seem just."

Amendment of section 74, Act IX, 1872.

4. (1) Section 74, paragraph one, of the said Act is hereby repealed and the following is substituted therefor, namely:—

Compensation for breach of contract where penalty stipulated for.

"74. When a contract has been broken, if a sum is named in the contract as the amount to be paid in case of such breach, or if the contract contains any other stipulation by way of penalty, the party complaining of the breach is entitled, whether or not actual damage or loss is proved to have been caused thereby, to receive from the party who has broken the contract reasonable compensation not exceeding the amount so named or, as the case may be, the penalty stipulated for.

Explanation.—A stipulation for increased interest from the date of default may be a stipulation by way of penalty."

(2) After illustration (c) to the said section the following illustrations shall be added, namely:—

"(d) A gives B a bond for the repayment of Rs. 1,000 with interest at 12 per cent. at the end of six months, with a stipulation that, in case of default, interest shall be payable at the rate of 75 per cent. from the date of default. This is a stipulation by way of penalty, and B is only entitled to recover from A such compensation as the Court considers reasonable.

(e) A, who owes money to B, a money-lender, undertakes to repay him by delivering to him 10 maunds of grain on a certain date, and stipulates that, in the event of his not delivering the stipulated amount by the stipulated date, he shall be liable to deliver 20 maunds. This is a stipulation by way of penalty, and B is only entitled to reasonable compensation in case of breach.

(f) A undertakes to repay B a loan of Rs. 1,000 by five equal monthly instalments, with a stipulation that, in default of payment of any instalment, the whole shall become due. This stipulation is not by way of penalty, and the contract may be enforced according to its terms.

(g) A borrows Rs. 100 from B and gives him a bond for Rs. 200 payable by five yearly instalments of Rs. 40, with a stipulation that, in default of payment of any instalment, the whole shall become due. This is a stipulation by way of penalty."

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

THE following Act of the Governor General of India in Council received the assent of His Excellency the Governor General on the 17th February, 1899, and is hereby promulgated for general information:—

ACT NO. VII OF 1899.

An Act to further amend the Inland Steam-vessels Act, 1884.

WHEREAS it is expedient to further amend the Inland Steam-vessels Act, 1884 (hereinafter referred to as "the said Act"); It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Short title and commencement.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Inland Steam-vessels Act (1884) Amendment Act, 1899; and

Addition of new section after section 29, Act VI, 1884.

2. After section 29 of the said Act the following section shall be added, namely:—

Certificates of competency or service to have effect throughout British India.

"29A. Every certificate of competency or service granted under this Act shall have effect throughout British India."

Addition to heading to Chapter VI, Act VI, 1884.

3. To the heading to Chapter VI of the said Act the words "AND FROM COLLISION" shall be added.

Addition of new section after section 50, Act VI, 1884.

4. After section 50 of the said Act the following section shall be added, namely:—

Power for Local Government to make rules for protection of inland steam-vessels from collision.

"50A (1) The Local Government may make rules for the protection of inland steam-vessels from collision.

(2) Rules under this section may regulate the following among other matters, that is to say:—

(a) the making of sound-signals;

(b) the carriage and exhibition of lights by inland steam-vessels;

(c) the carriage and exhibition of lights by other vessels on inland waters on which steam-vessels ply and which are specified in the rules;

(d) the steering rules to be observed; and

(e) the towing of vessels astern or alongside.

ACT No. VIII OF 1899.

THE INDIAN PETROLEUM ACT, 1899.

CONTENTS.

Preliminary.

An Act to consolidate and amend the law relating to the importation, possession and transport of petroleum and other substances.

WHEREAS it is expedient to consolidate and amend the law relating to the importation, possession and transport of petroleum and other substances; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Preliminary.

Short title, commencement and extent.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Indian Petroleum Act, 1899; and

(3) Sections 1 to 3, section 25, and all the provisions of this Act in so far as they relate to dangerous petroleum and the importation of petroleum, extend to the whole of British India. The rest of this Act extends only to such local areas as the Local Government may, by notification in the local official Gazette, direct.

Definitions.

2. In this Act, unless there is anything repugnant in the subject or context,—

(a) "petroleum" includes also—

(i) the liquids commonly known by the names of rock oil, Rangoon oil, Burma oil, paraffin oil, mineral oil, kerosine, petroline, gasoline, benzoline, benzine and benzol;

(ii) any inflammable liquid which is made from petroleum, coal, schist, shale, peat or any other bituminous substance, or from any product of petroleum; and

(iii) any liquid, or viscous mixture having in its composition any of the liquids aforesaid;

but it does not include any oil ordinarily used for lubricating purposes and having its flashing point at or above two hundred degrees of Fahrenheit's thermometer:

(b) "dangerous petroleum" means petroleum having its flashing point below seventy-six degrees of Fahrenheit's thermometer:

Provided that, when all or any of the petroleum on board a ship, or in the possession of a dealer, is declared by the master of the ship or the consignee of the cargo, or by the dealer, as the case may be, to be of one uniform quality, the petroleum shall not be deemed to be dangerous, if the samples selected from the petroleum have their flashing points, on an average, at or above seventy-three degrees of Fahrenheit's thermometer, and if no one of these samples has its flashing point below seventy degrees of that thermometer:

(c) to "import" means to bring into British India by sea or land:

(d) to "transport" means to remove within British India from one place to another:

(e) "prescribed" means prescribed by rules made under this Act: and

Matters supplemental to definitions.

3. (1) The "flashing point" of petroleum means the lowest temperature at which the petroleum yields a vapour which will furnish a momentary flash or flame when tested in accordance with the directions in the first schedule with an apparatus which has been stamped and certified as provided by this Act within a period of five years immediately preceding the date on which the apparatus is used for the testing, and after the corrections (if any) which the certificate declares are to be applied to the results of the testing, have been made.

(2) Notwithstanding anything in the definitions of "import" and "transport," the Local Government, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, may, by notification in the local official Gazette, declare—

(a) that petroleum imported into the Province from any part of British India, by sea or across intervening territory not being part of British India, shall, for all or any of the purposes of this Act, be deemed to be transported; and

(b) that petroleum transported into the Province from any place in British India shall, for all or any of those purposes, be deemed to be imported; and thereupon the provisions of this Act and of the rules made under this Act, with respect to transport and import, respectively, shall apply to petroleum so imported or transported.

Power to vary tests and prescribe new tests.

4. (1) The Governor General in Council may, by notification in the Gazette of India, alter or add to the first schedule by laying down new or varied tests and directions for preparing and using them; and, after the issue of any such notification as aforesaid, the reference in section 3, sub-section (1), to the first schedule shall be construed as referring to the said schedule as so altered or added to for the time being.

(2) The Governor General in Council may, in like manner, lay down special tests and issue special instructions in respect of the testing of any substance other than petroleum to which the whole or any portion of this Act may be applied in exercise of the power conferred by section 22, and for which the tests in the first schedule are unsuitable.

(3) The provisions of section 23 of the General Clauses Act, 1897, shall apply to notifications under this section as if they were rules or orders required to be made after previous publication.

Dangerous Petroleum.

Dangerous petroleum in quantities exceeding forty gallons.

5. (1) No quantity of dangerous petroleum exceeding forty gallons shall be imported or transported or kept by any one person or on the same premises, except under, and in accordance with the conditions (if any) of, a license from the Local Government granted as next hereinafter provided.

(2) Every application for such a license shall be in writing in the prescribed form, and shall contain the prescribed particulars.

Dangerous petroleum in quantities not exceeding forty gallons.

6. No quantity of dangerous petroleum equal to, or less than, forty gallons shall be kept or transported without a license :

Provided that nothing in this section shall apply in any case where the quantity of the petroleum kept by any one person or on the same premises, or transported, does not exceed three gallons, and the petroleum is placed in separate glass, stoneware or metal vessels, each of which contains not more than a pint and is securely stopped.

Vessels containing dangerous petroleum to be labelled.

7. Dangerous petroleum—

(a) which is imported and is kept at any place after seven days from the date of its importation, or

(b) which is transported, or

(c) which is sold or exposed for sale, shall be contained in vessels having attached thereto labels in conspicuous characters stating the description of the petroleum, with the addition of the words "highly inflammable" and with the addition,—

(d) in the case of a vessel kept, of the name and address of the consignee or owner;

(e) in the case of a vessel transported, of the name and address of the sender ; and,

(f) in the case of a vessel sold or exposed for sale, of the name and address of the vendor.

Petroleum generally.

Power for Governor General in Council to make rules.

8. (1) The Governor General in Council may make rules to carry out the purposes and objects of this Act.

(2) In particular and without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing power, such rules may provide for the granting of licenses to transport petroleum from any part of British India to any other part of British India in cases in which such licenses are by law required.

Power for Local Government to make rules.

9. (1) The Local Government, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, may make rules to regulate the importation of petroleum and the granting of licenses to possess or to transport petroleum within the Province in cases in which such licenses are by law required.

(2) In particular and without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing power, such rules may—

(a) determine the ports at which alone petroleum may be imported ;

(b) provide for ascertaining the quantity and description of any petroleum on board any ship ;

(c) determine the places at which, and the conditions on and subject to which, petroleum may be discharged into boats, landed, transhipped or stored ;

(d) provide for the selection by an officer appointed by the Local Government in this behalf, and for the delivery to him, either after or before petroleum has been landed, of samples of all petroleum landed or intended to be landed ;

(e) provide, in the case of each consignment which is stated to be of one uniform quality, for the number of samples to be selected, and for the averaging of the results of the testing of those samples ;

(f) provide, where the results of the testing of the samples raise a doubt as to the uniformity of the quality of the petroleum in any such consignment, for the division of the consignment into lots, and for the selection and testing of samples of each lot, and for the treatment of the lot in accordance with the results of the testing of those samples;

(g) fix fees for the sampling and testing of petroleum ;

(h) fix fees for the storage of petroleum unless any local authority is empowered in that behalf ;

(i) define, with respect to any petroleum produced within the Province, the limits of the places in which such petroleum is to be refined;

(j) provide for the testing at or near those places of petroleum so produced ;

(k) prevent the removal from those limits, otherwise than under the provisions of this Act applicable to dangerous petroleum, of petroleum so produced which has not satisfied the prescribed tests;

(l) prescribe the authority by which licenses to possess or to transport petroleum may be granted;

(m) fix the fee to be charged for any such license;

(n) limit the quantity of petroleum to be covered by any such license;

(o) prescribe the conditions which may be inserted in any such license;

(p) limit the time during which any such license is to continue in force;

(q) provide for the renewal of any such license;

(r) provide for the nature and situation of the premises in respect of which licenses to possess petroleum may be granted, the inspection of premises so licensed and the testing of petroleum found thereon; and

(s) prescribe the manner in which the petroleum covered by a license to transport is to be packed, the mode and time of its transit, the route by which it is to be taken, and its stoppage and inspection during transit.

Procedure after petroleum has been discharged or landed.

10. (1) Petroleum discharged into boats or landed in accordance with rules made under section 9, sub-section (2), shall not be removed from the boats or places in or at which it is stored until the samples selected therefrom in accordance with those rules have been tested by an officer appointed by the Local Government in this behalf and the officer has given a certificate that the petroleum is not dangerous petroleum.

(2) If the officer, after testing the samples, refuses to give the certificate in respect of any petroleum, the Local Government may permit the consignee, within a time to be fixed by the Local Government in this behalf,—

(a) to rectify the petroleum,

(b) to apply for a license to import the petroleum as dangerous petroleum, or

(c) to re-export the petroleum.

(3) If the consignee does not, within the time fixed under sub-section (2), avail himself of the permission granted under that sub-section, the petroleum may be disposed of as the Local Government may direct.

(4) Notwithstanding anything in the foregoing provisions of this section, the Local Government, in its discretion, may, where the officer has refused the certificate, direct that the petroleum be re-tested by another officer appointed by it in this behalf, and may, if that officer advises that the petroleum is not dangerous petroleum, authorize its removal from the boats or places in or at which it is stored.

Possession and transport of petroleum.

11. No quantity of petroleum exceeding five hundred gallons shall be kept by any one person or on the same premises, or shall be transported, except under, and in accordance with the conditions of, a license granted under this Act:

Provided that the Local Government may, by notification in the local official Gazette, exempt from the operation of this section petroleum when transported in such particular manner and under such particular conditions as may be set forth in the notification.

Power to inspect and require dealer to sell samples.

12. Any officer specially authorized in this behalf by the Local Government may require any dealer in petroleum to show him any place and any of the vessels in which any petroleum in his possession is stored or contained, to give him such assistance as he may require for examining the same, and to deliver to him samples of the petroleum on payment of the value of the samples.

Notice to be given when officer proposes to test samples.

13. When any such officer has, in exercise of the powers conferred by section 12, or by purchase, obtained a sample of petroleum in the possession of a dealer, he may give a notice in writing to the dealer informing him that he is about to test the sample, or cause it to be tested, at a time and place to be fixed in the notice, and that the dealer or his agent may be present at the testing.

Certificate as to result of testing.

14. On any such testing, if it appears to the officer or other person so testing that the petroleum from which the sample has been taken, is or is not dangerous petroleum, the officer or other person may certify the fact; and the certificate so given shall be receivable as evidence in any proceedings which may be taken under this Act against the dealer in whose possession the petroleum was found, and shall, until the contrary is proved, be proof of the fact stated therein; and a certified copy of the certificate shall be given, free of charge, to the dealer at his request.

Penalties.

Penalty for illegal importation, possession or transport of petroleum or for refusal to comply with section 12.

15. Whoever,—

(a) in contravention of this Act or of any of the rules thereunder, imports, possesses or transports any petroleum; or

(b) otherwise contravenes any such rules as aforesaid ; or

(c) breaks any condition contained in a license granted under this Act ; or, shall be punishable with imprisonment for a term which may extend to one month, or with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or with both.

Penalty for contravention of section 7.

16. Whoever keeps, sells or exposes for sale dangerous petroleum in vessels not labelled as prescribed by section 7 shall be punishable with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees.

Confiscation of petroleum.

17. In any case in which an offence under section 15, clause (a), clause (b) or clause (c), or section 16 has been committed, the convicting Magistrate may direct that—

(a) the petroleum in respect of which the offence has been committed, or, shall, together with the tins or other vessels in which it is contained, be confiscated.

(b) where the offender is importing or transporting, or is in possession of, any petroleum exceeding the quantity (if any) which he is permitted to import, transport or possess, as the case may be, the whole of the petroleum which he is importing or transporting or is in possession of,

Jurisdiction.

18. The criminal jurisdiction under this Act shall, in the Presidency-towns, be exercised by a Presidency Magistrate, and, elsewhere, by a Magistrate of the first class or (where specially empowered by the Local Government to try cases under this Act) a Magistrate of the second class.

Test-apparatus.

Model test-apparatus.

19. A model of the apparatus for testing petroleum under this Act shall be deposited in the office of the Chemical Examiner to Government, Calcutta, and be marked with the words "Model test-apparatus."

Verification of test-apparatus.

20. (1) The Chemical Examiner shall, on payment of the prescribed fee (if any), compare with the said model test-apparatus and verify every apparatus for testing petroleum which is submitted to him for the purpose.

(2) If any apparatus for testing petroleum, when compared and verified as provided by sub-section (1), is found correct, or correct subject to certain corrections to be applied to the results of the tests, the Chemical Examiner shall stamp the same with a special number and with the date of the verification, and shall further give a certificate in writing under his hand, in the prescribed form, to the effect that on the date aforesaid the apparatus was compared and verified by him and found to be correct, or correct subject to certain specified corrections to be applied to the results of the tests.

(3) A certificate granted under this section shall, until the contrary is proved, be proof of the matters stated therein.

(4) The Chemical Examiner shall keep a register, in the prescribed form, of all certificates granted under this section.

(5) Subject to the payment of the prescribed fees (if any), the said model test-apparatus shall be at all reasonable times open to inspection by any person desiring to inspect it.

Miscellaneous.

Power to exempt petroleum from operation of Act.

21. The Local Government may, by notification in the local official Gazette, exempt from the operation of all or any of the provisions of this Act, or of all or any of the rules made under this Act, any petroleum which has its flashing point at or above one hundred and twenty degrees of Fahrenheit's thermometer and is imported as ordinary cargo and in quantity not exceeding that specified in the notification.

Power to apply Act to other substances.

22. (1) The Governor General in Council may, by notification in the Gazette of India, apply the whole or any portion of this Act to any substance, other than petroleum, and may by the notification fix, in substitution for the quantities of petroleum fixed by sections 5, 6 and 11, the quantities of the substance to which those sections shall apply.

(2) When the whole or any portion of this Act has been applied as aforesaid to any substance other than petroleum, the provisions so applied shall be construed with all necessary modifications and shall have effect as if such other substance had been included in the definition of petroleum.

Power to limit operation of enactments, relating to possession or transport of petroleum, in municipalities.

23. The Governor General in Council may, by notification in the Gazette of India and in the local official Gazette, limit, in any manner he deems fit, the operation of any enactment for the time being in force relating to local authorities in any local area or to any particular local authority, and the exercise of any power conferred by any such enactment, in so far as the enactment relates to the possession or transport of petroleum.

Previous publication, etc., of rules.

24. (1) Every power to make rules conferred by this Act is subject to the condition of the rules being made after previous publication in such manner as the Governor General in Council may, by notification in the Gazette of India, direct.

(2) All rules made by the Governor General in Council or by the Local Government under this Act shall be published in the Gazette of India or the local official Gazette, as the case may be, and on such publication shall have effect as if enacted by this Act.

Repeal.

25. The enactments mentioned in the second schedule are hereby repealed to the extent specified in the fourth column thereof.

THE FIRST SCHEDULE.

TESTING.

(See section 3.)

I.—Nature of the Test-apparatus.

The apparatus consists of the following parts :—

(1) the oil-cup ;

(2) the cover, with slide, test-lamp, and clockwork arrangement for opening and closing the holes in the cover and for dipping the test-flame;

(3) the water-bath or heating vessel;

(4) the tripod stand with jacket and spirit-lamp for heating the water-bath ;

(5) the thermometer for indicating the temperature of the oil in the oil-cup ;

(6) the thermometer for indicating the temperature of the water in the water-bath ;

(7) the thermometer for indicating the temperature of the oil before it is poured into the oil-cup ;

(8) the dropping bottle or pipette for replenishing the test-lamp ; and

(9) a barometer standardised at the Meteorological Office of the Province or at any other place appointed by the Local Government.

The oil-cup is a cylindrical flat-bottomed vessel made of gun-metal or brass, and tinned or silvered inside. A gauge is fixed to the inside of the cup to regulate the height to which it is to be filled with the sample under examination.

The cup is provided with a close-fitting overlapping cover, which carries the thermometer, the test-lamp and the adjuncts thereto. The test-lamp is suspended upon two supports by means of trunnions, which allow it to be easily inclined to a particular angle and restored to its original position. The socket in the cover, which is to hold a round bulb thermometer for indicating the temperature of the oil during the testing operation, is so adjusted that the bulb of the latter is always inserted in a definite position below the surface of the liquid.

The cover is provided with three holes, one in the centre and two smaller ones close to the sides. These are closed and opened by means of a pivoted slide. When the slide is moved so as to uncover the holes, the suspended lamp is caught by a projection fixed on the slide, and tilted in such a way as to bring the end of the spout just below the surface of the lid. As the slide moves back so as to cover the holes, the lamp returns to its original position. Upon the cover, in front of and in a line with the nozzle of the lamp, is fixed a white bead, the diameter of which represents the size of the test-flame to be used.

The water-bath or heating vessel is so constructed that, when the oil-cup is placed in position in it, an air-space or air-chamber intervenes between the two; consequently, in applying the test under ordinary circumstances, the heat is transmitted gradually to the oil from the hot water through the air-space. The water-bath is fitted with a socket for receiving a long bulb thermometer, to indicate the temperature of the water. It is also provided with a funnel, an overflow-pipe and two handles.

The water-bath rests upon a tripod stand, which is fitted with a copper cylinder or jacket, so that the bath is surrounded by an enclosed air-space, which retains and regulates the heat. One of the legs of the stand serves as a support for a spirit-lamp, which is attached to it by a small swing bracket.

The clockwork arrangement, by which during the operation of testing the slide is withdrawn, and the test-flame dipped into the cup and raised again as the slide is replaced, is provided with a ratchet key for setting it in action for each test, and with a trigger for starting it each time that the test-flame is applied.

II.—Directions for drawing the Sample and preparing it for testing.

1. Drawing the sample.—In all cases the testing officer or some person duly authorised by him shall personally superintend the drawing of the sample from an original unopened tin or other vessel.

An opening sufficiently large to admit of the oil being rapidly poured or cyphoned from the tin or other vessel shall be made.

Two bottles, each of the capacity of about forty fluid ounces, are to be filled with the oil. One of these, the contents of which is intended to be preserved for reference in case of need, is to be carefully corked, the cork being well driven home, cut off level with the neck, and melted sealing-wax worked into it. The other bottle may be either stoppered or corked.

2. Preparing the sample for testing.—About ten fluid ounces of the oil, sufficient for three tests, are transferred from the bottle into which the sample has been drawn to a pint flask or bottle, which is to be immersed in water artificially cooled until a thermometer, introduced into the oil, indicates a temperature not exceeding 50° Fahrenheit.

III.—Directions for preparing and using the Test-apparatus.

1. Preparing the water-bath.—The water-bath is filled by pouring water into the funnel until it begins to flow out at the overflow-pipe. The temperature of the water at the commencement of each test, as indicated by the long bulb thermometer, is to be 130° Fahrenheit, and this is attained in the first instance by mixing hot and cold water, either in the bath or in a vessel from which the bath is filled, until the thermometer which is provided for testing the temperature of the water gives the proper indication; or the water is heated by means of the spirit-lamp (which is attached to the stand of the apparatus) until the required temperature is indicated.

2. Preparing the test-lamp.—The test-lamp is fitted with a piece of cylindrical wick of such thickness that it fills the wick-holder, but may readily be moved to and fro for the purpose of adjusting the size of the flame. In the body of the lamp, upon the wick, which is coiled within it, is placed a small tuft of cotton wool, moistened with petroleum, any oil not absorbed by the wool being removed. When the lamp has been lighted, the wick is adjusted by means of a pair of forceps until the flame is of the size of the bead fixed on the cover of the oil-cup; should a particular test occupy so long a time that the flame begins to get smaller, through the supply of oil in the lamp becoming exhausted, three or four drops of petroleum are allowed to fall upon the tuft of wool in the lamp from the dropping bottle or pipette provided for that purpose. This can be safely done without interrupting the test.

3. Filling the oil-cup.—The oil-cup having been previously cooled, by placing it bottom downwards in water at a temperature not exceeding 50° Fahrenheit, is to be rapidly wiped dry, placed on a level surface in a good light, and the oil to be tested is poured in very slowly, without splashing, until its surface is level with the point of the gauge which is fixed in the cup. The round bulb thermometer is inserted into the lid of the cup, care being taken that the projecting rim of the collar touches the edge of the socket; the test-lamp, prepared as already described, is placed in position, and the cover is then put on to the cup and pressed down so that its edge rests on the rim of the cup.

4. Application of the test.—The water-bath, with its thermometer in position, is placed in some locality where it is not exposed to currents of air, and where the light is sufficiently subdued to admit of the size of the entire test-flame being compared with that of the bead on the cover. The cup is carefully lifted without shaking it, and placed in the bath, the test-lamp is lighted, and the clockwork wound up by turning the key. The thermometer in the oil-cup is now watched, and, when the temperature has reached 56° Fahrenheit, the clockwork is set in motion by pressing the trigger.

If no flash takes place, the clockwork is at once rewound and the trigger pressed at 57° Fahrenheit, and so on, at every degree rise of temperature, until the flash occurs, or until a temperature of 95° Fahrenheit has been reached.

If the flash takes place at any temperature below 77° Fahrenheit, the temperature at which it occurs is to be recorded. Two fresh portions of the sample are then to be successively tested in a similar manner and the results recorded. If no greater difference than 2° Fahrenheit exists between any two of the three recorded results, and if in no instance the flash has taken place within eight degrees of the temperature at which the testing is commenced, each result is to be corrected for atmospheric pressure as hereafter described, and the average of the three corrected results is the flashing point of the sample. In the event of there being a greater difference than 2° Fahrenheit between any two of the results, while in no instance has the flash taken place within eight degrees of the temperature at which the testing was commenced, the series of tests is to be rejected, and a fresh series of three similarly obtained, and so on, until a sufficiently concordant series is furnished, when the results are to be corrected and the average taken in the manner already described.

If, however, a flash has occurred at or below 64° when the test is applied in the manner above described, the next testing shall be commenced ten degrees lower than the temperature at which the flash had been previously obtained (that is to say, at 54° or thereunder), and this procedure shall be continued until the results of three consecutive tests do not show a greater difference than 2° and until a flash has not occurred in any of the three tests within eight degrees of the temperature at which the testing is commenced: Provided always that, if at the commencement of the series of tests a flash has occurred on the first application of the test-flame at 56°, and if a flash has also occurred on the first application of the flame in each of three successive tests in which, thereupon, the test-flame is first applied at 46° as above directed, the testing officer shall certify that the petroleum has a flashing point below 47°, and the sample shall be reported dangerous.

If a temperature of 76° Fahrenheit has been reached without a flash occurring, the application of the test-flame is to be continued at every degree rise of temperature until a temperature of 95° Fahrenheit has been reached. If no flash has occurred up to this point, and if the petroleum is declared to be imported subject to the provisions of the Act, the tests shall not be continued, and the testing officer shall certify that the petroleum has a flashing point over 95° and is not dangerous. But, if the petroleum is oil ordinarily used for lubricating purposes and is declared to have its flashing point at or above 200° or is oil to which a notification of the Local Government exempting it from the operation of the Act will be applicable in the event of the flashing point being found to be at or above 120°, the test shall be continued as follows :—The oil-cup is to be removed from the water-bath, and the temperature of the water in the water-bath is to be reduced to 95° Fahrenheit by pouring cold water into the funnel (the hot water escaping by the overflow-pipe). The air-chamber is then to be filled to a depth of 1½ inches with water at a temperature of about 95° Fahrenheit, the oil-cup is to be replaced in the water-bath and the spirit-lamp attached to the water-bath is to be lighted and placed underneath. The test-flame is then to be again applied, from 96° Fahrenheit, at every degree rise of temperature as indicated by the thermometer in the oil-cup until a flash takes place or until a temperature of 200° Fahrenheit or 120° Fahrenheit, as the case may be, has been reached. If during this operation the test-flame appears to diminish in size, the lamp is to be replenished in the manner prescribed at (2) without interrupting the test.

If a flash occurs at any temperature between 76° and 200° Fahrenheit, the temperature at which it occurs, subject to correction for atmospheric pressure, is the flashing point of the sample.

In repeating a test a fresh sample of oil must always be used, the tested sample being thrown away, and the cup must be wiped dry from any adhering oil and cooled, as already described, before receiving the fresh sample.

5. Correction for atmospheric pressure.—As the flashing point of an oil is influenced by changes in atmospheric pressure to an average extent of 1·6° Fahrenheit for every inch of the barometer, a correction of the observed flashing point may become necessary. The height of the barometer must therefore be determined at the time of making the test for the flashing point. The true height of the barometer for the purpose of the test shall be considered to be the height of the column of mercury measured at 32° Fahrenheit, which is supported by the air pressure at the time of the experiment; that is, the actual height of the barometer at the time of observation duly corrected for any error of the instrument and for its temperature, if necessary. For the purpose of applying the correction to the flashing point of the oil obtained by the test, a table is appended to this schedule giving the flashing points of oils ranging from 65° to 80° Fahrenheit, under pressure ranging from 27 to 31 inches of mercury.

The table is used in the following manner :—

Example.—An oil has given a flashing point of 71°, the barometer being at 28·5 inches; take the nearest number to 71° in the vertical column headed 28·6. This number is 70·8. Substitute for this the number in the same horizontal line in the column headed 30 (the normal height of the barometer). The substituted number, that is, the true flashing point of the oil, is 73°.

IV.—Directions for determining the flashing point of petroleum which is not fluid at ordinary temperatures.

1. Nature of the test-apparatus.—The instrument employed is the Abel-Pensky petroleum testing apparatus, fitted with an additional thermometer to indicate the temperature of the oil in close proximity to the walls of the cup. This thermometer has a cylindrical bulb, ⅞ inch in length and 3/16 inch in diameter. It is scaled from 45° to 165° Fahrenheit, ten degrees on the scale occupying ⅜ inch. The thermometer is held vertically in a socket attached to the cover of the oil-cup in such a position that the bulb is 1/10 inch from the side of the cup.

(The thermometer can be removed and the orifice which is provided for it closed by means of an india-rubber plug, if the apparatus is required for testing petroleum in the ordinary way.)

2. Directions for preparing the sample for testing.—About ten fluid ounces of the oil are placed in a pint-flask, the mouth of which is then closed with an india-rubber stopper, and the sample is liquified by placing the flask in a water-bath, the temperature of which is only raised sufficiently high to liquify the oil.

3. Directions for preparing and using the test-apparatus.—The water-bath and test-lamp are to be prepared in the manner prescribed in Part III of this Schedule. The oil-cup is to be filled with the liquified oil, and the cover (into which both thermometers are to be previously inserted) placed on it, care being taken that the bulb of the additional thermometer is not brought into contact with the bracket-guage fixed inside the cup. The oil-cup is then to be placed in a refrigerator, or plunged up to the projecting collar in water maintained at sufficiently low temperature, until both thermometers indicate the temperature at which the testing of petroleum is directed in Part III of this Schedule to be commenced. The oil-cup is then to be removed, wiped dry placed in the water-bath, and the testing effected in the manner prescribed in Part III of this Schedule, the temperature indicated by the additional (vertical) thermometer alone being noted, and the average of three determinations, duly corrected for atmospheric pressure, being recorded as the flashing point of the sample, provided that no greater difference than 4° Fahrenheit exists between any two of such results.

Bills introduced in the Council of the Governor General of India for making Laws and Regulations, Reports of Select Committees presented to the Council, and Bills published under Rule 23.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to amend the Law relating to Arbitration was presented to the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 17th February, 1899 :—

WE, the undersigned Members of the Select Committee to which the Bill to amend the Law relating to Arbitration was referred, have considered the Bill and the papers noted in the margin, and have now the honour to submit this our Report, with the Bill as amended by us annexed hereto.

From Chief Commissioner, Coorg, No. 2102—21, dated 9th November, 1898, and enclosures [Papers No. 1].
From Chief Commissioner, Ajmere-Merwara, No. 1448—690, dated 2nd December, 1898, and enclosures [Papers No. 2].

From Chief Commissioner, Assam, No. 149 L. & L.—29-J., dated 5th January, 1899 [Paper No. 7].
From Government, Burma, No. 133-L.—47, dated 9th January, 1899, and enclosures [Papers No. 8].
From Government, Bombay, No. 326, dated 17th January, 1899, and enclosures [Papers No. 9].
From High Court, Calcutta, No. 207, dated 26th January, 1899 [Paper No. 10].
From Government, North-Western Provinces and Oudh, No. 73, dated 23rd January, 1899, and enclosures [Papers No. 11].
From Government, Punjab, No. 107, dated 27th January, 1899, and enclosures [Papers No. 12].

2. We have suggested the 1st July next as the date for the coming into force of the measure. This will give the High Courts time to make rules in exercise of the powers which the Bill proposes to confer upon them.

3. In clause 2 we have inserted the words "whether with leave or otherwise" before the words "be instituted", as in certain cases suits can be brought only with leave. We have at the same time thought it expedient to make the power of extending the application of the proposed Act beyond the limits of the Presidency-towns subject to the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council. The case of Rangoon, to which the measure ought apparently to be at once applied, has been considered by us; and having regard to local peculiarities of jurisdiction, we have thought it advisable to add a clause (22) specially providing for its application to that place, instead of leaving it to the Local Government to take action to that end in the manner contemplated by the proviso to clause 2.

4. Various suggestions have been received with reference to the proviso to clause 3 of the Bill, but we think it preferable here, as elsewhere, to adhere as closely as possible to the language of the Arbitration Act, 1889 (52 & 53 Vict., c. 49), which will draw with it the decisions of the English Courts.

5 In connection with clause 5 a question has arisen as to the effect of the death of one of the parties to an arbitration. The general rule appears to be that a submission before award made is revoked by death; but we have arrived at the conclusion that it will be better not to lay down any legislative provision on the subject: so that, where it is intended that the general rule above referred to ought not to apply, the matter will, as in the English Act, have to be expressly dealt with in the submission.

6. We have added words to clause 7 in order to make it clear that it is open to the parties to agree that an arbitrator be left to the selection, not of a named person, but of the holder for the time being of an office or appointment. In doing so we have followed the wording of section 1 of the Arbitration (Scotland) Act, 1894 (57 & 58 Vict., c. 13).

7. We have in sub-clauses (b) and (d) of clause 8, as also in clause 9 (a), inserted the words "or is removed" so as to make it plain that those provisions are intended to cover the case of an arbitrator removed by the Court.

8. Objection has been taken to sub-clause (c) of clause 8, which is reproduced verbatim from section 5 of the Statute of 1889, on the ground that it does not meet certain exceptional cases where there is a submission to more than two arbitrators. We think, however, that such arbitrations ought not to be encouraged —see Russell on Arbitration, Ed. 7, at p. 215—, and we propose to leave parties resorting to them to make special provision by the terms of their submission for carrying them into effect.

9. Later on in sub-section (1) of this clause we have substituted for the words "written notice to appoint an arbitrator" the words "written notice to concur in appointing an arbitrator," which will give effect to the interpretation put upon the corresponding provision in section 5 of the English Act by the Court of Appeal In re Eyre [1892], 1 Q. B. 136, at p. 142.

10. As regards the use of the word "may" in sub-section (2), we may point out that it has been held in England, in the case just cited, that, "as a general rule, where the conditions exist under which the section is applicable, the Court or Judge has no discretion to refuse to appoint an arbitrator."

11. In the same provision we have inserted words to show that the order of the Court appointing an arbitrator, umpire or third arbitrator, is not an ex parte order.

12. We have confined the proviso at the end of clause 9 to cases of the kind provided for by the second sub-clause.

13. In clause 10 we have omitted sub-clause (a) of sub-section (1), which proposes to give to arbitrators the powers of Civil Courts in respect of the summoning of witnesses and the production of documents, and in lieu thereof we have inserted a provision corresponding with section 7 (a) of the English Statute. In that Statute the power of administering an oath to a witness is supplemented by a provision for the suing out of process for compelling attendance before an arbitrator. As such a provision would be a novelty in India and might, we fear, be misused, we have refrained from incorporating it in the Bill. In sub-clause (c) we have omitted the reference to a submission, and sub-section (2) has been struck out along with sub-section (1) (a) as originally drawn.

14. Clause 11 has been recast in order to show on the face of it that an arbitrator or umpire is not bound to deliver out, or to file, his award until his charges have been paid.

15. For the sake of clearness we have made the proviso to clause 14 (1) of the Bill as introduced a separate and substantive enactment—see clause 14 of the amended Bill—, and we have made a drafting amendment in clause 15 (1) as re-numbered. We may here note that the English Act provides that the award shall be enforceable by leave of the Court; but it seems unnecessary to make any such provision in India, as execution in this country can be obtained only by means of an application to the Court.

16. We have limited clause 16 (now clause 17) to orders made by the Court. Apart from the special terms of the submission, there will be an implied authority for every arbitrator to deal with all questions as to costs arising in the reference.

17. In clause 18 (now clause 19) we have made two amendments. In the first place, we have, with a view to the saving of expense, given the High Courts express power to make rules for the transfer of small awards which have been filed, for execution by Presidency Courts of Small Causes. The High Courts, it may be observed, appear to have already the power so to transfer their own decrees for execution. And, secondly, we have added a sub-clause enabling the High Courts to make rules for the stay of proceedings taken in contravention of a submission to arbitration, thereby giving them the same power as the English Courts have under section 4 of the Statute of 1889. The amendment proposed by clause 19 (now clause 20, of the Bill) of section 21 of the Specific Relief Act, 1877 (I of 1877), so as to make a submission to arbitration under the new Act a bar to a suit, would, in our opinion, be inadequate without the additional power of summary interference in clear cases.

* I am sorry that I cannot bring myself to agree to leave the parties utterly helpless when their witnesses would not voluntarily attend or produce documents, while we are, by this Act, taking away their right to sue which carries with it the right to invoke help, under the circumstances.

The terms of sub-clause (a) of sub-section (1) of clause 10 are indeed too wide and may lead to abuse. I would minimise the chances of abuse by giving the High Court power to make rules in that behalf, by inserting a sub-clause between (a) and (b) of clause 10 as follows :—

"compelling the attendance of witnesses and the production of documents before arbitrators or umpires ;".

I would, in this view, make the consequential alterations needed in sub-clause (2) in clause 10, but not omit it as proposed.

P. ANANDA CHARLU.

No. II.

A Bill to amend the Law relating to Arbitration.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the law relating to arbitration by agreement without the intervention of a Court of Justice; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Short title, extent and commencement.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Indian Arbitration Act, 1899.

(2) It extends to the whole of British India; and

Application.

2. Subject to the provisions of section 22, this Act shall apply only in cases where, if the subject-matter submitted to arbitration were the subject of a suit, the suit could, whether with leave or otherwise, be instituted in a Presidency-town:

Provided that the Local Government, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, may, by notification in the local official Gazette, declare this Act applicable in any other local area as if it were a Presidency-town.

Repeal.

3. Sections 523 to 526 of the Code of Civil Procedure are hereby repealed as regards the Presidency-towns, and shall be repealed as regards any local area to which this Act may hereafter be applied by notification under the last foregoing section, with effect from the date of such notification:

Provided that nothing in this Act shall affect any arbitration pending in a Presidency-town at the commencement of this Act or in any local area at the date of the application thereto of this Act as aforesaid, but shall apply to every arbitration commenced after the commencement of this Act or the date of the application thereof, as the case may be, under any agreement or order previously made.

Definitions.

4. In this Act, unless there is anything repugnant in the subject or context,—

(a) "the Court" means, in the Presidency-towns, the High Court, and, elsewhere, the Court of the District Judge; and

(b) "submission" means a written agreement to submit present or future differences to arbitration, whether an arbitrator is named therein or not.

Submission to be irrevocable except by leave of Court.

5. A submission, unless a different intention is expressed therein, shall be irrevocable, except by leave of the Court.

Provisions implied in submissions.

6. A submission, unless a different intention is expressed therein, shall be deemed to include the provisions set forth in the first schedule, in so far as they are applicable to the reference under submission.

Reference to arbitrator appointed by third person.

7. The parties to a submission may agree that the reference shall be to an arbitrator or arbitrators to be appointed by a person designated therein.

Such person may be designated either by name or as the holder for the time being of any office or appointment.

Illustration.

The parties to a submission may agree that any dispute arising between them in respect of the subject-matter of the submission shall be referred to an arbitrator to be appointed by the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, or, as the case may be, to an arbitrator to be appointed by the President for the time being of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce.

Power for the Court in certain cases to appoint an arbitrator, umpire or third arbitrator.

8. (1) In any of the following cases:—

(a) where a submission provides that the reference shall be to a single arbitrator, and all the parties do not, after differences have arisen, concur in the appointment of an arbitrator;

(b) if an appointed arbitrator neglects or refuses to act, or is incapable of acting, or dies, or is removed, and the submission does not show that it was intended that the vacancy should not be supplied, and the parties do not supply the vacancy;

(c) where the parties or two arbitrators are at liberty to appoint an umpire or third arbitrator and do not appoint him;

(d) where an appointed umpire or third arbitrator refuses to act, or is incapable of acting, or dies, or is removed, and the submission does not show that it was intended that the vacancy should not be supplied, and the parties or arbitrators do not supply the vacancy;

any party may serve the other parties or the arbitrators, as the case may be, with a written notice to concur in appointing an arbitrator, umpire or third arbitrator.

(2) If the appointment is not made within seven clear days after the service of the notice, the Court may, on application by the party who gave the notice, and after giving the other party an opportunity of being heard, appoint an arbitrator, umpire or third arbitrator, who shall have the like power to act in the reference and make an award as if he had been appointed by consent of all parties.

Power for parties in certain cases to supply vacancy.

9. Where a submission provides that the reference shall be to two arbitrators, one to be appointed by each party, then, unless a different intention is expressed therein,—

(a) if either of the appointed arbitrators refuses to act, or is incapable of acting, or dies or is removed, the party who appointed him, may appoint a new arbitrator in his place;

(b) if, on such a reference, one party fails to appoint an arbitrator, either originally or by way of substitution as aforesaid, for seven clear days after the other party, having appointed his arbitrator, has served the party making default with a written notice to make the appointment, the party who has appointed an arbitrator, may appoint that arbitrator to act as sole arbitrator in the reference, and his award shall be binding on both parties as if he had been appointed by consent:

Provided that the Court may set aside any appointment made in pursuance of clause (b) of this section.

Powers of arbitrator.

53 49, and 10. The arbitrators or umpire acting under a submission shall, unless a different intention is expressed therein,—

(a) have power to administer oaths to the parties and witnesses appearing;

(b) have power to state a special case for the opinion of the Court on any question of law involved; and

(c) have power to correct in an award any clerical mistake or error arising from any accidental slip or omission.

Award to be signed and filed.

882, 11. (1) When the arbitrators or umpire have made their award, they shall sign it and shall give notice to the parties of the making and signing thereof and of the amount of the fees and charges payable to the arbitrators or umpire in respect of the arbitration and award.

(2) The arbitrators or umpire shall, at the request of any party to the submission or any person claiming under him, and upon payment of the fees and charges due in respect of the arbitration and award and of the costs and charges of filing the award, cause the award, or a signed copy of it, to be filed in the Court; and notice of the filing shall be given to the parties by the arbitrators or umpire.

(3) Where the arbitrators or umpire state
517.] a special case under section 10, clause (b), the Court shall deliver its opinion thereon; and such opinion shall be added to, and shall form part of, the award.

Power for Court to enlarge time for making award.

53 49, s. 12. The time for making an award may, from time to time, be enlarged by order of the Court, whether the time for making the award has expired or not.

Power to remit award.

13. (1) The Court may, from time to time, remit the award to the reconsideration of the arbitrators or umpire.

(2) Where an award is remitted under sub-section (1), the arbitrators or umpire shall, unless the Court otherwise directs, make a fresh award within three months after the date of the order remitting the award.

Power to set aside award.

14. Where an arbitrator or umpire has misconducted himself, or an arbitration or award has been improperly procured, the Court may set aside the award.

Award when filed to be enforceable as a decree.

15. (1) An award on a submission, on being filed in the Court in accordance with the foregoing provisions, shall (unless the Court remits it to the reconsideration of the arbitrators or umpire, or sets it aside) be enforceable as if it were a decree of the Court.

Illustration.

A dispute concerning the ownership of a diamond ring is referred to arbitration. The award may direct that the party in possession shall pay the other party Rs. 1,000, the said sum to be reduced to Rs. 5, if the ring is returned within fourteen days.

Power to remove arbitrator or umpire.

16. Where an arbitrator or umpire has misconducted himself, the Court may remove him.

Costs.

17. Any order made by the Court under this Act may be made on such terms as to costs or otherwise as the Court thinks fit.

Forms.

18. The forms set forth in the second schedule, or forms similar thereto, with such variations as the circumstances of each case require, may be used for the respective purposes there mentioned, and, if used, shall not be called in question.

Power for High Court to make rules.

19. The High Court may make rules consistent with this Act as to—

(a) the filing of awards and all proceedings consequent thereon or incidental thereto;

(b) the filing and hearing of special cases and all proceedings consequent thereon or incidental thereto;

(c) the transfer to Presidency Courts of Small Causes for execution of awards filed, where the sum awarded does not exceed two thousand rupees;

(d) the staying of any suit or proceeding in contravention of a submission to arbitration; and,

Amendment of section 21, Act I, 1877.

20. In section 21 of the Specific Relief Act, 1877, after the words "Code of Civil Procedure" the words and figures "and the Indian Arbitration Act, 1899," shall be inserted, and for the words "a controversy" the words "present or future differences" shall be substituted.

Crown to be bound.

21. The provisions of this Act shall be binding on the Crown.

V A 2

22. (1) This Act shall apply within the local limits of the ordinary civil jurisdiction of the Recorder of Rangoon in cases where, if the subject-matter submitted to arbitration were the subject of a suit, the suit could, whether with leave or otherwise, be instituted within those local limits.

Special provision as to application of Act to Rangoon.

(2) For the purposes of this Act in its application to Rangoon as aforesaid, the Recorder of Rangoon shall have all the powers of a High Court.

THE FIRST SCHEDULE.

(See section 6.)

PROVISIONS TO BE IMPLIED IN SUBMISSIONS.

53 I. If no other mode of reference is provided, the 19, reference shall be to a single arbitrator.

II. If the reference is to two arbitrators, the two arbitrators may appoint an umpire at any time within the period during which they have power to make an award.

III. The arbitrators shall make their award in writing within three months after entering on the reference, or after having been called on to act by notice in writing from any party to the submission, or on or before any later day to which the arbitrators, by any writing signed by them, may, from time to time, enlarge the time for making the award.

IV. If the arbitrators have allowed their time or extended time to expire without making an award, or have delivered to any party to the submission, or to the umpire, a notice in writing stating that they cannot agree, the umpire may forthwith enter on the reference in lieu of the arbitrators.

V. The umpire shall make his award within one month after the original or extended time appointed for making the award of the arbitrators has expired, or on or before any later day to which the umpire, by any writing signed by him, may, from time to time, enlarge the time for making his award.

VI. The parties to the reference, and all persons claiming through them respectively, shall, subject to the provisions of any law for the time being in force, submit to be examined by the arbitrators or umpire on oath or affirmation in relation to the matters in dispute, and shall, subject as aforesaid, produce before the arbitrators or umpire all books, deeds, papers, accounts, writings and documents within their possession or power respectively which may be required or called for, and do all other things which during the proceedings on the reference the arbitrators or umpire may require.

VII. The witnesses on the reference shall, if the arbitrators or umpire think fit, be examined on oath.

VIII. The award to be made by the arbitrators or umpire shall be final and binding on the parties and the persons claiming under them respectively.

IX. The costs of the reference and award shall be in the discretion of the arbitrators or umpire, who may direct to and by whom, and in what manner, those costs or any part thereof shall be paid, and may tax or settle the amount of costs to be so paid or any part thereof, and may award costs to be paid as between solicitor and client.

The following Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to amend the Law relating to Carriers was presented to the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 17th February, 1899 :—

WE, the undersigned, Members of the Select Committee to which the Bill to amend the Law relating to Carriers was referred, have considered the Bill and the papers noted in the margin, and have now the honour to submit this our Report, with the Bill as amended by us annexed hereto.

From Chief Commissioner, Central Provinces, No. 8553, dated 29th November, 1898 [Paper No. 1].
From Chief Commissioner, Coorg, No. 2289, dated 5th December, 1898 [Paper No. 2].
From High Court, Calcutta, No. 2979, dated 6th December, 1898 [Paper No. 3].
From Secretary for Berar to Resident, Hyderabad, No. 396, dated 23rd December, 1898, and enclosure [Papers No. 4].
From Chief Commissioner, Ajmere-Merwara, No. 28-C., dated 25th December, 1898 [Paper No. 5].
From Government, Bengal, No. 4, dated 5th January, 1899, and enclosures [Papers No. 6].
From Agent to Governor General in Baluchistan, No. 262, dated 10th January, 1899, and enclosures [Papers No. 7].
From Government, North-Western Provinces and Oudh, No. 25, dated 7th January, 1899, and enclosures [Papers No. 8].
From Government, Burma, No. 455-L.—3, dated 17th January, 1899, and enclosures [Papers No. 9].
From Chief Commissioner, Assam, No. 4-L. & L—412-J., dated 1st February, 1899 [Paper No. 11].

2. In clause 2 of the Bill we have omitted all reference to non-delivery and so have confined the provisions as to notice of the proposed new section 10 of the Act of 1865 to cases of loss of, or injury to, goods. It seems to us that suits for non-delivery are on the same footing as suits for delay; for non-delivery may arise from causes other than accident, in regard to which the evidence of the carrier's servants is required to rebut any presumption of negligence during carriage. We have at the same time inserted the words "in writing" after the word "notice".

3. We are, further, of opinion that the same period of limitation should apply to suits for delay in delivering, or non-delivery of, goods as to suits for loss of, or injury to, goods; and, as a matter of drafting, we think that it will be clearer to repeal and re-enact the entries concerned in the second schedule to the Indian Limitation Act, 1877 (XV of 1877). We have accordingly recast clause 3 of the Bill.

No. II.

A Bill to amend the Law relating to Carriers.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the law relating to carriers; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Short title and commencement.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Carriers Act, 1899; and

(2) It shall come into force on the first day of May, 1899.

Addition of new section after section 9, Act III, 1865.

2. After section 9 of the Carriers Act, 1865, the following section shall be added, namely:—

Notice of loss or injury to be given within six months.

"10. No suit shall be instituted against a common carrier for the loss of, or injury to, goods entrusted to him for carriage, unless notice in writing of the loss or injury has been given to him before the institution of the suit and within six months of the time when the loss or injury first came to the knowledge of the plaintiff."

Amendment of Schedule II, Act XV, 1877.

3. (1) In Part IV of the first division of the second schedule to the Indian Limitation Act, 1877, after the entry numbered 29 the following entries shall be inserted, namely:—

"30.—Against a carrier for compensation for losing or injuring goods.	Ditto .	When the loss or injury occurs.
31.—Against a carrier for compensation for non-delivery of, or delay in delivering, goods.	Ditto .	When the goods ought to be delivered."

(2) In Part V of the same division of the said schedule, the entries numbered 30 and 31, respectively, are hereby repealed; and, in the entry numbered 32, for the word "Ditto" in the second column the words "Two years" shall be substituted.

Weather Review of India for the week ending at 8 a.m. on Saturday, February 4th, 1899.

Ordinary high pressure conditions obtained in Baluchistan and North-Western India at the commencement of the period under review, and weather was fine over the whole of that area. The pressure changes during the next two days were such as tended to accentuate these conditions, so that on the morning of the 31st a well marked anti cyclone, in the central area of which pressure was two-tenths of an inch above the normal, overlay the whole of Baluchistan and North-Western and Central India. A brisk to rapid fall of pressure, however, occurred during the day in the central area of the anti-cyclone, which hence decreased considerably in intensity. The downward movement of the barometer continued during the next 24 hours in Baluchistan and North-Western India and a moderately deep cold weather depression formed in Upper Sind. The disturbance marched along the usual track of cold weather storms across Rajputana and filled up during the 3rd. Baluchistan obtained moderate general rain from the disturbance on the 2nd and 3rd and the North-West and Central Punjab light to moderate rain. Light to moderate snow fell in Kashmir and the interior ranges of the Punjab Himalayas on the 3rd. Weather improved rapidly in these areas during the 3rd, but only to become unsettled again on the 4th due to the formation of a fresh disturbance in Upper Sind similar in character to the previous.

Weather was settled throughout the week in the remainder of India with the exception of Bengal which was visited by a series of thunderstorms of moderate intensity on the afternoon of the last day of the preceding week.

The mean temperature conditions of the week approximated to the normal over a large part of the country. The only important features were a moderate to considerable excess in North-Western India and a moderate deficiency in Assam and Orissa.

Daily Summary.—Sunday, January 29th.—Pressure had increased slightly to briskly in Rajputana, Central India, Berar, the Central Provinces and Chota Nagpur and fallen over the remainder of the Indian area. The fall was brisk in the submontane districts of North-Eastern India and slight elsewhere. Pressure was in moderate to considerable defect over the greater part of the Peninsula and approximately normal in Northern and Central India and Burma. Winds were generally from their normal cold-weather directions, but were lighter than usual on the Coromandel and Ceylon Coasts. The air was much drier than usual in North-Western and Western India. Skies were heavily clouded in Baluchistan and partially clouded in Southern India and Bengal. A series of thunderstorms of moderate intensity (in some cases with hail) had visited Chota Nagpur, South Bihar, South and East Bengal, Assam and Upper Burma. Temperature had increased in Mysore and Madras and fallen over the remainder of India. The variations of temperature from the normal were small and unimportant over by far the greater part of the country. Temperature was in considerable defect in Bihar, due chiefly to low day temperature and in moderate excess in Mysore due to high day temperature.

Monday, January 30th.—Pressure had decreased briskly to rapidly in Kashmir due to some local disturbance. Pressure had given way slightly in South India and Lower Burma and increased over the remainder of the country. The rise was brisk in Assam and East Bengal. The general pressure conditions differed little from the normal over the greater part of the country, the only important abnormal features being a slight to considerable deficiency in the southern half of the Peninsula and a slight to moderate excess in Upper India. Gradients were hence slightly above their normal strength. Winds were light and unsteady in Bengal. They had strengthened slightly in the Gangetic Plain and were also more westerly in direction than on the previous day. Skies were overcast in Kashmir and light snow had fallen in that area. Skies were heavily clouded in Ceylon and light rain had been received in that area. A rapid reduction of temperature had occurred in Bengal, Orissa and Chota Nagpur, and the mean temperature of the previous 24 hours was from 2° to 3° in defect of the normal in these areas. Temperature had on the other hand increased more or less rapidly in North-Western India, and was during the past day 5° above the normal in Sind and 2° in the Punjab. Temperature varied to no important extent from the normal in other districts.

Tuesday, January 31st.—Pressure had increased throughout the Indian area. The rise was rapid in Baluchistan, Kashmir and the Indus Valley, slight in Burma and North-Eastern India and brisk in the intervening area. Pressure continued slightly below the normal in South Madras and Ceylon, but exceeded the normal over the remainder of the country. The excess was large in Baluchistan and Upper India where it was most marked. Very strongly pronounced anti-cyclonic conditions hence obtained in India, the total range of pressure in that area being about a fifth of an inch greater than the normal. The wind circulation was of the usual cold-weather type. Unusually strong winds prevailed in Coorg, Mysore and the West Deccan, where gradients were steepest. Thus the velocity at 8 A.M. was at the rate of 36 miles per hour at Belgaum and 24 miles per hour at Mercara. The air was generally drier. Skies had cleared in Kashmir and were now serene over the whole of the country with the exception of the south of the Peninsula where they were slightly clouded. Light snow had fallen in Kashmir. A brisk to rapid rise of temperature had occurred in the North-Western Provinces, Rajputana, Gujarat, the West Coast, the Bombay Deccan and Chota Nagpur, and a slight fall in Berar, the Central Provinces and Southern India. The mean temperature of the previous 24 hours was in moderate defect in Bengal, Assam and Orissa, in considerable excess in North-Western India, the North-Western Provinces and the Madras Coast. The excess was exhibited more largely in the day than in the night temperature in the area of increased temperature. In the area of diminished temperature on the other hand the night temperature was more largely in defect than the day temperature.

Wednesday, February 1st.—Pressure was steady in the Peninsula and continued normal in Southern India and in slight excess in the Deccan. Pressure had given way over the remainder of the Indian area except locally in Kashmir where it had increased slightly to rapidly. The decrease was brisk in Baluchistan, the South Punjab and the North-Western Provinces and rapid in the North and East Punjab. The chief effect of these changes was to reduce considerably the excess of pressure prevailing in North-Western India and Baluchistan on the previous day. The air movement in the plains of India was similar in character to that of the previous day. Winds had strengthened rapidly in the Upper India hill districts and were blowing strongly from north. They were strongest in that area at Cherat where their velocity at 8 A.M. was at the rate of 40 miles per hour. The air was considerably drier in Upper India, more especially in the hill districts where humidity had fallen very rapidly with the prevalence of northerly winds. The percentage of humidity at 8 A.M. on this day was only 14 at Murree, 16 at Chakrata, 22 at Mussoorie and 23 at Simla Cloud was commencing to form in Baluchistan. Skies were moderately clouded in Southern India and clear in the remainder of India. No rain had fallen anywhere beyond light local showers at Tinnevelly and Darjeeling. Temperature had increased rapidly in Baluchistan and was 8° above the normal during the previous 24 hours. The distribution of temperature with respect to the normal was unchanged in India and Burma.

Thursday, February 2nd.—A rapid decrease of pressure had occurred in Baluchistan, Sind and the neighbouring districts of the Punjab and Rajputana, and a moderately deep depression in which pressure was upwards an eighth of an inch in defect of the normal had formed in Upper Sind. Pressure had increased briskly to rapidly in the submontane and hill districts of Northern India, North Bengal, Upper Assam and Upper Burma and was now in moderate to considerable excess. The barometric changes were small in the remainder of India and Burma and produced no important change in the relative distribution of pressure. Winds had under the influence of the depression in Upper Sind shifted round to cyclonic directions in the Punjab, North-West Rajputana, Lower Sind and Cutch and were intensifying rapidly on the Sind and Cutch coasts. Winds had diminished in strength in the hill districts and were now light and unsteady. The air was considerably damper in Baluchistan and North-Western and Central India. Skies were overcast in Baluchistan, the North Punjab and Kashmir, and were clouding over in the remainder of North-Western India. Light to moderate rain had fallen in Baluchistan. A further and very rapid rise of temperature had occurred in Baluchistan and a rapid rise in Sind and the Punjab. The mean temperature of the past day was 16° above the normal at Quetta, 8° in Sind, 4° in the Punjab and Rajputana and 3° in Gujarat and the West Coast. It was on the other hand from 2° to 3° below the normal in Burma, North-Eastern India and the North and West Deccan.

Friday, February 3rd.—Pressure had recovered rapidly to very rapidly in Baluchistan, Upper Sind, the West Punjab and West Rajputana, and the depression which lay in Upper Sind on the previous day had advanced into Central Rajputana and practically filled up. Pressure had given way slightly to briskly in Kashmir where conditions remained feebly disturbed. The barometric changes were small and unimportant in the remainder of India. Pressure was again in considerable to large excess in Baluchistan, Upper Sind and the North-West Punjab, in moderate excess in the Gangetic Plain and approximately normal elsewhere. Moderately strong north-west winds obtained in the North and Central Punjab. Winds were light and irregular in Northern and Central India where pressure was remarkably uniform. The air was much damper in the Punjab and the North-Western Provinces and considerably drier in Southern India and the South Deccan. Light to moderate rain had occurred in Baluchistan and the North and Central Punjab, but skies were now clearing in that area. Light to moderate snow had fallen in Kashmir and light snow in the interior of the Simla hills down to about 8,500 feet. A cool wave was affecting Baluchistan, Sind and the Punjab and causing a very rapid reduction of temperature.

Saturday, February 4th.—Pressure had increased locally in Kashmir and Southern India and had fallen over the remainder of the Indian region. The fall was rapid to very rapid in Baluchistan, Upper Sind, the Punjab and the North-Western Provinces and brisk over the remainder of Northern and Central India and Upper Burma. Pressure was in moderate to considerable defect over the whole of North-Western India, the deficiency being greatest in Upper Sind where it was a tenth of an inch in amount. Pressure was approximately uniform in the Indian area and winds were generally light. Skies were more or less heavily clouded in Baluchistan and North-Western India, and there was a marked tendency to the formation of a cold-weather depression in Upper Sind. A very rapid rise of temperature had occurred in Baluchistan and a brisk rise in North-Western India and the mean temperature of the previous 24 hours was 10° higher than usual at Quetta, 7° in Rajputana, 4° in the Punjab, Gujarat and Central India and 3° in the North-Western Provinces. Temperature was on the other hand in large defect in Mysore and in moderate to considerable defect in Madras and Orissa. Elsewhere the departures from the normal temperature conditions were small.

Temperature.—The mean temperature conditions of the week differed to no large extent from the normal over a large part of the country. The only important features were a moderate to considerable excess in North-Western India and a moderate defect in Assam and Orissa. In all other districts the average mean temperature of the week was practically normal.

The mean temperature of India and Burma averaged 0·1° above the normal for the week and was hence practically normal.

The following table gives temperature variation data of the week:—

Rainfall.—The precipitation during the week under review was confined to the following three areas:—

(1) Bengal and Assam.
(2) Baluchistan and the Punjab.
(3) South Madras and Malabar.

The rainfall in the first of these areas was due to the occurrence of a series of thunderstorms on the afternoon of the last day of the previous week and was fairly general, the whole of the province with the exception of Orissa, North Bengal and North Bihar obtaining light to moderate amounts. The total fall of the week in this area ranged from an average of 0·11 inch in Assam Brahmaputra, to 0·47 inch in Central Bengal, and exceeded the normal by very small amounts in Assam Surma, Central Bengal, Chota Nagpur and South Bihar.

In the second area the precipitation was due to the formation of a cold weather storm in Upper Sind and occurred on the last three days of the week. The total fall of the week was very slightly greater than the normal in Baluchistan, the North and West Punjab, and less than the small normal of the period in the Central and Submontane Punjab.

In Malabar and South Madras the rainfall was due to thunderstorms and was light and local.

The more noteworthy totals recorded during the week at individual rain-gauge stations were as follows:—

	Inches.
Agasteeswaram (Trivandrum)	2·35
Gujranwala (Sudder Station)	1·63
Jagadhri (Umballa)	1·48
Rampur Hât (Birbhum)	1·31

The rainfall of the week has made no important change in the chief features of the distribution of the seasonal rainfall beyond reducing to some extent the amount of deficiency in Baluchistan and parts of the Punjab.

HEM RAJ,
Offg. Asst. Meteorological Reporter to the Government of India.

SIMLA, the 9th February 1899.

T. W. HOLDERNESS,
Secretary to the Government of India.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Weekly Report on the state of the Season and Prospects of the Crops.

Madras.—For week ending 11th February.—Some rain fell in the southern districts, Coimbatore and South Arcot. The water-supply is generally sufficient. Some sowings under irrigation are being made. The standing crops are generally in fair condition. The harvest is yielding almost the normal outturn. Pasturage is scarce, but fodder is generally sufficient. Prices are almost stationary in the Circars and the southern districts and are falling elsewhere.

Bombay.—For week ending 15th February.—Slight rain fell in parts of Shikarpur, Khandesh, Sholapur and Dharwar. The standing crops have been damaged by frost in parts of Sind, by white ants in one taluka of Thar and Parkar, by rats in one of Bijapur and by drought in one of the Upper Sind Frontier, and one of Poona. The reaping of the late crops is progressing in thirteen and preparations for next season are being made in seven districts. Cotton-picking continues in parts of Gujarat and Kathiawar. Fodder is sufficient except in parts of Sind. Agricultural stock is healthy except in parts of two districts. Prices have risen in six and fallen in four districts.

Bengal.—For week ending 13th February.—Rain fell generally in Bihar and in some parts of Bengal Proper and Chota Nagpur during the week. The rain is reported to have been generally beneficial, but in Shahabad and Monghyr, where it was accompanied by hail, some damage has been done to the spring crops. These crops are maturing and some are being harvested. The pressing of sugarcane is still proceeding. The general prospects of the poppy crop in Bihar are favourable except in the Siwan Sub-Agency, where considerable damage is reported to have been done by blight. The transplantation of spring rice is still going on, and the ploughing for autumn rice and jute is in progress. Cattle are generally in good condition. No important change is reported in the price of common rice.

North-Western Provinces and Oudh.—For week ending 15th February.—The rainfall during the week has been almost general: it was accompanied in parts by hail which, however, has done little or no damage. The standing crops have been benefited by the rain and are thriving. Pressing of sugarcane continues. Prospects are favourable. Markets are well supplied. Fodder is sufficient. Prices are stationary or rising.

Punjab.—For week ending 15th February.—Rain has fallen during the week in Ferozepore, Multan, Sialkot, Shahpur, Rawalpindi, Peshawar and Dera Ismail Khan; but more is wanted urgently in most districts. Sugarcane-pressing continues in some districts. The standing crops are being irrigated and are generally reported to be in good condition: their prospects have been improved by the recent rain. The crops on unirrigated areas are suffering from drought in Delhi. Crops have been damaged by caterpillars in parts of Ferozepore. Cattle are generally in good condition. Fodder is said to be sufficient in all districts, except in Delhi, Umballa and Shahpur. Prices, especially of wheat, are rising in Delhi and Dera Ismail Khan, falling in Umballa, Jullundur, Sialkot, Rawalpindi and Peshawar and are unchanged elsewhere. Wheat is selling from 15 to 20½, gram 20½ to 24, barley 32, bulrush millet 19 to 24, maize 25 to 32, great millet 25, and rice 13 to 14 seers per rupee.

Central Provinces.—For week ending 14th February.—The weather is occasionally cloudy, the nights and mornings being cool and pleasant, but the days are gradually growing warm. Slight showers of rain fell during the week in almost every district of the Provinces and may benefit the late sowings in Mandla, but in Hoshangabad and Betul the rain has done some damage to the standing crops. The prospects of the winter crops are fair to good in all districts, except in Hoshangabad, Saugor and the northern half of Damoh, where they are poor to gloomy. Hail storms have damaged the standing crops in parts of Seoni and Saugor; the damage in the Saugor and Khurai tahsils in the latter district being considerable. Some damage through blight is also reported from Betul and through the recent cloudy weather from Bhandara. The reaping and threshing of the autumn crops have almost been completed. Pressing of sugarcane continues. The reaping of winter crops has begun. Employment for agricultural labour is still scarce in Damoh. Prices are rising slowly. The cheapest prices are—wheat 18, gram 30, rice 24, and juar 29 seers per rupee. The dearest prices are—wheat 11, gram 14, rice 11, and juar 20 seers per rupee.

Burma.—For week ending 11th February.—In Lower Burma threshing and winnowing operations are approaching completion everywhere. In Upper Burma prospects of the standing crops continue generally favourable. The price of paddy has risen slightly in Rangoon, Thongwa, Henzada, Amherst, and Shwebo; considerably in Bassein and Mandalay; whilst it has fallen slightly in Prome and Thayetmyo. Prices are stationary elsewhere.

Assam.—For week ending 14th February.—Slight rain is reported to have fallen in almost all districts. Gathering of mustard and pulses, pruning of tea and pressing of sugarcane are in progress. Prospects of the sugarcane, mustard and pulse crops are generally good. Land is under preparation for the sowing of early rice. Fodder is scarce in Cachar, the Naga, Khasi and Jaintia Hills and in parts of Sylhet. Water is insufficient in the Khasi and Jaintia Hills and in parts of Sylhet. Prices—common rice, Silchar 15 to 15¼, Dhubri and Gauhati 16, Tezpur and Sibsagar 13, and Nowgong 15 seers per rupee.

Mysore and Coorg.—For week ending 15th February.—MYSORE: Prospects are fair. Paddy has been harvested in parts of Bangalore, Kolar, Tumkur, and Mysore. Prices have risen slightly in Bangalore and Mysore and fallen in Kolar, Hassan, Kadur, and Chitaldrug.

COORG: Rainfall ·95. The threshing of rice and coffee-picking continue. Water and fodder for cattle are sufficient. Prices of food-grains are stationary.

Berar and Hyderabad.—For week ending 15th February.—BERAR: The weather is cool with occasional clouds. Harvesting of the winter crops continues. Land is being prepared for the ensuing rain crops. Fodder is reported to be insufficient in the Murtizapur taluka. A scarcity of water prevails in parts of the Akola and Amraoti districts. Prices are almost stationary.

HYDERABAD: No rain fell during the week. The sowing of winter rice continues. Prices are almost stationary. Prices—wheat 9½, coarse rice 10½ and jowari 21¾ seers per current sicca rupee.

Central India.—For week ending 15th February.—Slight rain fell in Bundelkhand during the week. Agricultural operations have been completed in Bundelkhand and are in progress elsewhere. The standing crops have been damaged by frost in Gwalior, Bundelkhand, Baghelkhand and Malwa. Agricultural stock and pasturage are in good condition. Prices have fallen slightly but are still above the normal in Bundelkhand and normal elsewhere. The condition of opium is good in Gwalior and Bhopal and fair in Malwa.

Rajputana.—For week ending 15th February.—Slight rain fell in Dholepur and showers in three tehsils of Ulwar, but none elsewhere. Irrigation of crops continues. The state of the crops is generally good, but they have been slightly damaged by frost in a few villages of Ajmere. Wheat is suffering from blight in Kotah. Cattle are generally in good condition. Fodder is still scarce in parts of Sirohi, Marwar, Kherwara, Meywar, Haraoti, Ajmere, Jeypore, and Bikaneer. Prices are rising in four States, falling in Meywar and steady elsewhere. Emigration from the distressed Ajmere villages and from Merwara continues: 170 persons emigrated during the week. The total emigration up to date amounts to 4,084 persons. The numbers employed on relief works were—3,440 in Merwara and 1,049 in Marwar. Prices—Ajmere 20, Beawar 22, and Marwar 14½ seers per rupee.

Kashmir.—For week ending 14th February.—The weather is snowy and cloudy. Prices continue below normal. The price of rice is 27 seers per rupee.

JAMMU PROVINCE:—For week ending 15th February.—Slight rain fell during the week. The condition of the standing crops is generally fair. Fodder is sufficient. Prices are generally stationary.

Nepal.—For week ending 11th February.—Rainfall 0·49. Prospects of the wheat crop are good. The price of rice is 8¼ seers per rupee.

ADMINISTRATION REPORT OF THE INDO-EUROPEAN TELEGRAPH DEPARTMENT FOR 1897-98.

No. 144 C. W. T., dated Simla, the 13th February 1899.

RESOLUTION—By the Government of India, Public Works Department.

READ—

Despatch from Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India, No. 1 Telegraph, dated the 12th January 1899, and enclosures, being the Administration Report of the Indo-European Telegraph Department for the year 1897-98, and the India Office Note reviewing it.

ORDER.—Ordered that copies of the Report and Note be forwarded to the Home Department of the Government of India, to the Government of Bombay, and to the Director General of Telegraphs for information.

Ordered also that the Report and Note be published in the Supplement to the Gazette of India.

O. C. LEES,

Under Secretary to the Government of India.

ADMINISTRATION REPORT

OF THE

INDO-EUROPEAN TELEGRAPH DEPARTMENT

FOR

1897-98.

CAPITAL AND REVENUE ACCOUNT.

1. Capital.—The Capital account of the Department was decreased by R13,961, making the capital expenditure to end of the year R1,15,35,814.

The following statement shows how the above decrease is made up :—

Works	11,769	...	11,769
Suspense :
Works	...	31,430	—31,430
Other heads	5,700	...	5,700
	17,469	31,430	—13,961

A summary of the year's transactions on Capital account is given in Appendix A.

2. Revenue.—Appendix B is a summary of the earnings and expenditure.* The earnings amounted to R15,40,153, or an increase of R55,646, as compared with 1896-97, when the sum realised was R14,84,507. The expenditure during the year was R7,81,981, against R7,71,477 in the previous year, or an increase of R10,504, due chiefly to the payment made during 1897-98 on account of the Jask Royalty. The net result is a profit of R7,58,172 on the year's working, against that of R7,13,030 in 1896-97, or an increase of R45,142, as compared with that year.

3. The following statement shows the chief differences between the earnings and expenditure of the current and previous years. For details, see Appendix B:—

EARNINGS.

Head of Account.	1896-97.	1897-98.	Increase.	Decrease.
	R	R	R	R
*Traffic Earnings	19,20,488	18,49,445	...	71,043

TOTAL	14,84,507	15,40,153	1,27,028	71,382
Net Increase	...	...	55,646	...

4. There was thus an increase of R55,646 in the earnings of 1897-98, as compared with the preceding year. The rupee figures under Traffic earnings show a falling off, due chiefly to an improvement in the value of the rupee, which resulted in a smaller amount of rupee collection as the franc equivalent. The earnings of 1897-98 as worked out in francs amounted to 2,990,675, against 2,956,006 francs in the preceding year, and the amount drawn out of the Joint Purse on account of Indian traffic was 5,983*l.* more than last year. The increase in Miscellaneous revenue consists of realisations from sale of cable core and other unserviceable stores in England.

* NOTE.—The head "Traffic Earnings" includes the amount collected in India, as also the loss on account of exchange on sterling transactions. The tariffs on International messages are fixed in a gold standard, and the balances due to or from foreign administrations are settled in that standard. The rupee collections in India vary, therefore, in correspondence with the fluctuations in exchange, and the balance received from the Indian Telegraph Department at Karachi in rupees is sufficient to pay the telegraph companies and foreign administrations in the gold standard and retain the share of this Department in a gold standard also.

5. The increase and the decrease under the main heads are as follows:—

General Charges.—Gulf and Persian Sections.—The decrease is due to short outlay under superintendence, Gulf Section, on account of leave and casualties of some of its officers, and under exchange compensation allowance, and also to less expenditure in England on furlough allowances than in the previous year, as well as to the absence of any outlay in England on advertising charges. The decrease under exchange is due to the same cause, viz., short expenditure in England combined with improvement in the rate of exchange.

Line Maintenance.—Gulf Section.—The increase is due to a larger outlay (both cash and stores) on repairs to the land lines, due to the destruction of the line in Mekran by the Baluchis and to the murder of Mr. Graves.

Line Maintenance.—Persian Section.—The decrease under this head represents chiefly less expenditure on account of exchange compensation allowance and carriage of line stores.

Signalling.—Gulf Section.—The increase was caused by annual increases of pay to the signalling staff, employment of new men to fill existing vacancies, and an issue of new instruments to signal offices.

Signalling.—Persian Section.—The decrease is due partly to short expenditure on house allowance, consequent on the completion of quarters for the signalling staff at Teheran, and partly to less outlay on repairs to buildings, office contingencies, and exchange compensation allowance.

Cable Maintenance.—The increase is due chiefly to more extensive cable repairs being necessary.

NET REVENUE.

6. On a total Capital expenditure of R1,15,35,814 a net profit of R7,58,172 was earned, which gives a dividend of 6·57 per cent. The dividends earned during the past six years are as follows:—

Year.	Interest on Capital.
1893-94	4·28
1894-95	6·50
1895-96	7·42
1896-97	6·17
1897-98	6·57

The higher dividend in 1895-96 was due to the low rate of exchange, that is, a higher rate in rupees collected for the franc equivalent.

CIS-INDIAN JOINT PURSE.

7. Appendix C deals with the transactions in connection with this Agreement, which was entered into in 1878. The number of words carried between Europe and India or Trans-India and vice versâ during the year by the three Administrations (viz., the Eastern Telegraph Company, the Indo-European Telegraph Company, and this Department) rose from 6,157,208½ to 6,469,171, showing an increase of 311,962¾, while the net value also shows an increase of 30,448*l.* 4*s.* 1*d.* The Department's share of the whole Purse shows also an increase of 5,930*l.* 0*s.* 11*d.*, and the amount paid into the Purse was more than in the preceding year by 1,497*l.* 4*s.* 4*d.*

8. The following table shows the sums paid in and drawn out by the Department annually since the Agreement was concluded :—

11. Interruptions affecting Joint Purse Traffic.—One interruption stopping traffic between Teheran and Karachi occurred on the Persian Section and lasted 22 hours, 56 minutes. Beyond Teheran to London the Indo-European Company's lines were totally interrupted for 8 days, 19 hours, 6 minutes, but none of these interruptions affected the divisions of the Joint Purse receipts.*

12. On the Turkish route interruptions occurred between Fao and Constantinople lasting 74 days, 16 hours, 21 minutes. The working of this route continues to be very unsatisfactory. The Fao-Bushire cable was also interrupted for repairs for 10 hours, 5 minutes.

During the last six years the Turkish route beyond Fao has been interrupted as follows:—

Year.	1892-93.	1893-94.	1894-95.	1895-96.	1896-97.	1897-98.
Days, hours, minutes	108—9—54	101—5—41	150—0—52	111—17—35	83—14—56	74—16—21

The Department was only liable to the Joint Purse for 33 days' interruptions on the Turkish route at Fcs. 50 per diem.

Australasian Message Fund.

13. Full particulars regarding the nature of this Fund are given in the Administration Report for 1893-94 (page 6, paras. 14 to 17), and for 1896-97 (page 7, para. 14).

The Departmental receipts for this year show an increase of 4,677*l.* over the receipts in 1889, on which the original Australasian Message Fund was based. See Appendix C. (1).

* The altered proportions only take effect after the lapse of one clear day, calculating from midnight of the day of the interruption of the line.

TRAFFIC.

14. The service regulations of the Buda-Pesth International Conference of 1896 have been in force since 1st July 1897, up to which date the Paris Convention of 1890 remained in force.

15. Appendix E shows the traffic carried by the two sections of the Department. The number of words was 2,122,710, against 2,059,941 in the previous year, showing an increase of 62,769; the value as stated in francs shows an increase from 2,956,006 to 2,990,675 francs.

In Indian currency the earnings of the Department are, however, less by R71,043, being R18,49,445, against R19,20,488 in the previous year.

16. The comparative values of the franc and rupee varied once only during the year, rising in the case of the rupee from 1 franc= ·64 in April 1897 to 1 franc = ·62 in October 1897, and continued so until the end of March 1898. As compared with 1896-97 there was a decided rise in the rupee. This accounts for the decrease in the revenue expressed in rupees as compared with the increased number of words.

17. The following table gives the amounts paid into the Joint Purse by the Department as compared with its independent traffic revenue :—*

——	FOR JOINT PURSE, ETC.		Independent. Revenue.	TOTAL.
	Indian.	Trans-Indian.
	Fcs. cts.	Fcs. cts.	Fcs. cts.	Fcs. cts.

18. Appendix F gives the number of messages and words carried under the four following classes during the past five years :—

State. Press.

Commercial and Private. "Times" (special rate).

19. The average length of "private and commercial" messages was 13·01 words in 1897-98, as compared with 13·27 words in the previous year. The average length, calculated from the averages of the past seven years, is 13·27, words.

20. In addition to the messages classified in Appendix F, 844 messages' containing 69,132 words, were forwarded to the British Resident at Bushire free of charge. These are called "Government and Press" telegrams, and would, if charged for, yield R16,203 at press rates.

21. The percentages of traffic carried on the Teheran and Turkish routes were 95·06 and 4·94, respectively. The following table gives the respective percentages for the past seven years :—

Years.	Viâ Teheran.	Viâ Turkey.	REMARKS.
1891-92	92·37	7·63
1892-93	92·96	7·04
1893-94	93·60	6·40
1894-95	94·36	5·64
1895-96	93·55	6·45
1896-97	94 61	5·39
1897-98	95·06	4·94

* NOTE.—The independent traffic revenue is that obtained from traffic dealt with by this Department and not touching India, such as for telegrams between the stations of Jask and Bushire.

The Turkish route continues to be next to useless, being very slow and inaccurate.

22. The mean rate of transmission of telegrams between the United Kingdom and Karachi, and between Karachi and Teheran, the latter being the section worked by the Department, during each of the past six years is as follows:—

Years.	Between the United Kingdom and Karachi, viâ Teheran.		Between the United Kingdom and Karachi, viâ Turkey.		Between Karachi and Teheran.
					Karachi to Teheran		Teheran to Karachi.
	Hours.	Min.	Hours.	Min.	Min.	Sec.	Min.	Sec.
1892-93	0	45	27	47	5	51	4	26
1893-94	0	43	36	49	5	40	4	28
1894-95	0	43½	46	46	7	7	5	00
1895-96	0	46	34	00	5	27	4	41
1896-97	1	12	36	08	19	33	13	28*
1897-98	0	55	30	23	13	25	10	40

23. The reason of the present high rate is, however, owing in great measure to the introduction of a modified system of calculating the daily average delay on the two sections since October last. Formerly each transmitting station worked out its own averages, whereas now the actual time of acceptance of every message at Teheran and Karachi from the adjoining Administrations is inserted in the official instructions and is wired on, so that now Teheran works out Karachi's delay and Karachi Teheran's By this means all chances of arriving at inaccurate results, due to incorrect timing of messages by clerks, are eliminated.

24. Check of Errors.—The accuracy of transmission over the lines of the Department for the past two years is shown below. It will be seen that in this respect the year under review compares somewhat unfavourably with the preceding one, but the accuracy is still very satisfactory.

25. Complaints.—The number of complaints received for investigation amounted to 124, being 35 less than the total for the year 1896-97. Of this number, 76 were from Europe and 48 from India; 26 related to messages viâ Turkey, and 2 to local traffic.

The following table gives all details:—

Nature of Complaint.	Received from Europe.	Received from India.	Total.
Non-deliveries	19	16	35
Non-deliveries due to insufficient address	2	3	5
Mis-deliveries	2	2	4
Delays	9	5	14
Errors	22	2	24
Refund of reply deposits not used	6	9	15
Miscellaneous references	16	11	27
TOTAL	76	48	124

Of the above, 44 were not admitted by the Administrations concerned, or are still being investigated by them. Of the remaining 80 this Department is responsible for 12 only.

OFFICES.

26. The number of offices open to the public throughout the year (excluding those on the Teheran and Meshed (Persian Government) line) was, in the * Eastern Company's route interrupted in March 1897.

Persian Gulf Section 8, and in the Persian Section 9. The temporary Telegraph Office, which was opened for the use of the Political Agent, Southern Baluchistan at Lyari, in the Lus Beyla district, on 28th October 1896, was closed on 30th April 1897. The expenses on this account were charged to the Political Department.

ESTABLISHMENT.

27. At the close of the year the strength of the signalling establishment, including four Inspectors in the Persian Section, stood at—

General service civilian clerks	58
Unattached list: Non-commissioned officers of Royal Engineers	8
Local service signallers	30
Postal employé	1
TOTAL	97

28. The following casualties occurred during the year:—

Resignations:—2 general service clerks (pensioned); 1 N.C.O. (returned to military duty); 1 officer of cable ship "Patrick Stewart;" 2 local service signallers (pensioned).

Murdered:—1 Temporary Superintendent.

Died:—1 general service clerk.

CABLES.

29. The lengths of the various cable sections on the 31st March 1897 and 1898 were as follows:—

Cables.	1896-97. Knots.	1897-98. Knots.

showing an increase in length of ·134 since last year, due to repairs In addition to the above there is a seven-core Fowler-Waring cable from the Karachi Harbour to the Central Telegraph Office, 1·414 knots in length.

30. This Department also keeps the following cables in working order:—

(i) The Harbour Defence Revised System, composed as follows:—

	Statute miles.
From Customs Cable House through Junction Box to Marsh Fort (Harbour Cables)	6·703
From Junction Box to Manora and Beach Forts (Fowler-Waring Cables)	1·328

31. Summary of the History of the Cables and their Electrical and Mechanical Condition during the year 1897-98.

No 1. Fao-Bushire Gutta-percha Cable of 1864.—One partial earth fault occurred in this cable during the past year; it was removed in January 1898 at 60·612 knots from Fao. The sheathing was found to be deeply pitted by the action of sea-shells and weed. Reviewing the past history of this cable since 1886, it would appear that toredo insect faults are now common between 25 and 65 knots from Fao, and when making future repairs in this length, brass taped core will be used. The electrical condition of this cable during the year was practically the same as the year previous, namely, 38 megohms per knot. There is, however, a marked difference between the insulation to the east and west of 76 knots from Fao, the former being 212 and the latter (78·5 knots) 82 megohms per knot. The maintenance of this cable at a high point of insulation is not considered necessary, and as it works well, its electrical condition may be accepted as satisfactory.

No. 2. Bushire-Jask Gutta-percha Cable of 1885.—Only one fault, a partial earth, occurred; this was near Bushire cable house in the shore end, and was easily removed. Since this cable was laid in 1885 there have been no faults due to corrosion, and consequently its mechanical condition is probably fairly satisfactory. The insulation of the cable is now 227·5 megohms per knot, and although this is a good deal lower than last year (326 megohms) it may be considered good.

No. 3. Bushire-Jask India-rubber Cable of 1869.—This cable has not been disturbed during the year, and the fault which appeared in it in September 1897 does not affect its satisfactory working. As pointed out in last year's report, in this cable there are lengths of 101·679 knots of original (1869) India-rubber Cable, and 135·597 knots of original (1864) Gutta-percha Cable which have been inserted at various times. Thus nearly half the section is composed of old cable which may require renewal shortly. The average insulation before it became faulty in September 1897 was 60 megohms per knot. The fault has too high a resistance to permit of its being localised, and with this exception the electrical condition may be accepted as satisfactory.

No. 4. Jask-Manora Gutta-percha Cable of 1864.—This cable has been repaired twice during the year, namely, on the 2nd May, a partial earth, and on 30th August, a total break in old cable. The composition of this cable now includes about 77 knots of the old 1864 cable and 18 knots of old India-rubber 1869 cable. This may require renewal shortly. Its insulation at the end of the year was 65·5 megohms per knot, which is as high as can be expected.

Harbour Cables.—Two faults occurred during the past year; one of these was apparently a cut by a knife, and the other by a borer insect. Both were easily repaired.

The seven-core Fowler-Waring Cable in use from the harbour to the Central Station was accidentally cut by some workmen employed in repairing the water pipes, and the three core Fowler-Waring Cable laid from the local to the Manora Office was similarly cut. Measures to obviate such accidents in the future are under consideration.

Cable Houses and Cable Land Lines.

32. The cable houses and cable land lines were inspected during the year and found satisfactory. The cable land line at Jask has been replaced by a seven-core Fowler-Waring Cable during the year, and a similar type of cable will be laid at Bushire during 1898-99 when the cable ship visits Bushire next cold weather.

Manora Cable Factory.

33. The following is a summary of the work done in the Cable Factory during the past year:—

	Knots.
Cable manufactured at Manora	13·000
" picked up at sea and retaped	4·855
" recovered at sea and brought on charge	0·862
TOTAL .	18·717

	Knots.
Cable stripped for core	11·899
" " copper	0·298
Core used for leads and sent to Stores, Karachi	0·328
Gutta-percha core shipped to England	40·000

At present the following core is lying in the tanks:—

Gutta-percha strand core, 1st class, from England	21·000
" " " cable recovered at sea and stripped	3·900
Gutta-percha solid core, 2nd class, fit for harbour work and leads only	1·120
Also gutta-percha solid core cable, 3rd class, in short lengths, for sale or fencing purposes	0·5756

The Harbour front has been thoroughly overhauled and repaired.

34. The cable tanks have been tarred, all rust being first chipped off. Their condition just now may be considered fairly satisfactory; but extensive repairs will be required in a few years, when a general deterioration of the iron plates through old age and rust is expected.

35. Engine Boilers.—The old boiler has been replaced by a new one, and certificates for the year have been granted as usual by the boiler inspector. The old engine pump, not possessing sufficient capacity to feed the new Cornish boiler, had to be replaced by a Worthington pump, which works well.

36. Cable Machinery.—This remains the same as last year, and is in good order.

Interruptions on Cables.

37. Only one cable was totally interrupted through a fault due to corrosion during the year. This occurred in the Jask-Manora cable, and lasted 7 days, 18 hours, 31 minutes. There were short interruptions caused while repairing partial faults, aggregating 1 day, 9 hours, 17 minutes.

Repairs and Renewals of Cables.

38. The meaning of these words has now been defined, viz. :—

A Repair.—When a fault occurs, and the cable ship proceeds to remove it, and inserts a piece of good cable in the place of the faulty portion, otherwise mechanically good, it is a repair. If the fault is some distance from where the cable is grappled, and a long length of good cable has to be inserted, it is still a repair.

A Repair and Renewal.—If, on grappling during a repair, the cable is found to be in bad condition, and it becomes necessary to insert a new length of cable, it is no longer merely a repair, but also a renewal.

A Renewal.—When a length of cable, which has no specific fault or break, but which is known to be in bad mechanical condition through age or otherwise, is taken out and replaced by good cable, it is a renewal.

39. During the year only 13·457 knots of cable were expended, as against 41·769 knots for the previous year, namely, in repairs 4·717 and in repairs and renewals 8·740 knots. Of the cable recovered only 0·862 knots was sufficiently good to be brought into stock, the remainder being stripped for the core.

Cable Steamer "Patrick Stewart."

41. On the 1st April 1897, after her return from Ceylon, the Patrick Stewart was still in dock at Bombay undergoing repairs. She returned to Karachi on 5th idem.

42. On 26th April the vessel left Karachi with the Director and the Political Agent, Southern Baluchistan, to see whether quarantine arrangements at the Persian Gulf coast ports against India, where plague was raging, were efficient. As a fault had to be cut out of the Jask-Manora cable, about 72 knots from Jask, it was decided that the inspection of the coast ports between Karachi and Charbar and the cable repairs should be done on the one trip, so as to reduce the expenses to the Political Department as much as possible. The Political Department was therefore only charged for actual expenses incurred on their account and for the hire of the vessel for the time employed on purely political business. The ship returned to Karachi on 6th May.

43. On 24th August the Patrick Stewart again left Karachi in order to repair the Jask-Manora Cable, after doing which she returned on 2nd September. The vessel left for Bombay in October, and from November 1st to 22nd inclusive was in dock undergoing repairs. She returned to Karachi on 26th. From December 7th to January 19th the vessel was away from Karachi with the Director-in-Chief, Director, and the Electrician, on her annual tour of inspection of the Gulf stations. The vessel lay off Galeg from 12th to 26th December inclusive in connection with the murder of the late Mr. Graves. After visiting the various Gulf stations (Fao excepted owing to quarantine), and after repairing faults in the Bushire-Fao and Bushire-Jask Gutta-percha Cable of 1885, the vessel returned to Karachi on 19th January.

44. After this the Patrick Stewart was employed between Karachi and Gwadur in carrying troops and stores and line materials in connection with the rising of the Baluchis in the Mekran and the repair of the land lines between Pasni and Gwadur. Three trips were made between January 22nd and February 20th, since which date the vessel has been at Karachi.

During the year the vessel steamed 7,311 knots.

45. The earnings of the ship during the year amounted to R1,563-3-4, of which R124-8-0 were on account of passages and R1,438-11-4 on account of the hire of the Patrick Stewart by the Military Department. The latter amount, although earned during the year under review, will be adjusted during the current official year.

MEKRAN COAST LAND LINE.

46. The lengths of the various sections of this line on the 31st March 1898 were as follows, viz. :—

——	Miles of Line.	Miles of Wire.
Karachi to Sonmiani Branch	41·10	82·20
Sonmiani Branch	1·56	1·56
" " to Ormara	173·35	346·70
Ormara to Pasni Branch	89·65	179·30
Pasni Branch	3·20	3·20
" " to Gwadur	76·50	153·00
Gwadur to Charbar	117·18	234·36
Charbar to Jask	198·85	397·70
TOTAL	701·39	1398·02

Maintenance and Repairs to Land Lines.

47. Karachi-Gwadur Subdivision.—The full programme for the past working season could not be carried out owing to the rising of the Baluchis, which resulted in the destruction of the lines for many miles between Pasni and Gwadur, but the greater part of the subdivision was closely inspected by the Assistant Superintendent in charge, who carried out two renewals of wire, besides reconstructing the line where wrecked by the Baluchis.

Gwadur-Jask Subdivision.—Mr. E. Graves, Temporary Superintendent, held charge of the subdivision up to the 2nd December 1897, when he was murdered by a gang of Karwanis at the River Rapch, where he had arrived on inspection duty on 29th November. After this it was not considered safe for an European to march along the line, but later in the season the native artificer with his line gang did so and carried out such repairs as were necessary.

Interruptions on Land Lines.

48. During the year there have been six total interruptions, the aggregate duration of which amounted to 53 days, 11 hours, 52 minutes. Of this, 50 days, 13 hours, 32 minutes were caused by the wrecking of the lines during the late rising in Mekran. In addition to this, two other interruptions, lasting 1 day, 18 hours, 20 minutes, were due to wilful damage. Thus 52 days, 7 hours, 52 minutes are accounted for by wilful damage, the remaining 1 day, 4 hours being due to storms. As in the previous year, there was no total interruption on the Charbar-Jask section.

49. Of partial interruptions there have been 22, aggregating 13 days, 20 hours, 8 minutes, of which 13, lasting 7 days, 6 hours, 13 minutes, occurred in the Karachi-Gwadur subdivision, and 9, lasting 6 days, 13 hours, 55 minutes, in the Gwadur-Jask subdivision.

50. The causes of the faults are summarised as follows:—

	Number.	Duration Hours.
Definitely traced to preventable causes:—
Faulty construction	1	5
Faulty maintenance	12	157
Working parties	—	—
Other preventable causes	1	53
Unpreventable causes:—
Cyclones and storms	4	64
Floods	—	—
Animals and birds	1	9
Malice	4	876
Unknown causes	1	12

Of the 12 faults due to faulty maintenance, 11 were due to corrosion of the line wire.

Inspections.

51. All the offices of the Persian Gulf Section, with the exception of Fao, where quarantine regulations prevented landing, were inspected by the Director-in-Chief in company with the Director, and were generally found in a satisfactory state. The buildings were also in good order.

52. The Examiner of Telegraph Accounts also inspected the accounts of the Persian Gulf Section at Karachi during the year.

General Remarks.—Persian Gulf Section.

53. The year under review has been rendered remarkable by two chief events: (1) the murder of the late Mr. Graves at the Rapch River in Perso-Baluchistan in December 1897, and (2) the rising of the Baluchis in the Mekran under Sirdar Mehrab Khan, Gitchki of Kej, in January 1898.

54. A noticeable feature in the first case is the fact that our lines were never once cut between Charbar and Jask (the Rapch River is situated about half-way between these two places), nor was any damage done to the lines throughout the operations which followed the murder.

At the time of the outrage it was supposed that the object was simply "loot"; afterwards it was suggested that race hatred was at the bottom of the attack. It might, in some way, have been connected with the general state of unrest which existed at the time along the Persian Gulf Coast and on the North-West Frontier of India.

55. The second affair began with an attack on the Nazim of Mekran and the Indian Survey Parties in the Kej Valley, and was followed immediately by the wrecking of the telegraph line between Pasni and west of Gwadur.

Such a display of ill-will towards this Department has never been known since the erection of the telegraph in 1862. Whatever the reason that actuated them on this occasion, the work of destruction was carried out with a thoroughness not generally characteristic of Baluchis. No less than 370 posts had to be renewed and nearly 11 miles of wire, besides nearly 750 insulators, were required to repair the damage done.

56. On the 25th April 1897 the village, which is attached to the Jask Station, and the Persian Fort there, were surprised by a party of Bashkardis, who looted the shops of the native traders. The Persian Governor, instead of protecting the station, came to the telegraph buildings to seek protection. The result of this attack was the despatch from Bushire to Jask of a Persian garrison, consisting of 120 soldiers with a field gun. They did not, however, stay long, the whole force, including the Governor, returning to Bushire during May 1897, since when the fort has been garrisoned by Mustapha Khan, son of the late Mir Abdul Nubbee and Chief of Sudaich, who is in the pay of this Department.

57. The Superintendent at Bushire in his report for November 1897 wrote that there was still an impression there that the telegraphs were keeping back the rain. This was, of course, with reference to the trigonometrical bench-marks which had been destroyed by a mob in January 1897, but had been rebuilt in the following April, with much public ceremony, under the orders of the Political Resident at Bushire. At the end of the official year, i.e., on 31st March last, the general state of affairs at Bushire was still reported as being very disturbed.

PERSIAN SECTION.

58. Line Maintenance.—Only ordinary line repairs were carried out during the year.

59. Offices.—The mud roof of the joint signalling room of the Indo-European Telegraph Company and of this Department at Teheran was replaced by an iron roof, and some improvements and additions were made to the senior clerk's quarters. These works were done at the expense of the Persian Government, the building being their property. The office building at Shiraz was also much improved by that Government.

60. Interruptions.—There was one total interruption on this section lasting for 22 hours; this occurred at an altitude above the sea-level of about 7,000 feet, and was caused by accumulations of snow, which broke the wires in a great number of places along a distance of two miles.

61. The faults from all causes, including contacts between the wires, during the past three years have been:

Year.	1 Wire.		2 Wires.		3 Wires.
	Hours.	Mins.	Hours.	Mins.	Hours.	Mins.
1895-96	325	65	13	32	5	16
1896-97	606	0	17	12	20	53
1897-98	340	56	7	3	22	5

62. The causes of them are summarised as follows:—

	Number.	Duration. Hours.	Mins.
Definitely traced to preventable causes:—
Faulty construction and maintenance . . .	1	1	19
Working parties	1	0	48
Unpreventable causes:—
Cyclones and exceptional storms	3	29	43
Floods	1	47	15
Lightning	1	7	39
Snow	2	53	12
Fires	—	—	—
Trees falling other than those caused by cyclones .	—	—	—
Animals and birds	3	61	37
Malice	—	—	—
Other unpreventable causes	5	15	15
Unknown causes	13	52	1
Faults in offices	2	7	25

63. Wilful Damage.—There were 478 acts of wilful damage reported during the year, being 226 more than last year. They were distributed along the line as follows:—

Section.	From	To	No. of miles.	No. of Acts.
1st . .	Teheran . .	Ispahan . . .	247	138
2nd . .	Ispahan . .	Meshed-i-Meerghab, 88 miles north of Shiraz.	195	143
3rd . .	Meshedi-Meerghab	Mean Kotal, 60 miles south of Shiraz	131	143
4th . .	Mean Kotal.	Bushire . . .	102	54

The reason for the greater number of acts in the 2nd and 3rd sections is probably due to their being more frequented by the nomad Ilyats than the other two sections. The attention of Her Britannic Majesty's Minister and His Excellency the Mukhbar-ed-Dowlah has been requested to this. The amount claimed for damages from the Persian Government amounted to Krans 8,784.* Of this, Krans 1,672 has been collected locally, and the balance, 7,112, was deducted from the Jask royalty.

64. Wilful damage caused interruptions for the past four years as shown below:—

Year.	1 Wire.		2 Wires.		3 Wires.
	Hours.	Mins.	Hours.	Mins.	Hours.	Mins.
1894-95	150	38	42	16	Nil.

* NOTE.—360 krans=100 rupees at the present rate of exchange.

General Remarks.—Persian Section.

65 The principal events which occurred in Persia affecting this Department are as follows:—

His Excellency Ali Guli Khan Mukhbar-ed-Dowlah died on the 16th July 1897, and his son the Mukhbar-ul-Mulk succeeded him as Minister of Telegraphs on the 10th August. By the death of His Excellency the late Mukhbar, the Department has lost a great friend.

Three hundred soldiers mobbed the Shiraz Office on one occasion, demanding arrears of pay. On two occasions the Kazerun Office was invaded by a mob, complaining of the high price of bread and of ill-treatment, and on one occasion a crowd collected at Dehbeed Station, complaining of being looted by Arabs. On each occasion the Persian Authorities took action and the men dispersed.

Two burglaries were committed and one attempted.

On two occasions Inspectors while marching were threatened, and on two occasions line men were fired on.

Once the post bag was robbed.

The Mashelah (swampy ground) near Bushire was overrun by armed Tangistanies (hill men) in February and March 1898, so that the route under the line was pronounced unsafe, and several murders were committed near and in Bushire.

Buildings in Persia.

66. In consequence of the stock of sheet iron for roofing purposes having become exhausted in the Teheran market, the completion of the iron roofing to the buildings for the clerks' quarters at Teheran has had to be postponed, and there is still some work to be done, connected with laying out and draining the ground, etc.

The new residence for the Director at Teheran was occupied by him in October 1897, and the completion report has now been submitted.

The title deeds of the ground purchased for both the Director's and clerks' quarters are deposited in the safe in the charge of the Superintendent, Teheran Station.

Medical.

67. Doctors Odling, C.M.G., and Scully, Medical and Assistant Medical Superintendents of this Department at Teheran and Shiraz respectively, were present throughout the year. Doctor Odling also holds the appointment of Legation Surgeon at Teheran since 1892, by permission of the Government of India.

The health of the staff was on the whole good. One clerk died at Shiraz in March 1898 of pleurisy.

The free dispensaries at Teheran, Ispahan, and Shiraz are much appreciated and used by the people.

Meteorology.

68. Similarly to last year, telegrams reporting the state of the weather in Persia were sent to the Meteorological Reporter, India, from the 15th November 1897 to the 15th March 1898.

MESHED LINE.

69. Mr. S. Butcher, Acting Assistant Superintendent, took over charge of this line on 15th May 1897, and executed the necessary repairs between 10th October 1897 and 28th March 1898. From the 29th December 1897 to 9th February 1898 work was stopped by snow and frost. Six hundred and ninety-six new juniper poles were erected, 106 old poles were dug up and re-erected after rotten wood had been cut off, and 700 field service insulators were fixed. No money was received from the Persian Government during this year towards the maintenance of the line, and therefore the expenditure was limited to the R20,000 sanctioned by the Government of India.

70. Offices.—The office at Aiwanikief had again to be moved this year, and the office at Sabzewar was also moved into another building.

71. Interruptions, Meshed Line.—The interruptions to communication from all causes during the past three years are given in the statement below :—

—	1895-96.		1896-97.		1897-98.
	Hours.	Mins.	Hours.	Mins.	Hours.	Mins.
Faulty construction and maintenance	—		—		3	20

Faults in offices	118	37	Nil.		65	28
Unknown causes	72	20	7	48	Nil.
TOTAL	397	18	186	25	184	24

Deducting faults in offices, the total number of hours of interruption due to other causes works out thus :—

	Hours.	Mins.
1895-96	279	41
1897-98	118	56

The Persian clerk who caused 65 hours 28 minutes interruption under the head "Faults in Offices" has since been dismissed by the Persian Government, together with another clerk and two gholams (line guards) for stealing insulators for the value of their iron stalks.

72. Wilful Damage.—One hundred and ninety-seven cases of wilful damage occurred, in which 183 insulators and 57 posts were broken or stolen and 55 yards of wire were carried away.

The figures were for the years :—

	Acts.
1896-97	169

There is thus an increase of 28 over last year, but the improvement over 1895-96 and before continues to be satisfactory.

The amount of Krans 200 was recovered from local Governors, etc., on account of compensation.

73. Traffic.—The table below shows the amount of paid conversational traffic, etc., carried by the line during the past three years :—

Year.	Total paid conversation and State messages.	State messages only.
1895-96	3,423 krans	814 krans.
1897-98	2,529 ,,	1,278 ,, 50 g.

74. There were no events of a political nature which affected the line or offices on the Meshed line.

STORES.

75. The principal items of expenditure under this head have been as follows :—

Stores purchased in India	2,750	10	1
London stores, including freight, landing charges and exchange	79,215	6	0
Stores from other Departments	1,814	5	3

The following were the principal issues of stores :—

Repairs to cable	31,452	0	8
Cable steamer	18,758	9	6

The issues to repairs and renewals to the Persian Gulf land line amounted to R21,353, and were heavy, owing to the line being wrecked for some miles by the Baluchis. The issues to offices in that section amounted to R13,541 and to offices in the Persian Section to R6,715-4-2.

Personnel.

76. The Director, Persian Gulf Section, recommends to favourable notice the following officers of his staff for good services rendered after Mr. Graves' murder and the destruction of the line by the Baluchis in Mekran:—Messrs. E. Woodsell and R. C. Campbell, Assistant Superintendents, and Mr. W. H. Janes, General Service Clerk, the last of whom has been rewarded with a personal allowance of R25 per mensem. Lieutenant-Colonel Wells and Mr. Sealy also report that their thanks are due to the staff generally for good services rendered throughout the year, and their thanks are warmly joined in by me. To the above Directors also my special acknowledgments are due for the continued assistance they have given in maintaining this, the Indo-European route, as the most accurate and quickest of the telegraph routes to India.

It is again my pleasing duty to mention Mr. C. E. J. Twisaday, the senior clerk in my office, who during my absence in India, from November 1897 to March 1898, was in charge of the current duties of my office, and who performed those duties to my entire satisfaction.

INDIA OFFICE,
10th November 1898.

B. T. FFINCH,
Director-in-Chief.

NOTE.—Traffic earnings are primarily worked in francs in accordance with the existing Convention, but in converting the francs into rupees a uniform rate is not adopted. For the receipts from the Indian Department for traffic interchanged with it, a rate of francs 25·21 to the pound sterling is taken; and from sterling to rupees the conversion is made at the latest rate obtained by the Secretary of State for demand bills which is communicated to the Check Office. On the other hand, for the receipts from or payments to the Indo-European Company and Turkey, which are settled in London in sterling, a uniform rate of francs 25 to the pound (in accordance with the Convention) is adopted, and the conversion to rupees made at the average rate of the Secretary of State's drawings for the year, which in the present case is 15·35391005*d*. to the rupee.

Note reviewing the Administration Report of the Indo-European Telegraph Department for the year 1897-98.

The following statement shows the financial results of working the Department during the past five years :—

Year.	Total Capital Outlay.	Gross Receipts.*	Expenditure.	Net Receipts.	Percentage of
					Net Receipts to Capital.	Expenditure to Gross Receipts.

1897-98	1,15,35,814	15,40,153	7,81,981	7,58,172	6·57	50·77

* This represents the revenue of the Department after adjustments made in accordance with the provisions of the Joint Purse arrangement.

The Capital Account was decreased by Rs. 13,961.

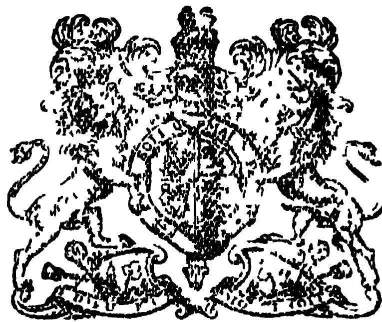
The total earnings of the Department show an increase of Rs. 55,646, as compared with the previous year. This is due to the fact that the traffic with India, which fell off considerably in 1896-97, more than recovered itself during the year under review. On the other hand, the traffic with places beyond India shows a slight decrease. The increase under miscellaneous revenue is due to larger sales of old cable core and other unserviceable stores.

The expenditure shows an increase of Rs. 10,504. This is mainly due to the large outlay on repairs to the Mekran Coast land lines necessitated after the destruction of the line by the Baluchis and the murder of Mr. Graves.

The net result is a profit of Rs. 7,58,172, which gives a dividend of 6·57 per cent. on the capital, against 6·17 per cent. in the previous year. When it is remembered that the capital of the Department is a very inflated one, and includes the cost of lines and cables which have long since been abolished, and sundry political charges, it will be seen that the dividends now earned are very satisfactory, and show that the lines are valuable from a commercial as well as from a political point of view.

The proportion of Indian traffic actually carried by the Indo-European route is still largely in excess of the proportion on which the Joint Purse was based, but the trans-Indian traffic is considerably less (see paragraphs 9 and 10 of the Report).

Australasian traffic shows a large falling-off during 1897-98, the total amount being 54,474*l.* less than in the previous year, and the Department's share is 1,384*l.* less than last year. The sum drawn out of the Purse is, however, 3,293*l.* more than the amount earned by the Department in 1889 when the Australasian Message Fund was formed.



The general working of the Department continues to be very satisfactory. Only one total interruption to traffic between Teheran and Karachi occurred during the year, and only lasted 22 hours 56 minutes. The cables and land lines are, considering their age, in a sound condition. The speed and accuracy of transmission are also satisfactory.

The murder of Mr. Graves and the rising of the Baluchis on the Mekran Coast were fully reported at the time. Considerable damage was done to the land lines during the latter disturbance, but the cables fortunately worked well, and the through traffic was not interfered with. The lines have now been repaired, and the districts appear to be more settled.

INDIAN CONTRACT ACT AMENDMENT BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS moved that the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to amend the Indian Contract Act, 1872, be taken into consideration. He said :—"On the last occasion when this Bill was before this Council I explained its principles very fully. I do not think it is necessary to repeat that explanation. Since then we have very carefully considered the Bill in Select Committee. We have not altered its principle, but we have very carefully considered its terms, and I hope it returns to Council improved in language by being made clearer and more precise. In amending the language of the Bill we have been careful to use language which is familiar in English Courts of Equity so as to draw the English decisions to aid the Indian Courts. We have added some illustrations, and in particular we have added one illustration to show that the Act, or the Bill when it becomes an Act, is not intended in any way to apply to, or to affect, bonâ fide business transactions. We have tried to make it clear that what we aim at are cases where one man has another more or less under his power and where there are relations existing between them which enable one man to put unfair pressure on another, and that the measure has nothing to do, so to speak, with people coming into communication in the open market.

"I have only one further remark to make at this stage. Various hypothetical cases, I might almost say fanciful cases, have been suggested to us where possibly the discretion given to the Courts by this Bill might be abused and where possible hard cases might arise. I admit that you can, whenever you give a discretion, or wherever you give power to any authority, suggest hypothetical hard cases. It is an essential postulate of all legislation that when you confer powers and when you confer discretion on any authority, that discretion or those powers will be used with a certain amount of reasonableness, with a certain amount of commonsense, and with a certain amount of knowledge of the world. If you do not predicate that, then all beneficial legislation is simply impossible. Take for instance the Penal Code—an Act which has worked well for forty years. I would ask Hon'ble Members is there a single operative section in the Penal Code which would be tolerable for ten minutes unless it was worked with a certain amount of commonsense and fairness? You must in legislation, when you confer a discretion upon a responsible authority, assume that that authority has some discretion—some reasonable amount of commonsense If you do not admit that, well then I must admit on my part that all legislation of a beneficial character is impossible, and that it were much better that this Council should not exist."

The Hon'ble THE MAHARAJA OF DARBHANGA said:—"My Lord, although I had not the honour of being a member of Your Lordship's Council during the earlier stages of the Bill, I feel that the measure is of such importance that I should not give a silent vote upon it. The broad principle involved is at the same time just and necessary for the equitable decision of a numerous class of cases which come before judicial tribunals, and it purports to embody the results of the decisions of the English Courts of Equity which the Privy Council have declared applicable to India. How far it has succeeded I leave to the lawyers to judge. The main design of the measure is to protect the weak and simple from the clutches of unscrupulous money-lenders, and I hope it will in part help to solve the problem of land indebtedness, which has long been engaging the attention of Government. The serious thing about the Bill seems to be, as His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab remarks in his letter to Your Excellency's Government on the subject, the dangerously wide discretion which the Bill seeks to confer on the Munsifs and Subordinate Judges in this country. I cannot help fearing that the Bill if passed into law may lead to considerable increase in litigation and to more appeals, and that the only certain gainers will be the unscrupulous legal practitioners in the Mufassal, who will do their very best to foster disputes between the money-lender and the agriculturist and also to apply the law to contracts it was never intended to affect. If, however, the Subordinate Courts will use their authority with proper discretion and with a due regard to equity and commonsense, I trust that the amendment of the Contract Act may be a boon to the agriculturist borrower without unduly affecting the stability of the contracts by which the daily business of the country is carried on. There can be no doubt that the alterations made in Select Committee are in the right direction.

My Lord, I think that even the most determined opponents of the Bill will admit that an earnest effort has been made to recast the more objectionable sections in the original draft, and I think that they have to a large extent succeeded. I hope that the placing of the measure upon the Statute Book may be productive of the beneficial results that have been anticipated from it, and that it may not produce the evils which so many fear. Not being a lawyer I am forced to take it a good deal on trust. I feel I am not on a footing of equality with the Hon'ble the Legal Member as regards legal knowledge, and had the Bill been passed in its original form and worked injustice I am not certain that I might not have evaded responsibility by pleading that my consent had been obtained by the exercise of undue influence on his part owing to that want of equality."

The Hon'ble MR. REES said that he would support the Bill, having signed the Report of the Select Committee, and would make his remarks on the principle when moving his amendment.

The Hon'ble MR. SMEATON said:—"I support the Bill as finally amended by the Select Committee, whose modifications appear to me to be judicious and to remove many of the misgivings to which the Bill in its original form gave rise. I cannot help, however, concurring in some of the remarks made by the Hon'ble Member who has just spoken—the Maharaja of Darbhanga. The risk of the abuse or at least misuse of the very wide discretionary power conferred on subordinate and often inexperienced Courts certainly exists, as has been pointed out in very strong language by His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab. But I think in legislation which is designed to mitigate a widespread and serious evil risks of that description must be run. The relief to be given by an amending Act of this kind to the vast body of agriculturists, who, we are very well aware, are, in certain provinces at least, in the grip of the money-lender—that relief must, I think, be held to outweigh any risks of the kind which have been described by His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab."

The Hon'ble NAWAB FAIYAZ ALI KHAN said:—"My Lord, the Bill to amend the Indian Contract Act of 1872, now before Your Lordship's Council, is one of such intrinsic importance that I beg Your Excellency's permission to offer a few observations in regard to it.

"The object of this measure, my Lord, is, as has been explained in the Statement of Objects and Reasons by His Honour Sir John Woodburn, who introduced it last year, 'not to interfere with the freedom of contract where consent is free.' But it is intended to give the Courts a wider discretion in coming to an equitable decision in certain classes of inequitable contracts, where their power appears to be rather limited. Cases are well known where the Courts have refused to go behind the letter of the contracts however hard and inequitable and induced by undue influence, and this has resulted, as no doubt most of us are aware, in the complete ruin of many old respectable families. Contracts to secure debts have particularly led to such disastrous results.

"My Lord, the British Government is based on sympathy for its subjects, justice and generosity, and instances might be multiplied where Her Majesty's Government has, with that sympathy and generosity, come to the aid of Her subjects and has relieved the weak from the oppressions of the strong. Indeed, I may say that every measure taken by Her Majesty's Government is characterised by the British sense of justice, the essential element of which is to protect the weak against the strong. It is this sense of justice which has led the Government to introduce some important changes into the present Indian Contract Act, which in some respects has been found to be unsuited to the present state of things.

"In many cases of contract to borrow money, the Courts have, as I have observed above, refused to grant relief to the debtor against the most inequitable and unconscionable conditions obtained by the creditor by the exercise of undue influence. This was, I believe, in a large measure due to the impression that under the existing law the Courts were bound to maintain the integrity of private contracts. The Government could not, however, look with indifference to this process of destruction of the landholders and agriculturists at the hands of the astute usurers and money-lenders—a process that has been going on for many years past to the detriment of the best interests of the country.

"It was of course possible for the Government to provide by law that an exorbitant rate of interest shall not be enforced or that effect shall not be given to an oppressive condition. But such a provision could not go to the root of the evil, which it is the aim of the Bill now before Your Lordship's Council to remedy; for it is a well-known fact that the money-lender in India usually evades every attempt of the law to restrain him from taking an unfair advantage of the position of his debtor, by causing him to execute a bond for the repayment of a larger amount than the amount actually advanced to him. It seems to me, therefore, that the Government has wisely undertaken to eradicate the evil from the root and to amend the law in such a manner as to secure an equitable determination of the rights and liabilities of the parties to a contract. This object could not be fulfilled better than by amending the Indian Contract Act in two important respects, namely, (1) as regards undue influence, and (2) as regards penalties.

"That the existing law in these respects has been largely improved and these two important expressions have been better defined, will be evident from a reading of the Bill itself as amended by the Select Committee, and I do not propose to go into the details of the amendments made by the Select Committee, beyond saying that, lucid and clear as the language of the Bill as it now stands is, the provisions of it cannot but be beneficial and succeed in achieving the objects which the Legislature have in view. I beg, therefore, to submit that I generally approve of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, and I feel pretty sure that Her Majesty's subjects will hail this measure with delight.

"There is only one point as to which, my Lord, I beg to ask permission to say something. It may possibly be urged that it will be hard on the money-lenders and other persons interested that retrospective effect should be given to the provisions of this Bill. As to this, all I can say is that the object is a most benevolent one—to remove an existing evil; and the sooner that evil is remedied the better for the interests of the country. There is another point of view from which this objection can be considered. The provisions of the Bill, it seems to me, are based on the assumption that contracts induced by 'undue influence,' as defined in the Bill itself, are, to the extent to which they are so induced, inequitable; and if the correctness of this assumption is admitted,—as I believe it is admitted on all hands,—contracts tainted by such 'undue linfluence' have no claim to the protection of law; and thus the date of the execution of the bonds representing such contracts is obviously immaterial I, therefore, most cordially welcome the provisions of sub-section (3) of clause 1 of the Bill.

"With these few observations, my Lord, I beg to support the Bill, as amended by the Select Committee, the principles underlying it and the provisions by which effect is to be given to those principles."

The Hon'ble MR. MEHTA said:—"My Lord, there is no branch of law or legislation in dealing with which it is so easy to go wrong, and in which mistakes are so fraught with far-reaching consequences, than the branch with which the Bill before the Council proposes to deal. There are men who firmly believe in imposing honesty and morality by legislation, as our ancestors believed in enforcing decorum and propriety of manners by sumptuary laws. They think that it is only necessary for the State to fix a particular rate of interest, and usury would be annihilated; to prohibit the sale and alienation of their lands, and agriculturists would be saved from ruining themselves; to make all money-lending transactions liable to discretionary revision and adjustment, and Jews and Marwaris would become reformed characters, and creditors would become philanthropists. Such men take no account of the facts of human nature and the laws of its energy. When their remedies only succeed in driving the disease into another and perhaps a more vital part, they do not blame their own shortsightedness, but the perversity of social forces. On the other hand, there are doctrinaires who carry their fanaticism or superstition for the sanctity of contracts to such a length that they would sanction even murder by contract, like the grave senators of Venice who were prepared to enforce Shylock's bond until woman's wit came to their aid. The Common Law of England embodied nearly as solemn a view of the inviolable nature of contracts, and very nearly justified Shylock's retort to Gratiano,

'Till thou canst rail the seals from off my bond,
'Thou but offendst thy lungs to speak so loud.'

"Even in the English Courts of Equity the rigour with which the sanctity of a seal was enforced was only very gradually relaxed. As pointed out by Lord Campbell, when the foundations of the equitable jurisdiction of the Court of Chancery were first systematically laid by Lord Nottingham, 'the father of Equity,' he made it a guiding rule,—never, in the absence of fraud, to interfere with contracts or with obligations solemnly contracted.

'If a man,' said he, 'will improvidently bind himself up by a voluntary deed, and not reserve a liberty to himself by a power of revocation, this Court will not loose the fetters he hath put upon himself, but he must lie down under his own folly.'

"The boundaries of equitable jurisdiction in this behalf continued, however, to be slowly and cautiously enlarged and extended, till while, on the one hand, it was strictly held,

'that every person is entitled to dispose of his property in such manner and upon such terms as he chooses, and whether his bargains are wise or discreet, or profitable or unprofitable or otherwise, are considerations not for Courts of Justice, but for the party himself to deliberate upon;'

and on the other hand,

'relief was given whenever his peculiar conditions and circumstances placed him under some disability.'

"These principles carefully matured by experience have not been lost sight of in framing the Bill before the Council, and I think the Hon'ble Members who have successively been in charge of it may well be congratulated upon the sober and cautious piece of legislation which they have turned out. They have wisely steered clear of the dangerous rocks which menaced them on either side. Nothing would have been more fraught with mischief than to treat the masses of the agricultural population almost as infants, incapable by their ignorance and weakness from making contracts for themselves with money-lenders, and for whom, therefore, the Courts should be empowered to arrange terms retrospectively. We are familiar with the piteous tales which are told of the helplessness of the raiyat gripped in the claws of the saukar bird of prey. But the picture is not altogether true to nature. The raiyat is no doubt illiterate and uneducated. But those who know him as he really is, and not as he exists in the imagination of people who like to pose as mà-bàp to him, know that he possesses a very fair share of shrewdness and intelligence, and can negotiate a bargain with the saukar with a clear comprehension of his interest and position, and even with some degree of cunning. Why he is not able to cope with his creditor is, not because of his ignorance, but in consequence of his necessitous position. This position, it must not be forgotten, is as largely owing to the pressure of the State landlord as to the grasping rapacity of the money-lender. To speak only of the Bombay Presidency, it was admitted by Sir Theodore Hope, himself a Bombay Revenue-officer, in his speech in this Council in introducing the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Bill, that 'to our revenue system must in candour be ascribed some share in the indebtedness of the raiyat.' The Commission appointed in 1891 to enquire into the working of the Relief Act emphatically reported that.—

'there could be no question that the rigidity of the revenue assessment system is one of the main causes which lead the raiyats of the Dekkhan into fresh debt.'

"The proper remedy in such a case is not to treat the symptom simply, but to remove the cause. To take away from the raiyat the power of making binding contracts for himself would be more calculated to aggravate than to alleviate the malady, while it would be unjust to the saukar to have his terms and conditions retrospectively settled by Courts which could neither enter into the intricate complexities of the respective positions of the two parties, nor could have the means of taking into account the element of average risk of a general business which to a certain extent must rightly affect the severity of each individual contract But while it would be thus both mischievous and unjust to treat raiyats or agriculturists in their relations to saukars as quasi infants whose weakness and ignorance required special protection, there is, on the other hand, no reason whatever why contracts between saukars and raiyats should not be treated on the same footing as all other contracts, whenever extraneous circumstances dominate the bargain and enable one party to take advantage of another beyond the adjustment which the circumstances, conditions and necessities affecting the contract in itself would require or warrant. The equitable jurisdiction of the English Courts has slowly but increasingly recognized the right of interference in such cases. In the admirably terse and clear speech in which my Hon'ble friend in charge of the Bill moved to refer it to a Select Committee, he claimed that the new legislation proposed to invest Indian Courts with equitable powers which had long been possessed by English Courts. I am not prepared to say that this statement may not be open to challenge in some degree. If it were quite accurate, the need for the proposed legislation would not be very urgent, for our Courts have already found a way to go somewhat beyond the provisions of the Indian Contract Act in this behalf, which, it must be remembered, 'defines and amends only certain parts of the law relating to contracts,' and to administer relief in most of the cases covered by the equitable doctrines of English law founded upon the existence or presumption of actual or constructive fraud. It cannot also be denied that English equity has hitherto failed to reach many cases, which it is hoped to reach by the present Bill, or there would have been scarcely any need for the recommendations of the Select Committee on money-lending for the interposition of the legislature to remove the evils attendant on transactions with professional money-lenders. It is true, as pointed out by the Hon'ble Member, that the general principle deduced by text-writers of authority embraces all the variety of relations in which dominion may be exercised by one person over another. But the Hon'ble Member knows that English Courts do not deduce cases from general principles, but that the elasticity and generality of principles are firmly restrained by decided precedents which strictly curb the playfulness of idiosyncracy within known limits. But while the measure before the Council is devised to go further than the existing precedents of equitable jurisdiction in England, the Hon'ble the Legal Member is perfectly right in contending that we are not embarking on an unknown sea. The step in advance which we are taking is in the direction in which experience shows that we can advance with reasonable safety. It will be observed that, under the Bill as amended in Select Committee, it will not be enough for the purpose of bringing a contract under the purview of the new addition to the definition of 'undue influence' that one contracting party is richer, or stronger, or poorer than the other. A party does not come within the section simply because, for example, he lends money to another. Besides and outside the relation created by a particular contract, there must be a relation already subsisting between the parties which places one at an advantage over the other. The dominating relation, so to say, must not be the creation of the particular transaction in question, but must emanate from something already subsisting before and outside it. The amendments in Select Committee have also made important changes as to the way in which the Courts should proceed when the existence of a dominating relation is established. Where such relation arises out of a position of active confidence in which one party stands to the other, the law applicable will be the existing law, as contained in section 111 of the Indian Evidence Act, which is in accordance with a principle long acknowledged and administered in Courts of Equity in England and America, and which is that he who bargains in a matter of advantage with a person who places a confidence in him is bound to show that a proper and reasonable use has been made of that confidence, and the burden of establishing its perfect fairness, adequacy and equity is cast upon the person in whom the confidence is reposed (Story on Equity Jurisprudence, pp. 309-322). In cases in which the dominating relation is not coupled with a position of active confidence, there is another condition to be satisfied, also in accordance with a rule of English equity, before the burden of proof is imposed on the person occupying the dominant position. In such cases the Courts will not interfere till the transaction appears on the face of it or upon evidence given in the case to be unconscionable. The propriety and wisdom of this rule is not in itself disputed. But it is contended that the law will be left in a very vague condition, as no definition of what is unconscionable is provided in the Bill. I confess that this criticism strikes me as being not quite well-informed. There are words which, in law as in everything else, do not require definition and cannot indeed be defined, but which are all the same perfectly well understood. In this respect the word 'unconscionable' is, in law, something like the word 'jingo' in politics. As Mr. Morley said the other day, it is not possible to define a jingo, but he knew him when he saw him. It is the same with the word 'unconscionable.' It is incapable of definition. Even Lord Hardwicke, who reared the superb structure of English equity on the foundations laid by Lord Nottingham, failed in the attempt when, in Chesterfield v. Jansen (2 Ves. 155), he tried to indicate in his enumeration of different kinds of frauds that unconscionable bargains were—

'such bargains as no man in his senses and not under delusion would make on the one hand, and no honest and fair man would accept on the other, being inequitable and unconscientious bargains.'

" Mr. Story is not more successful when he says that to make a bargain unconscionable—

"such unconscionableness should be made out as would (to use an expressive phrase) shock the conscience.'

" But, though indefinable in itself, the word is perfectly familiar to equity jurisprudence and is well understood in practice. It can best be interpreted in each particular case in the light of its own particular facts and circumstances. Decided cases show what facts and circumstances make a contract unconscionable, and, what is equally important, when they do not. It must be remembered that our Civil Courts are not ill qualified to deal with the legal questions arising from the use of the word. In the Bombay Presidency at least, they are now manned in the lowest grades by men who have passed through the pretty severe legal training which is enforced by our Universities before conferring the degree of Bachelor of Laws. The Subordinate Judges have all gone through a careful study of the elements of English equity, and are acquainted with its decisions. But if any prepossessions or idiosyncracies have at any time any tendency to betray them into either undue timidity or wild extravagance, the High Courts are over them to correct and to direct. I think, therefore, that the Bill before the Council may be launched on its voyage without serious misgivings. It is never safe to dogmatize emphatically with regard to legislation affecting the infinite complexities of the common intercourse and business of human life, but it is not presumptuous to hope that this measure will prove to be a sound, cautious and careful piece of legislation which, without breaking out into mischief in unexpected quarters, may be reasonably expected to do some good."

The Hon'ble MR. CHITNAVIS said :—" My Lord, I fully sympathize with the main purpose of the Bill, which I take to be the relief of poor and ignorant persons from the ruinous consequences of such transactions as they might have been induced to enter into under the influence of wily men whose help they had been led to seek at a moment of distress. So far the proposed law seems to be all right in principle, but the question is whether it will secure the desired end. It must never be forgotten that in the present state of our country all artificial restrictions upon lending and borrowing money would make the terms for the borrower harder than ever. It is doubtful whether all the checks that human ingenuity can devise will come to the borrower's help when the saukar makes up his mind to take undue advantage of each opportunity that offers itself to him. There are as many methods by which a lender can harass a helpless borrower as there are for a borrower to harass the helpless lender when repayment of loan has to be made. Of these, no Court in this country can take any cognizance whatever. My honest conviction is that this matter of lending and borrowing money must be allowed to be regulated by the law of supply and demand. No man with a grain of sense will pay a higher rate of interest if he can elsewhere borrow money on more favourable terms. The natural remedy, I think, must come by competition among money-lenders, by the demand there is for money, by the nature of the personal credit which the borrower possesses, by the facilities for recovering money, etc.

"It seems to me that the position of a rural money-lender in India is not well understood by many, and too frequent appeals are made to facts in England to justify a proposed legislation in this country. India, however, is not England. In England and other European countries there are many agricultural and other banks, co-operative societies and many institutions of a philanthropic character which can give the needed relief to the poor of the country. But here, in this country, where, as is stated in certain quarters, '40 per cent. of the population go through life on insufficient food,' the capitalist (i.e., the saukar,) takes the place of all these institutions, and it is to him alone that the raiyat has to look up for his preservation and for the preservation of his family. Nor is the raiyat's confidence misplaced in a majority of cases. The saukar is generally a man of business, and, as he is also a landholder, he seldom resorts to oppressive measures for the recovery of his dues. In many cases he consents to forego some portion of the stipulated interest when the amount due is paid to him without the necessity of resorting to Law Courts. When the borrower has got sufficient credit and the security is good, the saukar rarely takes more than what is reasonable. In other cases, his terms will have to cover various risks, such as the costs of a law-suit, the trouble and expense he might be put to in his endeavour to recover his dues, as well as the risks attendant on variation of prices, etc. In most cases he is not such a tyrant as he is believed to be. The reason why we hear so much against him in these days is because the tendency now is to bring to light cases where injustice is done to borrowers, but many hundreds of cases where the lender has shown the greatest possible consideration to the borrower never see the light of the day. As the saukar generally happens to be a landholder also, and as he has got to depend upon his raiyat customers for the tillage of his land, he cannot afford to be a Shylock towards them. Whenever a debt becomes ripe for payment, most saukars agree to forego a portion of the accumulated interest. In an agricultural country like India, any legislation which is likely to tell hardly on these men and render their position precarious will, I fear, have the effect of restricting loans and increasing litigation by encouraging borrowers at the instance of lawyers to take advantage of the large discretion left to Courts. No doubt, it is extremely desirable that the poor should be saved from the clutches of the money-lending classes, but at the same time it must never be forgotten that it is the demand on the part of the borrower that brings into existence the lender, and that the money-lending classes have a right to the protection of the law in all honest contracts entered into by them. What I fear is that this protection has not been sufficiently assured in the Act before us. Honest and conscientious money-lenders will henceforth feel frightened to unloose their purse-strings, and leave the field open to unscrupulous and dishonest people.

"Being anxious, however, that a measure conceived in a spirit of fairness and generosity may not in its operation come to defeat its own purposes, I have carefully attended to the details of the Bill as settled by the Select Committee, and as the result of such consideration have decided to move the amendment which stands in my name and which I intend moving later on with Your Excellency's kind permission."

The Hon'ble MR. LATOUCHE said :—"The amendments made by the Select Committee have, I think, removed the objections—some of them of considerable weight—which existed against the Bill as originally drafted The definition of undue influence has been much improved, and the burden of proving the existence of undue influence ordinarily rests, as in the general law of evidence, on the person who impeaches a contract. It is only in one class of cases that the person in a position to dominate the will of the other party to a contract is bound to prove the absence of undue influence.

"That class of cases is when the transaction appears on the face of it or on the evidence adduced to be unconscionable. This means that the burden of proof is only shifted if the contract appears to be such as no honest or fair man would allow another person to enter into with him.

"Many of the objections urged against the measure are objections against the conferment on the Courts of a general equitable discretion to set aside contracts which the Courts may consider oppressive, harsh or unreasonable. No such power was or is conferred by the Bill.

"When no relationship exists between the parties such as will enable one of them to dominate the will of the other, the question of undue influence cannot be raised. This I understand to be the meaning of illustration (d) to clause 2. When such a relationship is alleged it is for the person who asserts its existence to prove it. Having proved the existence of the dominant relationship, the person who impeaches a contract is further bound (except in the case of an apparent unconscionable contract) to prove that an unfair advantage was taken over him by the other party; that is, that having regard to all the circumstances of the case the advantage actually taken was unfair, and such as could not have been obtained except owing to the existence of the special relationship.

"In practice the operation of the Bill will have effect chiefly in the class of contracts of which an illustration is given in clause 2 (c). This illustration has been considerably amended by the Select Committee, and the debtor is not assumed to be an agriculturist as in the original draft. Yet, no doubt, in almost every case of village money-lending the debtor will be an agriculturist. I do not understand the meaning of the illustration to be that whenever a village money-lender makes a loan to a person already in his debt the Courts shall presume the existence of a dominant relationship. But I think that, having regard to the common course of business in village money-lending, the Court may ordinarily presume the existence of a dominant relationship under section 114 of the Evidence Act. It is unquestionably true that an agriculturist who is in debt to the money-lender of his village is not in a position to exercise a free consent in declining to enter into an unconscionable bargain. In the existing state of agricultural economy in the country an agriculturist must, in order to carry on his cultivation, obtain advances. The village money-lender will never allow him to transfer his custom to another banker. Should the agriculturist attempt to do so, the village money-lender will at once obtain and execute a decree for the total amount of the previous debt.

"I think that the proposed legislation will have some good effect in discouraging creditors from forcing unconscionable contracts on their debtors. I do not believe that it will prevent loans being made as at present or hinder customary transactions between lender and borrower. It will not affect the honest banker who seeks to obtain by his trade a fair and customary advantage commensurate with the risk which he runs, nor will it aid a dishonest debtor to repudiate a reasonable, even though onerous, contract which he has made when he is capable of understanding it and of forming a rational judgment as to its effects upon his interests."

The Hon'ble SIR GRIFFITH EVANS said:—"If this matter had been res integra and if we were now discussing the best means of relieving the agriculturist, I do not think I should have attempted to do so by amending the general law of contracts. Though it is perfectly true that the money-lender, or mahajan, is an absolutely necessary part of the agricultural system of India, yet it does not follow that some restrictions might not be placed upon him. We have already placed very large restrictions upon the landlord. We have treated the raiyats in their relation to the landlords as a class of persons who ought to be protected. We have prevented the landlord taking interest on arrears of rent at more than 12 per cent. We have prevented his making an enhancement by private agreement of more than two annas in the rupee. We have provided that in many instances the raiyats should not be allowed to contract themselves out of certain rights which we thought it was essential that they should retain, knowing that they might under pressure be induced to sign a document relinquishing those rights. If then we have gone so far to protect the raiyats against the landlords, I do not see why we should not have taken steps to give a reasonable protection to the raiyat in his dealings with the other person who is a necessary part of the agricultural system, that is to say, the mahajan or money-lender; and it seems to me that it would have been better to pass different Acts for the different provinces which would meet the peculiar conditions and relations between the agriculturist and money-lender in the different local areas where they vary very considerably; but it was decided that this should not be done, and when I came to consider the matter I found that the Government had resolved to give the agriculturist such relief as they could by this means, and not by the other. I was not myself in a position to formulate any Bill for regulating the relations between the money-lenders and the raiyats which would have produced the desired result. Government alone, aided by the reports of local officers of the different provinces, could have ventured to undertake such a task. I have come to the conclusion that it was better on the whole to accept the present measure.

"Now as regards the measure itself, apart from this question of the agriculturist and money-lender, I should prefer that the Bill should not be carried, and for these reasons. No doubt, as pointed out by the Hon'ble the Legal Member, the Contract Act only deals with some particular classes of the cases in which Courts of Equity set aside or modify contracts, but, owing to the fact that the Contract Act itself is only an Act to define and amend certain portions of the law of contract, it has been held by the Courts, and notably by the Privy Council, that the Contract Act is not exhaustive upon this point. It does not sweep away the broad equitable doctrines upon which Courts of Equity are wont to interfere at home; and when once that had been fairly laid down by the Privy Council and become recognised by the Courts in India, that the Contract Act did not in any way diminish the power which they had before according to the English cases, that they were still at liberty to follow the English cases and to give relief in cases not provided for by the Contract Act, the advance of the Courts was rapid, and you find case after case in which a number of matters have been dealt with, which are not in any way covered by the Contract Act, but which have been dealt with by virtue of the English equitable doctrines. Seeing then that the Courts have gone so far and so successfully in following and applying the English doctrines, I should have preferred to leave them to go on in that course, sooner than attempt anything in the nature of a definition. It is very difficult to define in this particular branch of equity. I am not certain that the Bill covers the whole of the cases or deals with all the considerations which are dealt with in the Courts of Equity. On the other hand, there is ground for fearing that, this being a written Code, the Courts may consider they are entitled in some directions to go further by virtue of the words of the Act than the Courts would have gone in England. It will be found, I think, on analysis that although there may underlie all these cases the idea of a dominating position on the one side or a want of equality in the contract on the other, yet that in some of the cases this is but a small part of the consideration, not the most important part, that governs the Courts of Equity in giving relief. With regard to champertous contracts, although there be no subsisting relation between the borrower and the money-lender at the time when he goes to the money-lender to solicit a loan, yet the Privy Council has laid it down, and the Courts have carried out that view, that they will import the principle which governs the Courts of Equity in dealing with what they call 'catching bargains' with heirs and reversioners; that is to say, that they will regard this kind of contracts jealously and not enforce them if they are extortionate, although it is very difficult to say that there is any subsisting relation of domination which causes the equity to arise. However, I am glad to think that this Bill will only be an amendment of an Act which defines and amends certain parts of the law of contract, and I think, if we have fallen short in covering all the cases and boiling down, as it were, all the principles that are involved in the administration of relief in the Courts of Equity, that we have not shut the door, that the Courts will still interpret this amending Act in the same way as they have interpreted the old Contract Act; that is, they will say this is not exhaustive. I think the Courts will say that this Act has not had the effect of repealing, as it were, or extinguishing, any principle of equity. There are many parts of law and equity which it is desirable to codify, but when, as here, elasticity is of the essence, as it were, of the equity, it is dangerous to do so. This head of equity deals with exceptional cases, but the written rule may be applied by ill-informed Courts to classes of contracts it was never intended to apply to. The rule was so wide in the original Bill that there was good ground for fearing it would interfere with that stability of contract upon which commerce and the daily business of the country depends. The amendments made in Select Committee have greatly lessened this danger. I trust it will only be applied to the exceptional cases for which it is intended.

"The only part of the portion of the Bill which deals with undue influence which is likely to do much for indebted agriculturists is illustration (c) to section 2. I hope that that illustration will have some effect in showing the inferior Courts that they are at liberty in exceptional circumstances of extortionate bargains to give relief—not of course to regulate and interfere with the ordinary rate of interest at which the mahajans are in the habit of lending and which must be determined by the risks of the business.

"Whether it was worth while to amend the general law of contracts to obtain so small a result at so considerable a risk seems doubtful.

"Then I turn to the second branch of the Bill. With regard to this, it is to be observed that, if it were not for the illustrations, it would be unnecessary and useless. The position of affairs stands thus. Section 74 of the old Contract Act dealt simply with this: according to the law in England, the Equity Courts could relieve against all penalties, but there was a distinction between a penalty and what was termed liquidated damages, that is, a sum agreed to be paid on breach of a contract; and where the Courts came to the conclusion that the sum mentioned in the contract was in the nature of liquidated damages, there they would not interfere in giving any relief; but there was so much difficulty in knowing whether a stipulation was really for liquidated damages or was really a penalty, that it was thought better by the framers of this Act to place all liquidated damages on the same footing as penalties and so to enable them to be relieved against, and only the actual damage given and not the sum named. That was all that this section was intended for, but it was assumed that penalties would always be relieved against, and no one has ever doubted it. The difficulty was to define what was a penalty. Now, the mere putting in these words in section 74, 'or if the contract contains any other stipulation by way of penalty,' was wholly unnecessary, because they were always relieved against, and no Court ever doubted that. But these words, useless in themselves, have been used as a sort of peg to hang certain illustrations on. We have not attempted to give a definition of penalty, but by means of illustrations we have got rid of some of the difficulties, and these illustrations point to the principle that in every case where the question is one of penalty or not it must be a mixed question of law and fact. The Court is not bound by the form of the deed; it must examine the substance of the transaction and judge whether it should be taken to be a stipulation intended to be carried out as part of the contract or a provision to secure performance, and we have indicated that one of the best tests in practice is to see whether the stipulation would be wholly unreasonable if regarded as an integral part of the contract. We have not formulated that proposition, but we have by the illustrations indicated it. Then we have given illustrations which deal with various kinds of penalties which are not penalties according to the form of the bond, but are penalties according to the reality of the transaction. This does not seem to be a very artistic piece of legislation, but I hope it will make up in utility what it lacks in beauty. I have felt it necessary to trouble the Council at some length with my views on this matter, because I wished to explain how I thought the Bill was likely to work and why I am prepared to vote in favour of its being passed though I am not without misgivings as to its successful working."

The Hon'ble MR. CHARLU said:—"Having regard to its very wide scope I have my doubts about this measure. Nothing that has come within my observation suggests the need for a remedy rather sweeping. It is directed at an evil which cannot be eradicated. An undue lenity, as I take this and similar measures to mean, may not, in the long run, benefit those meant to be benefited. It will introduce friction and hardships now unknown, where there is more or less pacific understanding. My acquaintance with the agricultural classes in my Presidency, so far as it has gone, convinces me that they are uniformly thrifty and very rarely go within the clutches of hard money-lenders. They need no protection, and this Bill may in their case throw in their way a temptation to contest without just cause in many instances, and go into the clutches of fresh lenders, unused to them, and fare worse.

"Now, I would perhaps accept the Bill as substituting a procedure resembling arbitration for strict law, which must needs be harder. But there are Appellate Courts to revise the discretion exercised by the first Courts. It is not always that the Appellate Courts abstain from unduly interfering, nor are verdicts of the first Courts uniformly faultless. These imperfect conditions would often necessitate and in some cases develop the practice and temptation of trying appeals from the judgment of one single man to that of another single man on less tangible grounds than now. There are reasons enough to incline one to disapprove of this measure as a whole.

"But there are as many grounds for it as against it; and I must say that it is safer to allow the experiment, which is influentially and officially supported, as we are not legislating for all time to come. The measure, I hope, may prove an important check on the unscrupulous men who catch expectant heirs and ease them of their fortunes, long before they are taken full possession of. The existing law has been found not to be altogether adequate in many such cases. If this measure will do no more than act as a deterrent on that class of ruinous lenders and their like and strengthens the hands of Courts by legislation of the present case-law, it will be a great blessing. It is as necessary for this purpose as it is unnecessary for many other of the purposes falling within its purview. In this view, I would not oppose the motion before the Council."

The Hon'ble MR. RIVAZ said:—"I agree so entirely with all that the Hon'ble Member in charge of the Bill said the other day in explanation of its necessity that my remarks need be very brief. The enlarged powers with which the Courts are being armed by the proposed amendments in the Contract Act will of course be applicable to contracts and agreements of all kinds, but it is pretty certain that they will chiefly be exercised in cases of dealings between money-lenders and borrowing agriculturists. I am not among those who consider that every money-lender who has any business transactions with a member of the agricultural classes in this country is necessarily an unprincipled extortioner, or that every agricultural borrower is a poor simpleton who is unable to understand whether he has been treated fairly or unfairly. The money-lender, as my Hon'ble friend Sir Griffith Evans has just said, is a very useful and even an indispensable element in the composition of rural society in this country, and I am ready to believe that in the main the money-lending classes are reasonably fair and just in their dealings with their agriculturist clients; but there can be no doubt that the money-lender is often in a position which enables him to take an unfair advantage over the borrower, and it not unfrequently happens that he does avail himself of this advantage. The main object of the provisions which we are considering is to enable the Courts to interfere effectively in such cases, and to apply an equitable remedy, and I confidently hope that they will exercise these most useful powers with judgment and discretion."

The Hon'ble SIR JAMES WESTLAND said:—"I should like to say a word in support of the remarks which have fallen from my Hon'ble friend Mr. Rivaz. I deprecate any idea going abroad that this Bill, so far as my connection with it is involved, is based upon the theory that the village-saukar is a man to be put down. I believe him to be a very necessary element in Indian political economy, and that he exercises a profession which is extremely useful, so far as I am concerned. My revenue comes in punctually mainly because the village-saukar is willing to convert a debt owed by the raiyat to the Government into a debt owed by the raiyat to himself. There have, however, been too many cases in which it has been shown that the village-saukar has improved his position unwarrantably by putting himself into the place of the raiyat as the occupant of the land, and that is a condition of things which does not tend to the benefit of the country either politically or economically. There is also another point on which I wish to make an observation, and that is with regard to the explanation given by my Hon'ble friend Mr. Mehta, who traces back all the difficulties that arise no from the raiyat getting into the hands of the saukar, but into the hands of an unscrupulous Government—that is to say, he attributes these difficulties to the rigidity of the revenue system. I was pleased to observe that when he made that remark the only opinion he could urge in support of it was the opinion of a very distinguished official who retired from India eighteen years ago; and I think my Hon'ble friend Mr. Mehta may take it for granted that a question which has been before Government for the last eighteen years, and which the Government has endeavoured to meet, has been by this time regulated. As a matter of fact, the collection of the revenue has departed for many years from that ancient rigidity that used to characterise it, and I think it may be asserted that neither in Bombay, nor Madras, nor elsewhere, is the raiyat driven to ruin by the Government insisting on the realization of its dues with improper severity."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS said:—"I propose to reply very briefly to the remarks that have been made by Hon'ble Members. The course of the discussion is, I am glad to see, on the whole favourable to the Bill, and in attempting to reply to the various difficulties that have been raised, my task is lessened by the fact that to some extent difficulties raised on one side of the table have been answered by the difficulties raised on the other side of the table. I may explain what I mean. I think the Hon'ble Maharaja of Darbhanga felt a doubt or difficulty on this ground: this Bill, which is framed somewhat in the words of English equity, will have to be administered by Munsifs and Subordinate Judges. Well, I think my Hon'ble friend Mr. Mehta has kindly answered that for Bombay. He says that in Bombay the Subordinate Judges and Munsifs are well-trained men, and, moreover, in all cases of course there is an appeal. But the real answer I think comes from the doubts felt by my Hon'ble friend Sir Griffith Evans. He has pointed out that the Contract Act is not exhaustive. He has further pointed out a case where the High Court of Calcutta, I think, held in terms that the Courts were not bound by the narrow restrictions laid down by the existing Contract Act, but that they were free to roam over English equity, and English equity of course not binding them, but only pointing the way to what they happen to consider to be justice, equity and good conscience. English equity does not bind the Courts here. The Courts here only follow English equity or English decisions where there is no binding rule of Indian law, and where they are administering the law according to justice, equity and good conscience. That I think answers my Hon'ble friend the Maharaja of Darbhanga's difficulty. Surely it is better for us to lay down a line to indicate the lines on which these lower Courts are to act than to leave them free to wander over all the decisions of English equity, or to quote from the work quoted by the Hon'ble Mr. Mehta—Story's Equity Jurisprudence—which is an American book—it is much safer to indicate to these lower Courts the general lines on which they are to proceed than to leave them free to wander at will over all English and American jurisprudence.

"Then another point was made. It was suggested that there was some objection to this Bill in so far as it gave retrospective effect to the new provisions. There again we are in point of fact merely limiting the discretion of the Courts, and indicating on what lines perfectly unfettered discretion is to be exercised, and of course the Bill will only apply to suits brought after the commencement of the Act. It will have nothing to do with pending suits.

"There is one other point that my Hon'ble friend Sir Griffith Evans has called attention to, and which I am glad he did call attention to, and that is the use of the words 'subsisting relations.' That I think was necessary. It was necessary to point out that at the moment that the contract is entered into there must be something external to the contract itself which puts one party in the power of the other. The mere fact that one man has money and another man wants it does not give rise to an unconsionable contract. There must be at the moment of the contract—the relations may have sprung into existence almost contemporaneously—some relations which give one party an unfair pull over the other.

"Then my Hon'ble friend Sir Griffith Evans also pointed out that there may be certain cases of inequitable contracts quite outside this Act. As regards those contracts the powers of the Courts still remain, but the object of this Act is partly to direct the lower Courts as to the lines on which they should move, and partly to call the attention of the Courts to the fact that they have powers further and other than those already given by the Indian Contract Act. It is quite true that that doctrine has been recognised here, but it has not been recognised generally all over India. The Courts have held themselves bound to the particular words of the Act, and have refused to look into inequitable bargains because they were bound by the terms of the Act and could not go behind them. We have to remind the Courts that they can go behind them, and at the same time we have laid down the lines on which they can go behind them. There was one other point raised by my Hon'ble friend Sir Griffith Evans, and I think my Hon'ble friend Mr. Rivaz gave the answer to it. My Hon'ble friend would rather that we had legislated directly with regard to the relations of money-lender and agriculturist. As my Hon'ble friend Mr. Rivaz says, we recognise that the money-lender is an essential factor in Indian society as at present constituted. We do recognise—and gladly recognise—that the great mass of transactions between the money-lenders and agriculturists are fair and reasonable transactions. We do not want to legislate against money-lenders, but we want to legislate against unconscionable bargains. We are not now legislating against a class, but we are legislating against unconscionable bargains—bargains which offend the conscience of humanity, and that is the scope and aim of this Bill."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. CHITNAVIS moved that for sub-section (3) of section 16 of the Indian Contract Act, 1872, as proposed by clause 2 of the Bill, as amended, the following be substituted, namely :—

"(3) Where a person who is in a position to dominate the will of another, but who does not stand to him in a position of active confidence, enters into an agreement with him, the burden of proving that such agreement was induced by undue influence shall lie upon the person who seeks to have the agreement set aside on the ground of undue influence."

He said :—"I must say that I move this amendment with considerable diffidence, as the amending Act has been shaped by the combined wisdom of many Hon'ble gentlemen learned in the law. But I think it is in accordance with general principles that a person seeking to avoid liability for his own actions and setting up a special circumstance as a defence has to discharge the burden of making good his defence. Where a person charged with having committed a murder pleads in his own defence insanity or accident or the right of private defence, the burden of proof would lie on him for making out such a defence. In Civil Courts, where a person repudiates an obligation under a document which he has signed, and alleges that he signed it under a mistake or in consequence of fraud practised on him, the burden of proof would be on him to make out such a defence. I therefore submit, my Lord, that where a debtor seeks on the alleged ground of undue influence to avoid an agreement which he has entered into, it should be for him to prove the undue influence on which he relies for the repudiation of his obligations.

"I quite appreciate, my Lord, the purpose of sub-section (3) as it now stands. It gives to Courts the power of raising the defence of 'undue influence' where it is not raised by the defendant himself. It seems to me, however, that the power here proposed to be given to Courts is much too large. The word 'unconscionable' has not been defined in the Bill, and I am not sure that it is possible to define it in a way free from objection. If, then, Courts are permitted to presume 'undue influence' where they consider a transaction to be 'on the face of it' unconscionable, the discretion so vested in them may often be exercised in a way which may, I fear, cause dissatisfaction among large classes of people, uncertainty as to the state of the law, and a panic among money-lenders. Where, 'on the evidence adduced,' the transaction appears to be unconscionable, Courts will no doubt have better reason for placing the burden of proof as the sub-section directs, but, then, which is the party that adduced the evidence? The person who dominates the will of the other party will not give evidence against himself, and if the evidence which shows a transaction to be unconscionable' has been adduced by the party seeking to set it aside, then in substance this part of the sub-section is very largely the same as my amendment, which, however, has this advantage, that it gets rid of the notion and the word 'unconscionable,' and assimilates the provision to the general law of the country instead of making it a new departure.

"I speak with diffidence on a technical point of law, and, even if I was able, I should be as unwilling as the Hon'ble Law Member to inflict on the Council 'a disquisition on English law.' I beg leave, however, to refer to one or two principles which appear to be undisputed alike in England and India. With regard to voluntary donations, the principle invariably recognised by English Courts of Equity seems to be that, except in cases where certain specified intimate relations exist between the donor and the donee, undue influence must be proved against the donee in order that the gift may be set aside.

"The law in regard to the burden of proof on the subject of undue influence is thus summarised by Sir Frederick Pollock in a recent work :—

'Parties in an independent position are masters of the terms they choose to make; but when the terms made between parties in confidential relations are such as, judged by the reasonable and ordinary practice in affairs of the same kind, appear unconscionable, it is an almost necessary inference that the confidence of the client has been abused and undue influence exerted. On the other hand, the Courts will not easily give credit to mere surmises and suggestions of undue influence where there is no relation between the parties naturally producing general authority on one side and general deference on the other, and where it is not proved that their habitual conduct was of this kind.'

"I find that the passage quoted by the Hon'ble Law Member in his speech begins with this remark :

'Agreements between persons in certain relative positions are treated in equity as presumptively made under an undue influence of one party upon the will of the other.'

"I take the effect of these authorities to be that in agreements between persons standing in certain special, intimate or confidential relations to each other, the presumption of undue influence will arise, having the effect of placing the burden of proof on the party claiming the benefit of the agreement. Where those relations do not exist, the ordinary rule must prevail, and the party repudiating the transaction must prove that he was induced to enter into it by undue influence. That seems to be the principle recognised alike in England and India, and, if it is not a presumption to say so, it is a rule founded upon considerations of fairness and justice. I see no reason why it should be departed from in the Act we now propose to pass. It does not appear that even the House of Commons Committee, to which the Hon'ble Law Member made reference, has made any recommendation (in regard to the law of the burden of proof in cases of undue influence) similar in point of principle to sub-section (3) of this Bill. The law as to the burden of proof, ' where there is a question as to the good faith of a transaction between parties, one of whom stands to the other in a position of active confidence,' is laid down in section 111 of the Indian Evidence Act. The law as to the burden of proof in all other cases of undue influence should, I am humbly of opinion, be put in the form which I am now suggesting as a substitute for sub-section (3) of the Bill before us."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS said :—"I am sorry to say I must oppose a direct negative to my Hon'ble friend's amendment. It would cut the life out of this clause if accepted. It would alter the burden of proof and make the party who has entered into an unconscionable bargain prove his case the whole way through. We have modified the Bill as it originally stood, and we have provided that, first of all, the party must show the nature of the existing relations. He must give some evidence to show that he was subject to the party who dominated him, and we have provided that some evidence must be given that the contract was unconscionable, and that then, and then only, the burden of proof should be shifted. That is going as far as we can in the way of concession, and it is going further than the English law. According to English law, as soon as the suspected relationship is established, the burden of proof shifts, and it lies on the other side—on the dominating party—to show that the contract was in point of fact fair, just and reasonable."

The Hon'ble MR. REES said:—"My Lord, I oppose this amendment. If it were accepted, it would be useless to go on with the Bill, the most important change in which is the shifting of the burden of proof in cases when the contract is on the face of it or on the evidence unconscionable. The latter all-important proviso, added in Select Committee, makes the Bill a fair effort to relieve the unduly influenced without prejudicing the parties in ordinary contract cases, and its maintenance is vital to the measure as it stands. I cannot help referring to the Hon'ble Mover's statement that 40 per cent. of the people go through life on insufficient food. I tried to meet this statement in a budget debate three years ago, and this is not the occasion for repeating the effort. I will only say that I believe this statement to be untrue of any years in India—good, bad, or average. It is not now true even of famine years. It appears to to me to be a grave exaggeration."

The Hon'ble MR. SMEATON said:—"I entirely agree with the argument of the Hon'ble the Legal Member in opposing this amendment. It seems to me that, if that clause of the Bill is so amended as to shift the burden of proof in the way described, it would be taking away a principle which is vital to the Bill; it would, in fact, emasculate the Bill and leave the law practically as it stands at present. Under these circumstances I oppose the amendment."

The Hon'ble SIR GRIFFITH EVANS said:—"I also oppose this amendment. It is, as the Hon'ble Mr. Rees has remarked, tantamount to asking the Council to vote against the Bill. The Bill would not be worth the paper it is printed on if this amendment were carried. It comes to the same thing as omitting the section for which this substitute is proposed. For the substituted section simply leaves things as they were before. That section is the pivot upon which the Bill hinges and is the operative part of it, and if it is omitted the Bill should be dropped."

The motion was put and negatived.

The Hon'ble MR. CHITNAVIS said that, as his first amendment was lost, he now asked leave to withdraw the second amendment which stood in his name, as it was only a consequential amendment.

The amendment was accordingly withdrawn.

The Hon'ble MR. REES said:—"My Lord, I have already said I approve the Bill as amended, and now I beg leave to move that in illustration (b) of clause 3 of the Bill the words 'an agriculturist' be omitted.

"These words originally were found also in illustration (c) to clause 2, but were expunged in Select Committee.

"When His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor, then a member of Lord Elgin's Government, introduced this Bill, he expressly stated that in an amendment of the substantive law of contract the Government decided to seek a remedy for the indebted condition of the agricultural community, an ignorant peasantry, generally alleged to be at the mercy of the more astute money-lender in its monetary dealings; and His Honour reviewed various other suggestions, which the Government determined to reject.

"Then the Hon'ble Legal Member of Your Excellency's Government, in moving this session for reference to a Select Committee, referred to one of these suggestions, viz., the enactment of a general law framed on the lines of the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act, and I hope I rightly understood him to say that this suggestion had been abandoned. It has proved a success in the Dekkhan,— and a study of the report of the Commissioners of 1891-92 leaves this in doubt,—it is not well adapted, so far as I can judge, for application to Southern India. And he went on to say that the provisions of the Contract Act of 1872 had been found wanting to meet the case of the agriculturist and the money-lender, that it was none the less proposed to make no new departure, but to arm the Courts with power in such cases to go behind the bond.

"The Hon'ble Member showed that much more drastic proposals were made by the recent money-lending Committee of the House of Commons, but he said that the Government of India recognized that the money-lender is the capitalist of Indian agriculture—an essential factor of a system the abuses and excesses of which alone the Government wished to curb.

"It was in this spirit that the Hon'ble Member met his Select Committee, and his readiness to accept suggestions based on experience of the country, and even as to drafting, a technical art of which he is an acknowledged master, has only increased the regret all additional Members feel—I am sure as I do—that they will so soon be deprived of his kindly and capable guidance.

"Yet looking to the origin of the Bill I must say that in my opinion the circumstances of the South Indian agriculturist are not such as to call for any amendment in his favour of the general Contract Law of the country. I speak for myself of course. The Government of Madras 'considered the proposed measure would effect a desirable improvement in the law relating to contract.' It suggested, however, the omission of the word 'agriculturist' from the illustrations, so as to remove all doubts as to the general application of the law; and the Officiating Chief Justice—Mr. Justice Shephard—from whom, and from Mr. Justice Subramanya Iyer, proceeded the suggestion which the Madras Government adopted, thought 'it a serious objection that the retention of the word suggested the idea that agriculturists as a class are to be regarded as privileged persons in their relations with money-lenders.'

"A law which is of general application may, however, need amendment, and the powers it confers on the Courts may call for extension, for express and explicit extension, in the general interests of the country, or of a greater or lesser part thereof, although in particular portions the exact conditions which suggested the amendment may not exist. It would be altogether wrong to stretch the all Indian raiyat on the bed of the Punjabi Procrustes, but the Madrassi raiyat in his turn should not grudge to others, perhaps less fortunately situated, a protection which he himself may not need. In fact, he will probably not be much affected by this Act, unless prophecies that it will increase the difficulty of borrowing come true, which I hope will not prove the case, though I entertain much apprehension on this score if the agriculturist of the illustration holds his ground.

"A long and elaborate argument to illustrate the position and circumstances of the South Indian agriculturist is not required from a Member who votes for the Bill, and only wishes to explain, when moving his amendment, that he does not think that the Madras raiyat is one of those in whose interests it is required. But the question is one of such importance that I will ask Your Excellency's leave to refer to a few authorities on the position I take up.

"In 1872, when the Contract Act was before this Council, the then Lieutenant-Governor, Sir George Campbell, wished to introduce an illustration in which 'a rich and powerful zamindar' and 'his poor and ignorant raiyats' figured. Sir James Stephen strongly and successfully opposed the proposal, which was lost, though the Lieutenant-Governor, by way of compensation, obtained the excision of the illustrations from English practice which are now restored as (a) and (b) beneath clause 3 of this Bill. On that occasion my predecessor, Sir William Robinson, opposed the amendment with such warmth as called forth certain observations on the part of the Lieutenant-Governor, which are not reported, though Sir James Stephen refers to them, and may be presumed to have been by way of rebuke. In this respect I trust that history will not repeat itself, but Sir William Robinson's contentions are as true of the south of the Peninsula to-day as they were twenty-seven years ago, when he made them. 'In respect to Southern India,' he said, 'I have no hesitation in saying that there is no ground for apprehension or for exceptional legislation, and I know that the cultivators have, on the whole a very fair time of it.'

"The Madras Government in its opinion of last year, to which I have just referred, deals only with the legal question. While its Board of Revenue approved, the judicial officers consulted gave guarded answers. Mr. Justice Subramanya Iyer, of the High Court, thought the amendments improvements, but pointed out 'that the condition of agriculturists in South India is not generally such as to warrant that class being treated as a privileged class entitled to special protection, and the illustrations which refer to them and imply that they are such a class are, therefore, out of place in a law applicable to all India.'

"But no authority stands higher on this subject than that of my Hon'ble friend and predecessor, Mr. Nicholson, who has devoted equal time and talent to the study of the condition of the agricultural classes. Circumstances only allow of passing reference to a report which is already a standard work in the hands of all interested in this subject. Mr. Nicholson urges that agricultural indebtedness in the South, while sufficiently serious, must not be exaggerated, the mass of raiyats not being deeply indebted, the mortgage-debt especially being moderate and not aggregating in any given year one-half of the value of the annual crops. Mr. Nicholson goes on to show that in addition to the value of soil, stock, crops and buildings, there are considerable hoards awaiting the development of a suitable banking system, and that great numbers of the cultivators are intelligent men. In this I thoroughly agree, and would repudiate the assumption that the average cultivator is incapable of understanding a contract and forming a rational judgment as to its effect upon his interests. He understands very well what he is about in making engagements, and that he strives honourably to fulfil them is the opinion of those who best know him. He can no more be described as naturally feeble-minded than he can be called idle and wanting in energy, the description given in the report of the Dekkhan Agriculturist Commission. Indeed, experts from other countries have told me they believe no other man could make a living off the land the poorer raiyats till.

"Again and again Mr. Nicholson points out that nine loans out of ten in the South are made by raiyat to raiyat, by whom two-thirds of all the mortgage, and a slightly higher percentage of other, loans are granted; that to national and social and economic conditions, and not to the existence of the money-lender, is due the indebtedness of the raiyat; that the mortgage-rate of interest, as appeared from an examination of 76,000 loans, runs from 9 to 18 per cent.; and that it is certain from the tabulation of an immense number of cases that interest is fairly moderate where security is good, and that there is no gross usury such as that which came before the House of Commons Committee, on whose report, which dealt with cases quite dissimilar from those of this country, no action has, it is believed, been taken; that a gross agricultural debt of 45 crores against annual rural produce worth 60 crores is moderate compared with similar debts on the continent of Europe, as is a rural mortgage debt of 20 on land worth 220 crores; that peasants must borrow freely, annually and continuously; that three fourths of them are bound to borrow for cultivation purposes, and that the whole process is in fact the mere mobilization of capital; that the money-lender, usually a local raiyat, does not enter as a dominant factor into the daily life of the general population, as in the Dekkhan, and no doubt to some extent in the Dekkhan districts of the Madras Presidency.

"It will probably be considered unnecessary to quote more to this effect from the same source or from other authorities. It seems pretty clear that the condition of the Madras raiyat is not such as to warrant that class being treated as privileged and entitled to special protection, though Mr. Nicholson thought the Courts should have the power of adjusting contracts, where the lender possessed an undue advantage over the borrower.

"That this conclusion is, however, not sufficient ground for the rejection of this measure will be evident when the opinions of Local Governments are considered. It is approved generally by the Administrations of Bengal, North-West Provinces, Burma, Bombay and the Central Provinces, though a by no means unanimous voice comes from the Courts, bodies and officers consulted by these Governments. The Administration of Assam condemns it; and in Bombay, while the Commissioner in Sind, lately a Member of this Council, is, as we all knew while he was here, a stalwart supporter of the measure and more than the measure, the Karachi Chamber of Commerce, the Judges and even the Sind raiyats—if their petition can be taken indeed as really representative—disapproved lock, stock and barrel of the Bill as a weapon of defence and protection for the agricultural community.

"These conflicting opinions—and any number might be instanced—only serve to indicate how widely opinions and circumstances vary, and how little the dictum of the learned High Court Judge in Lalli v. Ram Prasad can be accepted, to the effect that 'the conditions of peasant-proprietors are sufficiently homogeneous over all India to make the same treatment universally applicable.'

"Not the least remarkable fact is that a disapproval of the most important portion, the undue influence section of the Bill, comes from the Government of the Punjab, which apparently for some years past has entertained apprehensions lest, as Sir Mackworth Young puts it, 'under the restrictions and disabilities which are accumulating against his interest, the position of the money-lender should become untenable.' The Lieutenant-Governor, and his predecessor, Sir Dennis Fitzpatrick, agreed that even in the Punjab it would not do to assume that the money-lender was always the offender, and clause 2 of the Bill has now undergone in Select Committee the all-important change, that before the burden of proof is shifted in favour of the borrower, the contract must appear unconscionable on the face, or on the evidence.

"I think it is sufficiently established that in Southern India no such exceptional agricultural conditions exist such as call for a change in the general contract law, that opinions are widely divided as to the existence of such circumstances in other parts of India and as to the effect which will be produced by a change in the general law of contract admittedly made in favour of one, and that the agricultural, class, but equally affecting all classes.

"It is then evidently a matter of the first importance whether the agriculturist is retained in the illustrations, and as he disappeared in Select Committee from clause 2 (c) why is he retained in clause 3 (b), and will not the Courts, knowing the origin of the Bill, seeing the much modified, but still great, change in the law as regards the burden of proof, hold under the Act, with this illustration retained, that almost every money-lender is in a position to dominate his agricultural debtor, so that the lender will lose upon his bond, so that the partner with the capital may become more difficult of access to the partner who is bound to borrow? Illustrations of course are not law. The Law Commissioners, when forwarding the draft Penal Code to the Governor General in Council in 1837, said—

'The definitions and enacting clauses contain the whole law. The illustrations make nothing law which would not be law without them. They only exhibit the law in full action, and show what its effects will be on the events in common life.'

"But in fact the Courts, particularly those belonging to what one may call the lower legal orders, cling to the illustrations, and feeling, as I have myself, what comfort resides in concrete cases, and believing that the lower Courts work the illustrations for all they can afford, it is with satisfaction I see that the Law Commission of 1863, consisting of the Master of the Rolls, Sir William Erle, Lord Sherbroke and other eminent lawyers, when presenting the draft of the Succession Act, made the following observations:—

'The decision contained in any illustration is not to be questioned in the administration of the law. The illustrations are not merely examples of the law in operation, but are the law itself, showing by examples what it is. The statements that the definitions and enacting clauses contain the whole law, and that illustrations make nothing law which would not be law without them, are correct if understood as merely importing that, in the view of the legislature, the illustrations determine nothing otherwise than what, without them, would have been determined by a right application of the rules to which they are annexed. As, however, much law has been made by judicial decisions, which determine questions respecting the application of written rules of law, so law may, without impropriety, be said to be made by the illustrations, in the numerous cases in which they determine points about which, without their guidance, there would be room for difference of opinion even among learned and able Judges.'

"In short, it is difficult to over-estimate the importance which attaches—which is by Indian Courts attached—to illustrations—Sir Griffith Evans has just owned that in clause 4 only the illustrations avail to introduce new law—it is as great at the present moment as when they were warmly debated in this Council Chamber, when the Act was passed which is now being amended. If the general law of contract is to be amended in the interest of the agriculturist—and it must be admitted that there is perhaps a preponderance of opinion in favour of such action—at least let him get the benefit without being so ear-marked in the illustrations as to prejudice his capitalist partner in agricultural operations—a partner indispensable, whether or not unreasonable, against whose interest or interests a powerful weapon is forged in the Bill by the wider definition of undue influence and by the shifting of the burden of proof. If other illustrations referred to soldiers, sailors or persons following other callings, the reference to the agriculturist would be less marked, but no one is likely to dispute the fact that especial significance attaches to his retention in this illustration, and the only question is whether or not he should be retained. I hope he will be cut out in what I believe to be his true interests, and in consideration of the fact that the Bill, when it becomes law, will become law for all parts of India, and for all classes in the Empire."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS said:—"This point which is raised by my Hon'ble friend Mr. Rees was considered in Committee, and the Committee came to the conclusion that on the whole it would be better to keep this illustration as it stood. There is no question that in the greater part of India contracts which are unconscionable and contracts for which we wish to provide do arise between money-lenders and agriculturists, and therefore the illustration points to that fact. It is a fact which we cannot deny. We do wish the Courts to set aside unconscionable bargains between ignorant agriculturists and those money-lenders who are unscrupulous. In a Madras Act we should not perhaps put in that illustration, but as we are now legislating for the whole of India we cannot say that this legislation should not apply to Madras, nor can we say that it applies to a class of agriculturist who does not reside in Madras, and I think on the whole that the Committee were right in deciding that this illustration should stand as originally framed."

The Hon'ble MR. SPENCE said:—"I wish to say a few words in support of the motion that has been made by my Hon'ble friend Mr. Rees. I acknowledge that this point was debated in the Select Committee and we came to the conclusion that the words 'an agriculturist' should be left in this amendment, but I think that it was more as a matter of indifference as no principle was involved. This legislation is not meant to cover any particular class. It is not to apply to the agriculturist alone but to all classes, and the point that has not been noticed appears to me to be that if you put in this illustration there is no doubt that the Courts will act on it as if it were a sort of declared law. Therefore they will protect the agriculturist, but in the case of an artisan or of persons who belong to another class they will not be inclined to interfere. An artisan has just as much right to be protected against an unconscionable contract as an agriculturist. If you mention the word 'agriculturist' the Courts will at once protect him and not men of other classes. As no principle was involved in the illustration I assented to it in the Select Committee, but I have been induced by the arguments which have been brought forward by Mr. Rees to vote in favour of the amendment, and I hope the words 'an agriculturist' will be cut out."

The Hon'ble MR. MEHTA said:—"My Lord, I am not in favour of this amendment. The use of the word 'agriculturist' was open to misconstruction in any illustration to the proposed new section 16. The Select Committee therefore unanimously agreed to omit it from illustration (c) to that section. But the case is quite different as regards the illustration from which my Hon'ble friend Mr. Rees now proposes to discard it. I think he has not quite kept in mind the purport of the section to which the illustration in question is appended, and has forgotten that that section dealt with cases in which the fact of undue influence was already established. The illustration itself says that the bond is obtained by undue influence. The Madras agriculturist seems to be a very different person from an agriculturist in other parts of India, but surely my Hon'ble friend does not mean to say that if a contract is obtained by undue influence from a Madras agriculturist, he is not entitled to the protection of the Act like any other person from whom a contract is obtained by undue influence. He may be a very flourishing gentleman as my Hon'ble friend says, but under those circumstances he requires protection just as much as his less fortunate brethren elsewhere. It must be remembered that an illustration is something more than the enumeration of a general principle. The section lays down the general law; the illustration clothes the skeleton with flesh and blood. I quite admit that the illustration might have taken an artisan for an example. But as a large body in which cases of undue influence may not be infrequent, an agriculturist was equally, if not more, appropriate. I confess I am for retaining the word in this illustration just as I was in favour of omitting it in the section defining undue influence."

The Hon'ble MR. LATOUCHE:—"As far as any principle is concerned I am in favour of the amendment, but I do not think it goes far enough. If the words 'an agriculturist' are omitted, the words 'a money-lender' should also be expunged. The illustration would then read as follows:—

'(b) A advances Rs. 100 to B, and, by undue influence, induces B to execute a bond for Rs. 200 with interest at 12 per cent. per month. The Court may set the bond aside, ordering B to repay the Rs. 100 with such interest as may seem just.'

"We are not here concerned with an illustration of the classes who are apt to exercise, or liable to be subjected to undue influence. It is immaterial whether A is a professional money-lender or not. In the case supposed undue influence has been proved, and the illustration is concerned with indicating what the Court will do under section 19A, and how it will exercise an equitable discretion in relieving from the contract the person who has been subjected to undue influence."

The Hon'ble SIR GRIFFITH EVANS said:—"The speech made by my Hon'ble friend Mr. Rees is the strongest indication of what I said when we were considering the Bill, that it would have been better to have passed separate Bills for the different Provinces so far as the raiyats were concerned. The Hon'ble Mr. Rivaz said he had no doubt that the Bill would be useful to the raiyats. His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor, when originally introducing the Bill, said it was necessitated on account of the difficulties in connection with agricultural indebtedness, and so too it appears by the speech of my Hon'ble friend Mr. Chalmers that that was what was mainly aimed at. Now we find that Madras is a blessed Arcadia where all peasants are prosperous and all money-lenders merciful. My Hon'ble friend is alarmed at the very idea of its being supposed that a Madras raiyat could ever want protection from the clutches of a money-lender. I do not feel that same terror of having the name 'agriculturist' mentioned in the Bill, because if they are intended to be relieved it cannot be any great harm to mention them.

"All those who have discussed this illustration have forgotten apparently that the section which it illustrates deals not with the question when relief should be given but how it is to be given. The section runs thus—

'19A. Where a contract is induced by undue influence, it may be set aside either absolutely or upon such terms and conditions as to the Court may seem just.'

"The illustration is:—

'(b) A, a money-lender, advances Rs. 100 to B, an agriculturist, and by undue influence induces B to execute a bond for Rs. 200 with interest at 12 per cent. per month. The Court may set the bond aside, but may order B to repay the Rs. 100 with such interest as may seem just.'

"Now in this case it is found positively under the previous section that undue influence has been used, and therefore as a matter of fact the word 'agriculturist' and the word 'money-lender' could both come out. They are not essential to the section, but it was thought that inasmuch as this Act was intended to benefit the agriculturist we might mention him as being one of the persons who might possibly receive benefit under this Act. As was pointed out by the Hon'ble Mr. Mehta, whether the person who received the money was an agriculturist or not, still if undue influence was proved this result would follow, but it was thought that as there was no mention of agriculturist anywhere else in the Act, we might put him in, and thus indicate that he might obtain relief even though he lived in Madras. It merely says if an agriculturist has been induced by undue influence to do a certain thing, then relief should be given him in a certain way."

The Hon'ble RAI BAHADUR P. ANANDA CHARLU :—"It has been pointed out, and rightly pointed out, that the section 19A relates not to the persons to whom relief is meant, but to the methods of relief intended to be provided. That being so, why retain the word 'agriculturist' in the illustration. Judicially viewed, there will be little room for mistakes. But let us remember that a large number of these cases will be brought in the Small Cause Courts, and that it is the inevitable practice of these Courts to gallop through the case with a rapidity which forbids much judicial care. There will thus be a great risk of people fancying to read between the lines and act as though the agriculturist has been specialised for relief above everybody else. If the remarks made to-day by certain of the members are read, the chances of such an error will be greatly enhanced, inasmuch as it is emphasised that, although special legislation or rather legislation for a special class is not professed, yet such is the intention to some extent. It is very undesirable that this sort of notion should get hold of the lower grades of judiciary and lead to results which are ostensibly disclaimed as intended. This risk of widespread error should be avoided, and it can only be done by adopting the amendment of my Hon'ble friend Mr. Rees."

The Hon'ble MR. RIVAZ :—"As the Hon'ble Mr. Chalmers has said, we carefully considered this point in Select Committee, and we decided to retain this word in this illustration, while we excised it from the illustration in the preceding section. I do not think it is a matter of great importance whether it is kept in or not; but I am of opinion that for the reasons my Hon'ble friend Sir Griffith Evans has given, it is desirable to keep it in."

The Hon'ble SIR ARTHUR TREVOR :—"The reasons which my Hon'ble friend Sir Griffith Evans has given seem to me to tell as much in favour of striking out the word 'agriculturist' as of keeping it in. I am disposed to agree with the Hon'ble Mr. La Touche that both 'a money-lender' and 'an agriculturist' should be omitted. They seem to add nothing to the meaning of that illustration and might mislead."

The Hon'ble SIR JAMES WESTLAND :—"I cannot see why the difference lies between putting in and leaving out the word 'agriculturist.' The illustration has the same effect either way. It does not mean to cover the whole of the cases that may arise under the law. It is merely a case that may arise. I remember, for example, an illustration given in the Penal Code regarding the manner in which homicide may take place without an offence occurring. It describes an individual engaged in the commonplace operation of cutting a log with an axe. The head of the axe flies off and it injures some person to his death, and it is declared under these circumstances that the homicide is not culpable homicide. It seems to me quite impossible for any person engaged in a trial for homicide to argue that the person who committed the act was not cutting wood, and therefore the illustration cannot apply to him, or to allege that because the instrument which in the particular case under consideration was not an axe, therefore the homicide must be a culpable one. You must in the case of an illustration state your facts, and the act of stating particular facts in the illustration does not exclude other similar facts from the application of the section. So in this case when you state that the individual concerned is an agriculturist, he is only taken as one particular individual to whom the facts may apply, and I cannot see where the harm is in leaving him in. The Courts sometimes do foolish things, but I cannot imagine any Court, such as my Hon'ble friend Mr. Charlu refers to, finding that under the circumstances stated in illustration (b), no person but an agriculturist could receive the benefit of the section.

"It seems to me that the most natural thing for a Court to say is, that the fact of a person being an agriculturist was not in the least degree essential to the application of the law. The illustration indicates a state of things to which the law may apply, whether a person is an agriculturist or not. It seems to me perfectly indifferent whether the word remains in or out of it, and I am disposed, therefore, to accept the decision of the Select Committee that it should remain in."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS:—"May I with Your Excellency's permission add one word of explanation. I forgot when speaking that Hon'ble Members of Council generally were not present in the Select Committee. I ought to have reminded them of the particular point which we were discussing in Select Committee when this question came up. We were discussing the question of the remedy when a contract has undoubtedly been obtained by undue influence. As the law stands at present, when a contract is obtained by undue influence, it stands on the same footing as a contract obtained by fraud; that is to say, the Court sets it aside absolutely. We were discussing the point that you ought to draw a distinction between a contract obtained by fraud which is set aside absolutely and a contract obtained by undue influence, which in many cases should only be set aside on terms.

"The case of the agriculturist perhaps illustrates that better than any other, and for this reason — it is essential that the agriculturist should have advances. He has to go to the money-lender, and it is essential that, if the contract is a fair and reasonable one, he should keep his contract and repay his advances. But suppose the contract is an unconscionable one: suppose that the agriculturist requires an advance to cultivate his crops and gets one, but that it is advanced on unconscionable terms? Then what I want to point out is this. The contract is not set aside absolutely, but the Court has to reform it; the Court has to set aside the unconscionable part of the bargain, but we wish to point out that an agriculturist who has received the benefit of the contract and has received his money must repay that money and with a reasonable interest. We thought the illustration was apt in the case of an agriculturist because otherwise money-lenders might be afraid of advancing to the agriculturist. It is important to point out that even if you come to the conclusion that the contract is unconscionable, still the agriculturist who has entered into an unfair bargain won't be allowed simply to go away with the other man's money in his pocket, but that he will have to do justice himself; otherwise there might be a difficulty in agricultural tenants getting loans from money-lenders, and it was particularly to guard against that that we kept the words 'an agriculturist' in this section. The section does not deal with what is undue influence and what is not undue influence, but with what is to be done by the Court in order to work out complete justice between the parties when an unconscionable bargain comes before it and has to be reformed. I ought to have explained that before."

The Council divided:—

The Hon'ble Major-General Sir Edwin Collen.
The Hon'ble Mr. M. D. Chalmers.
The Hon'ble Sir James Westland.
His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief.
His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor.

So the motion was negatived.

His Honour the LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR moved that in illustration (b) to the new section 19A proposed by clause 3 of the Bill, as amended by the Select Committee, for the figure "12" the figure "6" be substituted. He said:—" I was myself a party at an earlier stage of this measure to the illustration introduced in its present form, but on further consideration I should have moved, had I been in the Select Committee, the amendment which stands to-day in my name. My reasons are these: The illustration means, in shorter language, that a contract to pay interest at a rate of 288 per cent. per annum executed under undue influence is an unconscionable contract which the Courts may call upon a creditor to justify. That such a contract is unconscionable nobody will dispute, but I think it is not necessary for the assistance of the Courts to give them so obvious an example of outrageous and unconscionable contracts. The illustration is intended to be from its etymology a light in darkness or a guide in circumstances of some doubt and difficulty. When a traveller, for example, enters Italy, he may, if he is not very wide awake, be in some doubt when he reaches Turin whether he has crossed the frontier or not, but there is no such excuse for him at Naples; and similarly I think the illustration to be effective and useful in the elucidation of the business of the Courts ought to be more on the border-land of actual facts. We have all of us heard of the rapacity and extortion of the money-lenders—in some cases at all events—among the ignorant and timid rustics. I have not myself come across any such violent examples of these transactions as is embodied in this illustration, and I think it would suffice for our purpose, and more than that it will be better for our purpose, to substitute in this illustration the figure 6 for the figure 12. That will result in giving an illustration of a contract at the unconscionable rate of 144 per cent. per annum. I am glad to say that cases in which the rate is so excessive and extortionate are rare in my own experience of money-lenders in India, but such cases have occurred, and I think it would be for the assistance and benefit of the Courts if we were to give them an indication of those more common cases in which a contract is on the face of it unconscionable. For these reasons I beg to move the amendment which stands in my name."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS:—"I accept His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor's suggestion. Perhaps the illustration we gave was too exaggerated an illustration, but of course I must point out that we are not laying down in this section what constitutes an unconscionable bargain, but what the Court has got to do when an unconscionable bargain comes before it. This illustration assumes an unconscionable bargain and then deals with what the Court has to do in administering justice between the parties; but I quite agree that we may give a less exaggerated illustration than we have given, and I am glad to hear from the Lieutenant-Governor that such extreme cases are almost unknown in India. I have had hundreds of worse cases myself at home. I have had to deal with scores or hundreds of cases where the interest charged had ranged from 200 to 1,200 per cent., and I am glad to hear that Indian money-lenders are more moderate than English money-lenders."

The Hon'ble Mr. REES said:—" My Lord, I understand the unconscionable portion of the bargain in the illustration to be not the bond for Rs. 200 in return for an advance of Rs. 100, but the interest at 12 per cent. per mensem. It is to that point at any rate that His Honour has addressed himself, and on that point alone that he has proposed an amendment. I venture to think that rate preferable to 6 per cent. per mensem, just because it is so unconscionable as to be unmistakeably such as may be relieved against, beyond the possibility of being taken as a point around about which interest ceases to be unconscionable and begins to be reasonable. No Court would see a lead on this behalf in a case of 144 per cent. interest. But 6 per cent. per mensem is so much nearer the point at which interest has been allowed by the Courts, that if it stands, it seems possible some Courts may hold 5 per cent. not unconscionable, and thus the illustration, which is intended to prevent such a result, might conceivably lead to decisions that 50 per cent., the rate against which English Courts relieved in the well known cases of Aylesford v. Morris and Benyon v. Cook, was not an unconscionable rate."

The Hon'ble MR. SMEATON :—" I would support the amendment of His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor. I differ from the view of the Hon'ble Member who has just spoken in regard to the effect of the illustration on the minds of that large body of subordinate Judges who will have to administer the new law. These Judges are apt to look upon a rate of interest quoted in an illustration as the minimum rate which should be held to be unconscionable: and some of them might possibly think themselves bound to consider 11 per cent. per month justified by the illustration. The reduction of the rate in the illustration from 12 to 6 per cent. will at least prevent the subordinate Courts from falling into this serious error; and I think therefore that the Lieutenant-Governor's amendment is most necessary."

The Hon'ble MR. MEHTA said:—"What has fallen from the Hon'ble Mr. Rees convinces me that His Honour's amendment is a very useful and necessary one. Mr. Rees admits that interest at the rate of 144 per cent. on double the amount lent is undoubtedly unconscionable. But he seems to hesitate whether 72 per cent. per annum on double the amount is so or not. I feel no hesitation in thinking that it is most unconscionable. It is safer, therefore, as His Honour has well pointed out, to avoid putting too extreme a case of unconscionableness."

The Hon'ble SIR GRIFFITH EVANS:—" It matters very little whether the alteration is made or not seeing that the principal is only Rs. 100 and the bond for double that amount: the 6 per cent. on that Rs. 200 would be not 72 per cent. but 144 per cent. on the money actually got, and we must all admit that that is certainly an unconscionable bargain. But it must be remembered as I have before pointed out that the object of the illustration is not to show when relief should be given but how it is to be given."

The Hon'ble RAI BAHADUR P. ANANDA CHARLU:—"I strongly support the amendment of His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor. My reasons are precisely those which I urged in support of the amendment of my Hon'ble friend Mr. Rees to delete the word 'agriculturist.' Though those reasons failed on that occasion, I trust they will now carry weight."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble SIR GRIFFITH EVANS moved that the following illustration be added after illustration (f) to section 74 as proposed by clause 4 (2) of the Bill, as amended, namely:—

"(g) A borrows Rs. 100 from B and gives him a bond for Rs. 200 payable by five yearly instalments of Rs. 40, with a stipulation that in default of payment of any instalment the whole shall become due. This is a stipulation by way of penalty."

He said:—" I propose the insertion of a new illustration to section 74. The object is to illustrate what is a penalty. There is an illustration showing that a stipulation that in default of payment of any instalment of a loan the whole amount shall become due is not a penalty. I now propose an illustration to show that a stipulation similar in form may be treated as a penalty under certain circumstances. The instance I have given is one where a loan of Rs. 100 at 20 per cent. for 5 years repayable in yearly instalments contains a stipulation that on one default not only the original principal but the whole 5 years' interest shall become due. This though in form it is a part of the contract ought from its character to be treated as a penalty. It appeared by the opinions we received that it was feared the first illustration would be extended to a case of this kind unless or expressly provided for."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS:—" I accept my Hon'ble friend's amendment. In Committee we considered this point and found a difficulty in framing an apt illustration."

The Hon'ble PANDIT SURAJ KAUL said:—" My Lord, I quite agree with the report of the Select Committee on the Indian Contract Act (1872) Amendment Bill, which was presented after the Bill had been fully considered in all its bearings. But, my Lord, I am also in favour of the Hon'ble Sir Griffith Evans' motion regarding the addition of a new illustration (g) after illustration (f) to section 74 proposed by clause 4 of the Bill as amended. The proposed illustration (g) is, beyond doubt, a stipulation by way of penalty. I had, indeed, brought forward the same proposal before the Select Committee, and was told that it would be taken into consideration, if possible. I am glad that the Hon'ble Member, also a Member of the Select Committee, has taken the matter into his own hands, and his proposal, in my opinion, is worthy of adoption by Your Excellency's Council. If an illustration like this be not introduced in the Bill as amended, there is much reason to fear that the protection afforded to agriculturists, etc., under section 19A, illustration (b), in order to guard them against transactions involving penalty, will lose its effect; because clever money-lenders will endeavour to avoid that protection by making their contracts payable by instalments. The underlying principle of the Bill is to protect agriculturists, etc., from the enforcement of contracts entailing penalty, and therefore, my Lord, with these few words I beg to support the Hon'ble Sir Griffith Evans' motion."

The Hon'ble RAI BAHADUR P. ANANDA CHARLU :—" I would strongly support this amendment."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS moved that the Bill, as now amended, be passed.

The motion was put and agreed to.

INLAND STEAM-VESSELS ACT (1884) AMENDMENT BILL.

The Hon'ble SIR JAMES WESTLAND moved that the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to further amend the Inland Steam-vessels Act, 1884, be taken into consideration.

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble SIR JAMES WESTLAND moved that the Bill, as amended, be passed.

The motion was put and agreed to.

ARBITRATION BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS presented the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to amend the law relating to Arbitration. He said that he would have to move that the Bill be taken into consideration on that day fortnight.

CARRIERS' BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS presented the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to amend the law relating to Carriers. He intimated that this Bill would also be taken into consideration on that day fortnight.

PETROLEUM BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. RIVAZ moved that the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to the importation, possession and transport of petroleum and other substances be taken into consideration. He said :—" The Bill, as I said in introducing it, is, in the main, a consolidating enactment, but opportunity has been taken to alter the present Petroleum Act on two or three points: the most important provision is that power is taken to extend the present Act to illuminant or inflammatory substances, other than petroleum, as for instance carbide of calcium. The Select Committee have not proposed to make any alterations in the Bill as introduced."

The Hon'ble MR. SMEATON said :—" My Lord, as a member of the Select Committee, I desire, with Your Excellency's permission, to make an explanation, with a reservation, in regard to this Bill. With the exception of the one important amendment, bringing other inflammable substances under the operation of the law, and widening the power of testing, the Bill now before the Council is practically a reproduction of the Act of 1886. That Act was intended primarily, if not entirely, to refer to imported petroleum. In 1886, there was very little petroleum produced in India, and the Act sufficiently met the requirements of the time. Upper Burma had just been annexed, its mineral oil-fields were but little known, and the very disturbed condition of the province, to my personal knowledge, prevented any important development of the industry for three or four years. In 1890-91, however, oil-winning in Upper Burma commenced in earnest with the establishment of law and order, and Burma is now a large producer and exporter, as well as importer, of petroleum. It would not, therefore, be surprising, my Lord, if, under the very materially altered conditions of 1898, compared with 1886, the Act, which has been reproduced in the Bill now before the Council, should be found to be in some respects obsolete and inadequate. In Select Committee I indicated some of the points on which the law appears to be defective, but as the real object of the Bill is to bring under regulation other inflammable substances, and as this object is important, I refrained from proposing any amendments, because these would have necessitated references to Local Governments, and would have postponed the passage of the Bill into law for at least a year. Representations since received from Burma have confirmed the opinions I expressed in Select Committee, and suggestions have been made for certain reforms in the law, to meet the requirements of a large producing and exporting Province. When I mention, my Lord, that the capital invested in the Burma petroleum industry amounts to over one hundred lakhs of rupees, or rather more than three-quarters of a million sterling, that the output of oil last year was 19 million gallons, or nearly a hundred times more than the production of the whole of the rest of India, and bulked a good deal more than half of the total quantity of oil brought into the interior of India; when I add, that the refined oil is exported in hundreds of thousands of gallons to the Indian ports, and that ten to twenty thousand tons of useful bye-products are annually exported to the United Kingdom; and when I point out that the revenue of the State, from the royalty alone, amounts to over two and a half lakhs of rupees, against only Rs. 6,000 from the whole of the rest of India; when, my Lord, I mention all these facts, I think I may respectfully urge that any representations from Burma are entitled, at least, to very careful consideration. There are two points in particular, on which skilled local opinion suggests that the law is susceptible of improvement in the interest of the Burma producer.

"I invite Your Excellency's attention to sections 2 and 3 of the Bill. These sections define and deal with import and transport of petroleum. To import means to bring into British India, by sea or land, presumably from some place outside British India. To transport means to remove from one place in British India to another place in British India; therefore, petroleum sent from Rangoon to an Indian port, say Madras, is transported. Section 9 of the Bill (which is identical with the existing law) empowers Local Governments to make rules for sampling and testing imported petroleum, and for the levy of fees for such testing. Sub-section (2) (b) of clause 3 authorizes Local Governments, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, to declare that petroleum transported into their territories from any place in British India shall be deemed to be imported. I am informed (but I have been unable to verify this from official sources) that certain Local Governments on the Indian seaboard have acted on this authority, and have declared that petroleum transported from Burma to their territories shall be deemed to be imported; and that, at any rate, the petroleum is so treated at all Indian ports. The consequence is that the Burma oil is doubly, sometimes trebly, burdened. It is periodically tested by the Chemical Examiner in Burma; when a shipment is to be made it is again sampled, tested, and a fee charged; and notwithstanding this, when the oil arrives at the Indian port, it is again tested and again charged with a fee. The Burma producer thus finds his oil delayed in transit, and taxed at least twice. He urges, and I submit, my Lord, with some show of reason, that the law should not put it in the power of any Local Government or local authority, even with the sanction of the Governor General in Council, to impede the trade in Burma petroleum and weight it with what amounts to an import-tax. As Your Excellency is well aware, petroleum, from the enormous supply thrown on the market, is cheap, and cannot bear much handling or many charges. The Burma producer claims that the inspection and testing made in Burma should be sufficient warranty for the free entry of his oil into any Indian port. Your Excellency is aware that rice, the principal staple of Burma, is subject to an export-duty if exported to a foreign port; it seems unfortunate that petroleum, which promises to be the next important staple product, should be hampered by fees on entry into an Indian port. I do not say that there may not perhaps be reasons for the exercise, by Local Governments or local authorities, of the power vested in them by section 3, but I cannot help thinking that a good case may be made out for at least an examination of the law, to see if the impediments which I have just described may not reasonably be removed.

" The next matter, my Lord, to which I invite the attention of the Council is, sections 5, 6 and 7 of the Bill which are identical with the existing law In respect of dangerous petroleum stringent restrictions are wisely imposed upon its possession and transport, but these sections were obviously designed to affect only the imported article, and are quite unsuitable in respect of petroleum locally produced. You cannot reasonably compel a man, who is winning oil under a lease granted by Government, to take out a license with heavy fees attached for the possession of dangerous petroleum which is daily pumped up in hundreds of gallons from the bowels of the earth ; and yet these oil-winners are technically liable to penalties under the Act. Oil-winning in Upper Burma is carried on under leases, and royalty is charged at 2⅓ pies per gallon at the mouth of the well, irrespective of the character of the oil. In one of the oil fields 25 per cent. of all petroleum pumped up is a light spirit, called naphtha, with a low flashing point, and is, under the law, dangerous. This has to be immediately destroyed, because possession or transport of it is forbidden except under a license with prohibitive fees. So that the Burma producer not only pays royalty on one-fourth part of his output which he has to destroy, but he loses the naphtha, which under different conditions of possession and transport, he could sell locally, or export with profit.

" In regard to refineries legislation may very probably be required. Native refineries are springing up under the stimulus of the low price at which crude oil can now be obtained. These refineries are likely to increase in number, and they are believed to be a source of danger. Their structure and skilled supervision will require attention. It is possible also that transport of petroleum over long distances in pipes may require regulation.

" I have made these remarks and suggestions, my Lord, chiefly in order to guard against the impression that in signing the report of the Select Committee I subscribe to the belief that the present Bill adequately deals with the matter in hand; and in the hope that the Bill may be passed without prejudice to any reasonable claim for reform of the law, which may hereafter be made by the Burma producer."

The Hon'ble MR. RIVAZ said :—" I need only explain very briefly, with reference to what my Hon'ble friend Mr. Smeaton has said, that the object has been to make this almost entirely a consolidating Act, and, on this account, any opinions on, or any general alterations in, the Bill have not been invited, and have not been considered. As regards the first point discussed by my Hon'ble friend Mr. Smeaton, and which he mentioned to us in Select Committee, I think it will be found that the Act, as it stands, is sufficient, and that if petroleum, which is transported from Burma into India by sea, is treated as imported petro- power, by is subject, as such, to any undue restrictions, the Government h- petroleum as the Act as it stands, to remove such restrictions and to treat s- transported and not imported.

" The other points which have been discussed by the Hon'ble Mr. Smeaton are absolutely new to me, and I had not heard of them before. If the Burma traders in petroleum have any general representations to make regarding the inadequacy of the present Act, I have no doubt that they will be forwarded in due course to the Government of India by the Burma Government and will be carefully considered."

The Hon'ble SIR JAMES WESTLAND said:—"I was not a member of the Select Committee on this Bill, and the points brought forward by my Hon'ble friend Mr. Smeaton are entirely new to me. Of course, I am aware that petroleum is produced in large quantities in Burma, and I observed that my Hon'ble friend Mr. Smeaton fixed me with his eagle eye when he talked of the fees charged in respect to that petroleum. I plead not guilty, my Lord. I have nothing whatever to do with them; I am not responsible for the fixing of royalties and fees. But there is one consideration with which I have great sympathy, and that is that, at the present moment, we are running great risk of permitting one Province to tax the products of another Province. These are questions which will no doubt in due course receive the attention of the Government, and I think my Hon'ble friend Mr. Smeaton makes a reasonable claim in stating that we ought to take care that the petroleum industry be not hampered and the petroleum exported from Burma shall not be subjected to any special tax in other parts of British India. I think that there is so much in the statement made by my Hon'ble friend Mr. Smeaton that deserves attention before the Legislature proceeds further with this Bill, that I would suggest to Your Excellency that when we come to consider the motion that the Bill, as amended, be passed, it may be adjourned for a short time so as to enable us to take up the points suggested by Mr. Smeaton, so that the Bill may come before the Legislative Council as one which the Government of India can recommend to be passed."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. TOYNBEE moved that in clause 2 (2) (h) of the Bill for the words "a body of port commissioners or other like body" the words "any local authority" be substituted. He said:—"Your Excellency, my object in moving the two amendments which stand in my name is to make it quite clear that clauses 9 (2) (h) and 23 of the Bill extend both to Municipalities and also to other local authorities such as Port Commissioners. It is, I think, doubtful if the words 'a body of Port Commissioners or other like body' used in clause 9 (2) (h) of the Bill could be construed as including a Municipality. If they cannot, then Municipalities are placed in a worse position than Port Commissioners or bodies like them. It seems advisable therefore that the term 'local authority' as defined in section 3, sub-section (28), of the General Clauses Act, X of 1897, should be used in both the above clauses. The definition of 'local authority' in the General Clauses Act runs thus:

"(28) 'local authority' shall mean a Municipal Committee, District Board, body of Port Commissioners or other authority legally entitled to, or entrusted by the Government with, the control or management of a municipal or local fund."

"It is thus comprehensive enough to include all local bodies whatsoever. The Port Commissioners of Calcutta levy fees on the storage of petroleum in their Budge Budge warehouses under section 103 of the Calcutta Port Act, III (B. C.) of 1890; and the mufassal Municipalities in Bengal levy fees for its storage as a dangerous trade, under section 261, Act III (B.C.) of 1884 [as amended by Act I (B.C.) of 1893]. Assuming that the intention of the Government of India in enacting clause 23 of the Bill (which is reproduced word for word from section 24 of Act XII of 1886) is to reserve to itself, for financial or other reasons, the power to limit, or put a stop to, the levy, by any local authority, of fees for storing petroleum, then clause 23 of the Bill should be so worded as not to be open to misconstruction. If, however, clause 23 of the Bill be intended to apply only to Municipalities and clause 9 (2) (h) only to bodies like Port Commissioners, i.e., bodies dealing, as I read the words, only with a port, then the proposed amendments are unnecessary."

The Hon'ble MR. RIVAZ said:—"The words which my Hon'ble friend wishes to alter were part of the Act of 1886, and as they have stood since without any objection being made to them, the Select Committee did not consider the point. We had not my Hon'ble friend's assistance on the Committee, but I see no objection to the wording being altered, and I am willing to accept the amendment."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. TOYNBEE also moved that in clause 23 of the Bill for the word "municipalities" the words "local authorities", and for the word "municipality" the words "local authority", be substituted.

The Hon'ble MR. RIVAZ :—"I am willing to accept this amendment also. I understand that it will chiefly affect the Port Commissioners of Calcutta, of whom my Hon'ble friend is the Chairman, and he is the best authority on the point."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. RIVAZ moved that to the first schedule to the Bill, before the Table for correction of Flashing Points, the following be added, namely :—

"IV.—Directions for determining the flashing point of petroleum which is not fluid at ordinary temperatures.

1. Nature of the test-apparatus.—The instrument employed is the Abel-Pensky petroleum testing apparatus, fitted with an additional thermometer to indicate the temperature of the oil in close proximity to the walls of the cup. This thermometer has a cylindrical bulb, $\frac{7}{8}$ inch in length and $\frac{3}{16}$ inch in diameter. It is scaled from 45° to 165° Fahrenheit, ten degrees on the scale occupying $\frac{3}{8}$ inch. The thermometer is held vertically in a socket attached to the cover of the oil-cup in such a position that the bulb is $\frac{1}{10}$ inch from the side of the cup.

(The thermometer can be removed and the orifice which is provided for it closed by means of an india-rubber plug, if the apparatus is required for testing petroleum in the ordinary way.)

2. Directions for preparing the sample for testing.—About ten fluid ounces of the oil are placed in a pint flask, the mouth of which is then closed with an india-rubber stopper, and the sample is liquefied by placing the flask in a water-bath, the temperature of which is only raised sufficiently high to liquefy the oil.

3. Directions for preparing and using the test-apparatus.—The water-bath and test-lamp are to be prepared in the manner prescribed in Part III of this schedule. The oil-cup is to be filled with the liquefied oil, and the cover (into which both thermometers are to be previously inserted) placed on it, care being taken that the bulb of the additional thermometer is not brought into contact with the bracket gauge fixed inside the cup. The oil-cup is then to be placed in a refrigerator, or plunged up to the projecting collar in water maintained at sufficiently low temperature until both thermometers indicate the temperature at which the testing of petroleum is directed in Part III of this schedule to be commenced. The oil-cup is then to be removed, wiped dry and placed in the water-bath, and the testing effected in the manner prescribed in Part III of this schedule, the temperature indicated by the additional (vertical) thermometer alone being noted, and the average of three determinations, duly corrected for atmospheric pressure, being recorded as the flashing point of the sample, provided that no greater difference than 4° Fahrenheit exists between any two of such results."

He said :—"These directions have been issued since the Bill was drafted, and as we wish to make the new Act complete, up to date, it is desirable to add them to the schedule."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. RIVAZ moved that the Bill, as amended, be passed. He said :—"With reference to what my Hon'ble friend Sir James Westland just now said, I think it is desirable that the Bill should be passed. It is intended to be mainly a consolidating measure, but there is one alteration in it, namely, the enabling power to extend the provisions of the Bill to other substances than petroleum and its liquid compounds. As regards the taxation on imported petroleum from Burma to any other part of India, I think that that can be dealt with under the present Act, which, if I recollect right, provides for this. It says in the Bill that—

'Notwithstanding anything in the definitions of 'import' and 'transport,' the Local Government, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, may, by notification in the local official Gazette, declare—

(a) that petroleum imported into the Province from any part of British India by sea or across intervening territory not being part of British India shall, for all or any of the purposes of this Act, be deemed to be transported.'

"I think that will meet the point which has been raised. It is only a question of treating certain petroleum as transported instead of treating it as imported. It is perfectly clear that any Local Government may so deal with it."

The Hon'ble MR. SMEATON :—"It is the power to impose taxation on local products passing between two Provinces in British India that is objectionable."

The Hon'ble MR. RIVAZ :—"I should think if there was any dispute between two Local Governments, the Government of India might be left to deal with the matter fairly."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS :—"May I point out about this Bill this much, that it is a Bill intended to consolidate and amend the law relating to petroleum and other illuminants. That law has already been amended several times. We wanted on this occasion to make one specific amendment: namely, to deal with the case of acetylene, and to provide for other substances which may hereafter be invented and which at present are not provided for. When we were applying the law to a new substance, namely, acetylene, we took the opportunity to consolidate the old Acts because at present the law is contained in several different enactments. The provisions complained of by Mr. Smeaton have been in force for many years, and we have never heard a suggestion from Burma that the existing law was inconvenient or required changing. We hear it now for the first time. A consolidation of the Statute Book is almost impossible if, when the Consolidation Bill comes up, the whole matter has to be thrown into the melting pot again. On the other hand, if the existing law—not the law in the Bill, because the Bill only reproduces the existing law—but if the existing law is absolutely wrong, then we had better postpone matters in order to bring in an amending Act dealing only with acetylene. I do not know why if the existing law is absolutely wrong Burma has not addressed us on the subject before, because it has been in force for a good many years."

The Hon'ble Mr. SMEATON :—"The Hon'ble Mr. Chalmers has just said that the law has been in force for several years. So it has, but I may point out that the harm done by both those parts of the law to which I have adverted has been as yet on a comparatively small scale. The enterprise in Burma oil has grown by enormous leaps and bounds, and I think that men whose capital is sunk in an enterprise which grows in importance in this way feel themselves pinched as its proportions grow and as competition increases. I admit that they have jogged on in a way, but now the shoe is pinching and they have come forward. They have had no opportunity of examining this Bill, and they have telegraphed regarding the points on which they think the law requires amendment. Unless there is good reason (of which we are at present ignorant) for imposing this extra testing and these extra fees, I think they should be withdrawn. There is no reason, so far as I can see, why these extra fees should be imposed. They are tantamount to an import-tax which may in the end operate most unfavourably on the trade in oil between two Provinces of the same Empire; and the Burma people ask that the power under which that taxation is imposed shall be withdrawn. That is the point which they raise. As regards the Bill, I should be very sorry to impede its passing, seeing that it concerns another very important matter, and I understand that the Hon'ble Member in charge considers that the Bill in so far as that matter is concerned should be passed into law. It was in fact on that ground that I abstained from making any suggestions for amendment in the Select Committee. I am perfectly willing to waive any suggestion for amendment at present on the understanding that if the Burma producer is able to make out a good case, it will be considered, and that it will not be said against him, that because he did not take advantage of the consolidation law to make his amendments, these amendments were not necessary."

The Hon'ble MR. RIVAZ:—"I think I may give the assurance that if any good ground is made out for any radical alteration of the present law, it will certainly be considered, but as the matter will take a long time and the other point is of some importance, and as we wish to amend the present Act on that one point, it surely seems well to consolidate the previous Acts up to date. I do not see that it ties the hands of the Government of India in the smallest way in dealing with the question in future."

The Hon'ble SIR JAMES WESTLAND:—"I quite accept the assurance given by the Hon'ble MR. RIVAZ, and I am quite willing to accept the Bill as it now stands. My feeling was that, considering the state of this industry and the promise there is of its development, we should be careful lest we do anything that might strangle it. Any new productive industry in India is of extreme value, and I should be very sorry to take any action here that would have any effect in encumbering such an industry or preventing the attraction of capital to it. It was for that reason that I thought it might be well to postpone the passing of the Bill for a short time to give an opportunity of looking up the points to which my Hon'ble friend Mr. Smeaton has drawn attention, but as the Hon'ble Mr. Rivaz has expressed his willingness to look into the matter when it is laid before him in his official capacity, I do not think there is any objection to our passing the Bill as it now stands, and thus improving the law by consolidating the existing Statutes."

His Excellency THE PRESIDENT:—"I think we may pass the Bill in its present form, on the understanding that if any representations are made to us from Burma they will receive full consideration, and that if an amending Act is finally required, the Department concerned will undertake it."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Council adjourned to Friday, the 24th February, 1899.

No. 321.—The services of Captain H. E. Cotterill, Royal West Surrey Regiment, are placed temporarily at the disposal of the Government of Bombay for employment on plague duty.

SANITARY.

PLAGUE.

The 24th February, 1899.

795.—THE following Notice of the Board of Trade (Fisheries and Harbour Department), No. F. & H. 1941, dated London, the 31st January 1899, is published for general information:—

The Board of Trade have received, through the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, a copy of a Despatch from Her Majesty's Representative at Lorenço Marques, enclosing the following copy of a Decree respecting Quarantine, viz.:—

HEALTH DEPARTMENT OF THE PROVINCE OF MOÇAMBIQUE.

Measures to be taken to prevent an Invasion of Bubonic Plague.

1. To vessels fulfilling the conditions of paragraph A in the Regulation for Marine Sanitation of January 27th of 1897, viz., those having a clean bill of health, without sickness on board and being in good hygienic state, free pratique shall be accorded.

2. To vessels fulfilling the conditions of paragraph B, viz., those having a clean bill of health, without sickness on board, but in bad hygienic state, free pratique shall be given after the necessary hygienic rectification has been carried out. A vessel coming under the provisions of Article 115 shall not be admitted.

3. Vessels coming under paragraphs C, D, E, and F shall neither receive pratique nor shall be allowed to enter in terms of Articles 100 and 119 of the Regulation referred to.

4. The greatest care shall be exercised as regards vessels coming under Article 120, and such vessels shall only be admitted after clearly proving that they have not sailed from unclean ports and that during the voyage nothing of a suspicious nature has occurred.

5. Vessels arriving from ports where bubonic plague is prevalent shall anchor under such conditions that there will be the least risk of spreading the disease, until it is decided what shall be done with them in harmony with the Sanitary Regulations.

6. The Administrative and Health Authorities shall communicate the provisions of this Decree to the Health Officers of their respective districts, making all possible arrangements necessary to prevent any vessel communicating with shore without first having been duly subjected to legal inspection.

Moçambique, December 2nd, 1898.

Paragraphs and Articles in the Sanitary Regulations referred to in the Provincial Decree of December 2nd, 1898: —

Vessels with Clean Bills of Health.

(c) Unclean ship—suspected sickness on board.

Vessels having Foul Bills of Health.

ARTICLE 115. If from the bill of health or inquiry made to the Captain it is ascertained that the vessel to which paragraph B is applicable, has had yellow fever or plague on board within one year without the vessel having been thoroughly disinfected, that vessel shall be subjected to disinfection in place of fumigation.

ARTICLE 100. Quarantine can only be made in those ports where there are lazarettos and entails the removal of the passengers to these establishments and the delay and disinfection of the ship, baggage, and cargo.

1. Quarantine begins to run for passengers from the time at which they leave the ship; for the crew, employees, and workmen who may be on board of the vessel detained, from the time of the completion of disinfection of the vessel, or from the time they cease to communicate with the vessel, for the persons employed with the cargo and the disinfection of detained merchandise from the termination of their communication with these.

2. Communication of persons already in the lazaretto with others who subsequently left the same vessel shall not be a reason for prolonging the quarantine, provided such quarantine has taken place within the first twenty-four hours.

ARTICLE 119. Vessels which ought to be detained on arriving at a port where quarantine and disinfection are not allowed must at once make for a port where these can be effected.

1. Such vessels may, if there are patients aboard, who demand it, receive a shore doctor on board, or consult with him in writing, if that is sufficient.

Article 64 applies in such a case.

2. If the condition of the sick above referred to, however, is so serious that it is supposed that they cannot continue their journey without imminent risk to life, the Chief Health Officer in accord with the Administrative Authority may allow the sick to be landed on an isolated part of the town, where they may be suitably treated and communication with people and goods strictly prevented.

ARTICLE 120. The vessel which does not bring a bill of health or brings one that is not in proper form, and not having other reason for detention shall be detained until notice, telegraphic or otherwise, of the state of health of the port of departure, the ports of call, the landing-places and their neighbourhood, shall have been received. Should notice come, the vessel will be dealt with in accordance therewith; should notice not come, then the vessel shall be considered to have a foul bill of health with reference to the pestilence most commonly existing in the ports of origin and of call without prejudice to the respective fine.

The cost of telegraphic information shall be paid by the Captain.

ARTICLE 64. The Chief Health Officer or the Sub-Chief (and an interpreter if necessary) shall go on board the vessel when it is necessary to ascertain the sanitary condition of a vessel, and further when there being illness on board, it is necessary to determine the nature of that illness. If, as a result of the visit, the detention of persons should become necessary, the Health Officer and Sub-Health Officer and Interpreter shall go to the lazaretto, or other suitable place, and there take off all their clothes, which must be disinfected, they shall then make suitable disinfection of their persons, and shall then be free. They must, however, be again isolated should they show any signs of pestilence.

At the same time there shall go on board one or more quarantine guards as may be, by the Chief Health Officer, deemed necessary to make the needful examinations.

The 24th February, 1899.

No. 75.—The following papers relating to the resignation by the Right Reverend Frederick Gell, D.D., of his Office of Bishop of Madras, are published for information:—

TO THE MOST REVEREND JAMES EDWARD COWELL, D.D., BY DIVINE PERMISSION LORD BISHOP OF CALCUTTA AND METROPOLITAN BISHOP IN INDIA.

In the name of God Amen.

Whereas by the Letters Patent constituting the See and Bishoprick of Madras it is amongst other things declared that if the Bishop of Madras (therein named) or any of his successors shall by instrument under his hand and seal delivered to the Bishop of Calcutta for the time being and to be by him the said Bishop of Calcutta accepted and registered resign the Office of Bishop of Madras aforesaid such Bishop of Madras shall forthwith cease to be a Bishop of Madras. And whereas after having been duly appointed and consecrated Bishop of the See and Diocese of Madras I Frederick Gell took upon myself the Office of Bishop of the said See on the 27th day of November 1861 and am now the true and lawful Bishop thereof. And whereas having been for upwards of thirty-seven years now last past Bishop of the said Diocese of Madras with its wide extent of territory I now find myself incapacitated by reason of the weight of years and bodily infirmity from the due performance of the duties attaching to my said office as such Bishop and therefore am desirous of resigning the said office and of ceasing to be Bishop of Madras. Now therefore in pursuance of all rights me thereunto enabling I the said Frederick Gell do by this instrument under my hands and seal absolutely resign my said office and Dignity of Bishop of Madras and all and singular the rights powers privileges functions and Jurisdiction to me belonging or appertaining in respect thereof into the hands of your Lordship the Lord Metropolitan Bishop of Calcutta. And I pray that your Lordship will be pleased to accept this my resignation and to cause the same to be registered in the Archives of the said Metropolitan Bishoprick of Calcutta. And that such my resignation and your Lordship's acceptance thereof may date from the fifteenth day of February next ensuing up to which date I purpose to exercise the Episcopal functions of my said office.

F. MADRAS.

In witness whereof I the said Frederick Madras have hereunto set my hand and seal this thirty-first day of January in the year of Our Lord one thousand eight hundred and ninety-nine and in the year of my consecration the thirty-eighth.

Registered this 31st day of January 1899 by me.

F. ROWLANDSON, LL B,
Registrar of the Diocese of Madras

We hereby accept the resignation of the office of the Bishop of Madras and direct that the same be registered in the Office of our Registrar. Dated this fifteenth day of February one thousand eight hundred and ninety-nine.

J. L. C. (Seal.) CALCUTTA.

A. H. L. FRASER,

RESOLUTION—By the Government of India, Public Works Department.

Review of Revenue Report of Irrigation Works in the North-Western Provinces for the year 1897-98.

READ—

Letter No. 3909 I., dated 21st December 1898, from the Government of the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, forwarding the Revenue Report of Irrigation Works in the North-Western Provinces for 1897-98, and the Resolution of that Government reviewing the Report.

OBSERVATIONS.—The results of the irrigation operations in the North-Western Provinces during the past financial year are, in the opinion of the Government of India, very satisfactory. Excluding, for purposes of comparison, an area of 122,396 acres irrigated by the Terai and Bhabar Canals under the Commissioner of Kumaon (which exceeded that for the previous year and also the average of preceding five years by 21 per cent.), the total area irrigated by the major and minor works under the Public Works Department amounted to 2,511,173 acres, of which 992,583 were in the kharif and 1,518,590 in the rabi. This is indeed much less than the 3,023,884 acres irrigated by the same works in the famine year 1896-97, the deficiency amounting to 207,877 acres in the kharif and 304,834 acres in the rabi. Famine conditions also prevailed during the earlier part of the kharif of 1897, but the rains broke in the middle of June and were also favourable for the rabi sowings, so that the demand for water in both crops was much less intense than in the previous year. On the other hand, famine prices and the depletion of stocks throughout the country stimulated the extension of canal irrigation, so that the area attained in 1897-98 was second only to that of 1896-97, and was 36 per cent. higher than the average of the preceding ten years, including the abnormal year 1896-97. It may be noted, however, that in the year 1883-84 an area of 2,297,674 acres was recorded, so that there has been no very great development of the irrigation system during the past fifteen years.

2. The areas irrigated by each irrigation-work compare as below with the area for 1896-97 and the average of the past ten years :—

Canal.	Area irrigated in 1897-98.	Area irrigated in 1896-97.	Average area for ten years ending 1896-97	Value of crops irrigated in 1897-98.

GRAND TOTAL	2,511,173	3,023,884	1,846,899	8,78,46,244

The average value of the crops raised is estimated at Rs. 35 per acre. The average incidence of the occupier's rate was Rs. 2·96 per acre, but including owner's rate and the share of land revenue credited to the canals, the total charge for irrigation, direct and indirect, averaged Rs. 3·78 per acre, or less than one-ninth of the value of the crop.

3. Although the area irrigated was less than in 1896-97, the gross revenue was greater, and exceeded that of the previous year, which was the highest on record, by Rs. 15,35,183, or 17 per cent. This is due to the fact that the revenue collected during the year was that assessed on the record rabi area of 1896-97 and the kharif area of 1897, and also to the outstanding balances at the beginning of the year being considerably larger than usual. The following table shews the gross and net revenue, and the return on the capital outlay for the three classes of irrigation works :—

Class.	Capital outlay to end of year.	Gross revenue.	Working Expenses.	Net revenue.	Return on capital outlay.
	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Per cent.
Productive	7,82,48,942	1,00,95,837	26,69,796	74,26,041	9·49
Protective	43,02,017	1,37,608	1,14,732	22,876	0·53
Minor	27,58,818	3,56,690	1,89,700	1,66,990	6·05
TOTAL	8,53,09,777	1,05,90,135	29,74,228	76,15,907	8·92

4. The return of 9½ per cent. paid by the Productive works exceeds that of 1896-97 when it was 7·82 per cent. and was the highest then on record. The returns for each of the canals in the two years are as below :—

Canal.	1896-97.	1897-98.
Upper Ganges	9·56	10·69
Lower "	4·75	6·25
Agra	6·02	7·67
Eastern Jumna	26·77	34·02

These works have been constructed from borrowed capital the accumulated interest charges on which amounted to Rs. 8,06,43,012 at the end of the year. The total net revenue derived from them, however, exceeds 1,018 lakhs, so that the surplus revenue stands now at 211¾ lakhs, of which a sum of no less than 45 lakhs was contributed during the year under review. These figures indicate the benefit which the general taxpayer has derived from the works constructed from borrowed capital in these provinces.

5. Works of the Protective class constructed as a protection against famine are represented in the North-Western Provinces by the Betwa Canal alone. The Local Government points out that this canal has, for the first time since it was opened, yielded revenue in excess of its working expenses. This result is due to the collections for the year under review including the assessments on the large area irrigated during the rabi of 1896-97. On the other hand, however, the kharif area for 1897 was practically nil, as it amounted to 807 acres only against 25,660 acres in previous year. This failure in the kharif is attributed to the fact that the reservoir was almost empty during the early kharif season, while there was an entire absence of demand during the rainy season. Nevertheless the total area irrigated in 1897-98 was second only to that of 1896-97, prior to which the maximum area irrigated by this canal was 35,292 (in 1895-96), while in the year 1894-95 it amounted only to 8,041 acres. It is hoped that the measures under consideration for improving the supply during the early kharif which are now under consideration may lead to an improvement in the financial position of this canal.

6. The success attained by the minor works, which paid a return of 6 per cent. on capital outlay, the net revenue being 1 per cent. in excess of the record year 1896-97, is also a matter of congratulation, inasmuch as the results are attributed largely to the numerous improvements carried out on these canals during recent years. The Government of India note that a further improvement is anticipated in the case of the Rohilkhand canals from the revision of the occupier's rates.

7. During the year an expenditure of Rs. 43,134 was expended on new drainage works as a charge against the Capital Accounts of the canals, and a further expenditure of Rs. 87,007 on the improvement and maintenance of existing drainage works was charged against the revenue accounts. In addition, Rs. 39,017 were spent from provincial revenue on agricultural, chiefly drainage works, the total length of drainage cuts being 3,072 miles. The more important drainage works are now completed, but as irrigation is extended and becomes longer established, improvements in the drainage system will always be required, and it is satisfactory to note that this matter is receiving continued attention. The summary of observations of spring levels as given in paras. 227 and 228 of the Chief Engineer's Report indicates that there has been no appreciable rise in the spring level during the year, except perhaps in the neighbourhood of the Etawah Branch, Lower Ganges Canal, while there has been a distinct fall on the Betwa Canal. These observations are of great interest and importance, but it is doubtful whether very reliable conclusions can be drawn from them in the form in which they are presented in the report. The question is one that will be separately considered.

8. The report is the first of the Provincial Irrigation Revenue Reports which has been received by the Government of India, who desire to record their appreciation of the punctuality of its submission as well as of the excellent results attained. They desire also to acknowledge the services rendered by Colonel Corbett and by the officers of the Irrigation Department, who rendered him such effective assistance, and note that special commendation has been bestowed by the Lieutenant-Governor on Mr. Marsh, Superintending Engineer.

ORDER—Ordered, that copies of this Review and of the Report be forwarded to the Revenue and Agricultural Department for information.

Ordered, also, that copies of the Review be forwarded to the Government of the North-Western Provinces and Oudh and to the Local Governments and Administrations in the Public Works Department, noted on the margin, for information.

The Governments of Madras, Bombay, Bengal, the Punjab and Burma.
The Chief Commissioners of the Central Provinces, Assam and Coorg.
The Residents at Hyderabad and Mysore.
The Agents to the Governor General in Central India, Rajputana and Baluchistan.

Ordered, further, that the Review, together with the Local Government's Resolution, be published in the Gazette of India, and that copies of the Review and of the Report be forwarded to Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

No. 3514 I. of 1898.

RESOLUTION—By His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor, North-Western Provinces, and Chief Commissioner of Oudh.

Read—

Irrigation Revenue Report of the North-Western Provinces for the year ending 31st March 1898 by the Chief Engineer, Irrigation Works, North-Western Provinces and Oudh.

CAPITAL OUTLAY.

OBSERVATIONS.—The total expenditure against the Capital Account of the Canals in these Provinces during the past financial year amounts to nearly 14 lakhs. Of this amount over 10 lakhs was incurred on the construction of the new Fatehpur Branch, Lower Ganges Canal, and the balance chiefly on constructing new drainage and distributary channels, and on works connected with improvements in the system of distributing water to the cultivators. Against the estimate of 37¼ lakhs sanctioned for the Fatehpur Branch, the expenditure to the end of the year amounts to 24 lakhs. The upper portion of the Branch is now being opened for irrigation. The important work of improving the Nim Nadi, in the Meerut and Bulandshahr districts, was completed during the year, and a survey was made for a new head for the proposed canal from the Ken River for the irrigation of the Banda district.

2. The total charges to the end of the year against the Capital Account of canals of all classes amount to Rs. 8,79,41,960.

MILEAGE OF CHANNELS.

3. The length of channels open was increased during the year by the addition of 140 miles of new drainage cuts and 40 miles of distributary channels. The total length of channels open at the end of the year amounts to 11,783 miles.

FINANCIAL RESULTS.

4. The realizations of the year on which the financial results are based are the outcome of the assessments made during the rabi season of 1896-97 and the kharif of 1897. During the former season, owing chiefly to the early cessation of the rains of 1896, an unusually large area was irrigated; the rains of 1897 were fairly normal in amount and distribution, but there was a long break at the end of June and during the first ten days of July; this, combined with high prices of food-grains, led to the irrigation of a very large area of autumn crops. Thus the revenue assessed during these two seasons was unusually large, and in consequence the receipts for the financial year under review reach an exceptionally high figure.

5. The gross receipts from the four canals which are classed as Productive Works amount to nearly 101 lakhs, or 14½ lakhs in excess of those of the previous year, which were the highest then recorded. The working expenses amount to nearly 26¾ lakhs and fall with an average incidence of Rs. 1·16 per acre irrigated, a normal figure for a year of extensive irrigation. The net revenue derived from open works of this class amounts therefore to 74¼ lakhs-this represents a return of 9·5 per cent. on the Capital cost of the works. After meeting the interest charges for the year, which amount to nearly 30 lakhs, there is left a clear profit of Rs. 44,32,716 The profit of the preceding year, which amounted to 31½ lakhs, was 43 per cent. in excess of the record; it has now been exceeded by 12¾ lakhs, or by 40 per cent. The Upper Ganges Canal returns 10·69 per cent.; the Lower Ganges 6·25; the Agra Canal 7·67; and the Eastern Jumna Canal yields the handsome return of 34 per cent. on its Capital cost.

6. For the first time since its opening in 1885 the Betwa Canal, the only Protective Work in these Provinces, has returned a revenue which is more than sufficient to cover the working charges of the year. The gross receipts for the year amount to Rs. 1,37,608, of which about Rs. 47,000 is on account of outstanding balances recovered during the year. The working expenses amount to Rs. 1,14,732, leaving a net revenue of Rs. 22,876. This amount, however, is Rs. 1,10,078 less than the interest charges of the year. The financial condition of this canal is not likely to improve to any great extent until it can be assured a supply during the dry hot weather months. Measures, with this object in view, are under consideration by the Chief Engineer. It will be remembered that in the Resolution on last year's Report the value of the crops produced by irrigation from this canal was estimated at 23 lakhs of rupees, a sum equal to half the Capital cost of the canal.

7. Minor Works yield a net revenue of Rs. 1,66,990, and return 6 per cent. on their Capital cost. The net revenue of the year is 11 per cent. in excess of that for 1896-97, which again exceeded the previous maximum by over 35 per cent. The Dún Canals return 9·70 per cent.; the Rohilkhand Canals 3·68; and the Bijnor Canals 19·4 per cent. on Capital. The numerous improvements carried out on these canals during recent years are now yielding good results. In the case of the Rohilkhand Canals, though there has been a large increase in the annual receipts, the percentage of earnings on Capital is still low; in this respect the enhanced occupier's rates, which came into force on 1st April last, should lead to a considerable improvement.

8. The gross revenue realized from works of all classes amounts to nearly 106 lakhs, or, for the first time in the history of the canals of these Provinces, to over a crore of rupees. The working expenses amount to 29¾ lakhs, and the net revenue to Rs. 76,15,907. This represents a return of 8⅔ per cent. on the Capital outlay of 879½ lakhs invested in the canals. The interest charges for the year amount to Rs. 31,56,279. The final result therefore for all canals is a net profit of Rs. 44,59,628. This exceeds the figure for the previous year, which itself was 38 per cent. above the record, by 13½ lakhs, or 42 per cent.

PROVINCIAL CONTRACT.

9. Under the contract made with the Government of India in 1892, this Government retains the direct revenue from Major Productive and Minor Irrigation Works, but meets the direct revenue charges for such works and pays interest to the Imperial Government on the total Capital outlay from all sources on Major Productive Works, and also on the Capital outlay (Rs. 23,35,355) from Imperial funds on Minor Works and Navigation. Under this contract in 1895-96 the Local Government lost nearly 14 lakhs; in 1896-97 it gained over 20 lakhs; while the gain for the year under review amounts to the exceptionally large sum of over 33 lakhs.

10. The great falling off in receipts in 1895-96 was extremely embarrassing to the Provincial finances, and the experience of recent years has shown that the irrigation revenue is too variable to be suited for complete provincialization. The new contract has therefore been drawn up on the understanding that the Local Government is to be credited with only one-half of the net receipts from Major Productive Works; while for the purposes of the contract the net revenue has been assumed at the moderate estimate of 35 lakhs a year.

AREA AND VALUE OF CROPS IRRIGATED.

11. During the financial year under review, that is, during the kharif of 1897 and rabi of 1897-98, the area irrigated from all canals amounts to 2,633,569 acres. This area is greatly in excess of that for any previous year excepting 1896-97, a year of great drought. In that year the rainfall on many canals was only about half the normal amount, and owing to the early cessation of the rains there was an intense demand for water early in the rabi season, when there was plenty of water available for all canals; on the other hand, the rains of 1897 were fairly normal, and during the succeeding rabi the demand for canal water did not become really strong until late in the season when the rivers were low and supply insufficient.

12. The water was distributed from 40,518 outlets to 11,400 villages. Of the total area irrigated 871,590 acres were under wheat; 279,512 under indigo; 246,732 under sugarcane; and 185,339 under rice. Under sugarcane and rice, which are charged the highest water-rate, the areas are but little short of the record areas of the previous year. A fall in the price of the manufactured dye has led to a decrease in the area under indigo.

13. The value of the crops irrigated, excluding those on the Tarai and Bhabar Canals, is estimated at 8¾ crores, a sum almost exactly equal to the amount of Capital invested in canals in these Provinces. At this estimate the average value of the crop irrigated is Rs. 35 per acre; and the average rate paid by the occupier for the use of the water is Rs. 2·96 per acre, or one-twelfth of the value of the crop.

IRRIGATING "DUTY" OF WATER.

14. The areas irrigated per cubic foot of average daily discharge measured at the heads of the four canals classed as Productive varies, for all the seasons combined, from 193 acres on the Lower Ganges to 230 acres on the Eastern Jumna Canal. For the Agra and Upper Ganges Canals the figures are 204 and 214 acres, respectively.

15. The total water-rate earned by each cubic foot of discharge amounts to Rs. 914 on the Upper Ganges; Rs. 593 on the Lower Ganges; Rs. 672 on the Agra Canal; and Rs. 1,140 on the Eastern Jumna Canal. These figures naturally fall somewhat short of those for the previous year, during which there was an almost unceasing demand for canal water. On the Upper Ganges and Eastern Jumna Canals, from which sugarcane and rice are extensively cultivated, the figures are, however, but little short of those for the previous year.

DISTRIBUTION OF SUPPLY.

16. In para. 31 of his report, the Chief Engineer notices the measures taken for abolishing the system of tátils, or periodical closures of outlets. Such closures have hitherto been found necessary to ensure a fair distribution of the supply; but, as the Chief Engineer points out, they give rise to many evils, and it is satisfactory to note that, owing to improvements recently carried out, the necessity for tátils no longer exists on many of the distributary channels.

ASSESSMENTS.

17. The revenue, direct and indirect, assessed during the year on works of all classes falls just short of 95 lakhs. This amount is 14½ lakhs, or 18 per cent., in excess of the maximum recorded previously to the dry year of 1896-97. On the Eastern Jumna Canal the assessments almost exactly equal those of the previous year; on the Dún Canals they are the highest yet recorded.

GENERAL REMARKS.

18. The results for the year are again very favourable, and the Lieutenant-Governer notices with satisfaction the commendations bestowed by the Chief Engineer upon the officers in charge of the various Circles and Divisions, and upon those officers and subordinates whose names are mentioned in Section VI of the Report. To Mr. Marsh, Superintending Engineer, whose name is specially mentioned in connection with the measures adopted for improving the system of water-distribution, the thanks of Government are accorded.

ORDER.—Ordered that the above Resolution be submitted to the Government of India, and that it be published in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh Government Gazette.

ORDERED, also, that it be circulated to other Governments and Departments as usual.

By order, etc.,

F. V. CORBETT, Colonel, R.E.,

Secretary to Government, N.-W. P. and Oudh,

4 (a) After the filing of the specification and before the expiration of the fourth year from the date of the filing thereof—

The sum of R50 for each of the above inventions.

NOTICES.

All communications relating to Act V (the Inventions and Designs Act) of 1888 should be addressed to the "Secretary to the Government of India, Department of Revenue and Agriculture (PATENTS BRANCH), CALCUTTA."

The office of the Secretary under the Act is open for the transaction of business from 11 A.M. to 4 P.M. on all days except Sundays and gazetted holidays.

The Government of India are advised that, as trade marks are not "designs" within the meaning of the Act, they cannot be registered under Part II.

The fees payable under the fourth and sixth schedules are now collected in cash and applicants are warned that they must be responsible for any delay in cashing cheques.

Copies of the weekly notifications, and of the quarterly lists, of applications and specifications filed in the Secretary's office are now on sale to the public at one anna and eight annas a copy, respectively.

Attention is requested to the rules made by the Government on the 10th October, 1895, in regard to the preparation of applications, specifications and drawings.

All applications made under the Inventions and Designs Act, V of 1888, will from this date (December 19th, 1896) lie in the visitor's room of the Patents Office for ten days from the date of the Gazette of India in which their filing may have been notified; or, if the tenth day is a holiday, till the evening of the office day next following.

At the time of delivering or sending an application for leave to file a specification, the applicant shall cause a duplicate copy of the application to be delivered or sent therewith to the Secretary.

G. W. FORREST,
Secy. under the Inventions and Designs Act, 1888.

THE INDIAN LAW REPORTS.

PUBLISHED UNDER AUTHORITY.

The Indian Law Reports, published under the authority of the Governor-General in Council, appear in monthly parts, published as soon as possible after the first of each month, at Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, and Allahabad, and comprise four series,—one for the Calcutta High Court, a second for the Madras High Court, a third for the Bombay High Court, and, a fourth for the Allahabad High Court. The cases heard by the Privy Council on appeal from each High Court are reported in the series for that High Court. Cases heard by the Privy Council on appeal from Provinces in India not subject to any High Court are reported in the Calcutta Series.

The Calcutta Series is distributed by the Bengal Secretariat Book Depôt, and the Madras, Bombay, and Allahabad Series are distributed direct from Madras, Bombay, and Allahabad, respectively.

In supersession of the previous advertisements, on and from the 1st January, 1889, the terms of subscription and sale will be as follows for current issues, as well as for back numbers of the Reports from 1870:—

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Weather Review of India for the week ending at 8 a.m. on Saturday, February 11th, 1899.

The slight disturbance which had formed in Upper Sind at the close of the previous week lay over Rajputana on the morning of the 5th. A secondary depression began to form in the East Punjab during the day. This subsidiary depression was of moderate intensity but was the chief feature of the weather on the morning of the 6th. It filled up as rapidly as it formed during the day and high pressure conditions were re-established in North-Western India on the 7th. The primary or original disturbance advanced through Central India on the 6th, the eastern districts of the North-Western Provinces and Bihar on the 7th, Assam and Upper Burma on the 8th, and broke up or passed outside India during the next 24 hours.

A second disturbance passed into Baluchistan on the 8th from the plateau of Iran. It marched among the usual track of cold weather storms through Rajputana, on the 10th, into the Central districts of the North-Western Provinces on the 11th.

The two disturbances described above gave moderate rain in Baluchistan, light to moderate rain over the greater part of the Punjab, the Gangetic Plain, Berar and the Central Provinces and moderate to heavy snow in the North-West Himalayas.

Weather was fine throughout the week in Burma and the Peninsula, with the exception of Southern India, which obtained moderate rain from thunderstorms, chiefly on the 8th and 9th.

The mean temperature of the week was in moderate to considerable excess of the normal over nearly the whole of Northern and Central India and the Central Provinces, and approximately normal in Burma and the Peninsula. The excess was most pronounced in Rajputana (5°), Central India and the North-Western Provinces (each 4½°).

Daily Summary.—Sunday, February 5th.—Pressure was unchanged in the Peninsula and differed very slightly from the normal of the day. It had increased briskly in Burma and North-Eastern India and was in slight to moderate excess in that area. Pressure had given way briskly in Rajputana due to the transfer to that area of the disturbance which was forming in Upper Sind at the close of the previous week. Pressure had increased slightly in the rear of the depression in Upper Sind and was now from a twelfth to a tenth of an inch below the normal over the whole of Rajputana, Kathiawar and Upper Sind. Winds were from their normal cold weather directions in the Peninsula. They were light to unsteady in the Burmese Peninsula and Bengal and had shifted to easterly directions in the Gangetic Plain under the influence of the disturbance in Rajputana. Humidity had increased rapidly in Sind, Gujarat, Central India, Berar and the Central Provinces and at the hill stations in Upper India. Skies were free from cloud in parts of Bengal, Burma and Southern India and more or less clouded in the remainder of the country. They were overcast in Baluchistan and Upper India. Light rain or snow had fallen in Baluchistan, Kashmir and the Punjab hill and submontane districts. The mean temperature of the previous 24 hours was more or less largely in excess of the normal in the North-Western Provinces, Rajputana, the Punjab, Central India, Berar, Bihar and Gujarat, in slight to moderate defect in the southern half of the Peninsula and practically normal in the remainder of India.

Monday, February 6th.—Pressure had increased to a slight extent in Baluchistan, Sind, Gujarat and West Rajputana and had decreased over nearly the whole of the remainder of the country. The fall was brisk in Bundelkhand and the neighbouring districts and brisk to rapid in Kashmir, the Punjab and the western and hill districts of the North-Western Provinces. The depression passing through Rajputana on the previous day was central in Bundelkhand It was, however, obscured by the formation of a secondary depression in the East Punjab. Pressure was about a seventh of an inch below the normal in the two areas of depression. Winds were irregularly cyclonic in direction over the Punjab, Rajputana, Central India and the Gangetic Plain, but were light in force. Skies were overcast in the North-West Himalayas and heavily clouded in the Punjab and North-Western Provinces. Skies had cleared in Baluchistan. The double disturbance had occasioned light to moderate showers in Baluchistan, the Punjab and the western districts of the North-Western Provinces, and moderate snow in Kashmir and the Punjab Himalayas. Temperature had risen briskly in North-Eastern India and was higher than usual over the whole of the country, with the exception of the Deccan, Mysore and Madras where it was in slight to considerable defect, due chiefly to much lower day temperatures than usual. The excess in the area of increased temperature was most marked in the North-Western Provinces (9°), Central India (7°), Rajputana (6°) and the Punjab (4°) and was on the whole exhibited more largely in the night than the day temperature.

Tuesday, February 7th.—The secondary or the Punjab depression had broken up completely. The primary depression had, on the other hand, advanced eastwards into the eastern districts of the North-Western Provinces and become of less importance. Pressure had hence risen briskly to very rapidly in North-Western and Central India, thus re-establishing high pressure conditions in that area. A slight increase of pressure had also occurred in Burma, Bengal and the greater part of the Peninsula, and pressure was now more or less above the normal throughout the country, with the exception of Sind where it was in slight local defect. The excess was considerable to large in Burma and the Punjab and was most marked in the North Punjab where it was upwards of an eighth of an inch in amount. South-easterly winds held in Bihar and the eastern and central districts of the North-Western Provinces. Skies had cleared in North-Western and Central India but were more or less clouded in the Eastern districts of the North-Western Provinces, Bihar, Chota Nagpur and Bengal. Fairly general rain, light to moderate in amount, had been received in the East Punjab and the North-Western Provinces and some showers in Bihar, the Central Provinces and Central India. Moderate to heavy snow had fallen in the North-West Himalayas. A rapid reduction of temperature had occurred in the North-Western Provinces, Rajputana, Central India and the Punjab and a brisk to rapid increase in Bihar, Chota Nagpur, Mysore and Madras. The mean temperature of the previous 24 hours was 5° above the normal in Bihar and Chota Nagpur, 4° in Central India, Berar and the North-Western Provinces, 3° in Southern India, Mysore, the Central Provinces and Sind, and 2° in Rajputana, the Punjab, Bengal and Assam. Elsewhere the variations were small and unimportant. Temperature was in large defect (8° to 9°) at Simla, Chakrata and Ranikhet.

Wednesday, February 8th.—Pressure had again increased briskly to rapidly in Sind, the Punjab and Kashmir, thus emphasizing the high pressure conditions obtaining in that area on the previous day. Pressure had on the other hand fallen to a slight extent in Burma, Assam, Bengal and Bihar due to the eastward advance of the residual disturbance which was in the eastern districts of the North-Western Provinces on the previous day. Pressure was beginning to give way in West Baluchistan on the outskirts of a cold weather disturbance advancing through East Persia. Light to moderate north-west winds had set in over the Punjab and Rajputana and were extending eastwards down the Gangetic Plain. Very strong winds were blowing at Cherat. Light variable airs and calms obtained in Bengal and ordinary easterly winds in the Peninsula. Skies had cleared in North-Eastern India but were moderately clouded in Southern India. Cloud was beginning to form in Baluchistan and the Punjab. Some heavy thundershowers had occurred in East Ceylon and Southern India, and a few light showers had fallen in Bihar and North Bengal. Temperature had increased 9° in Baluchistan and was 12° above the normal in that area during the past 24 hours. It had fallen 5° in Bihar and was normal in that area. The temperature conditions in the remainder of India were similar to those prevailing on the previous day.

Thursday, February 9th.—Pressure had decreased throughout the Indian area. The decrease was rapid in Sind and Kashmir and brisk in Baluchistan and the remainder of North-Western India. The disturbance which was in East Persia on the previous day was now crossing the North-West frontier into Upper Sind. Pressure was a twentieth of an inch in defect of the normal at Jacobabad and the depression was hence of very slight intensity. Pressure was normal in the Peninsula and in slight to moderate excess in Burma and North-Eastern India. Winds were light at the hill stations in Upper India and were falling off in the Gangetic Plain where they blew generally from westerly directions. Skies were overcast in Baluchistan, the Punjab and Kashmir and light to moderate rain had fallen in Baluchistan and some light showers in the West Punjab during the previous 24 hours. Local thundershowers had again occurred in Madras and Malabar where skies were overcast. Temperature had diminished rapidly in Baluchistan and was now 7° higher than usual in that area. Temperature had on the other hand increased slightly to briskly in Northern India and the northern half of the Peninsula, and was during the past day normal in the Madras Deccan, Orissa, Madras Coast, West Coast and Burma, and from 2° to 5° above the normal in the remainder of the country due to much higher night temperature than usual.

Friday, February 10th.—Pressure had recovered to a slight extent in Baluchistan and had again fallen in India and Burma. The fall was greatest in Rajputana in consequence of the advance to that area of the feeble disturbance passing through Upper Sind on the previous day. The depression was unchanged in character, pressure being as on the 9th only about a twentieth of an inch below the normal of the day in the central area. Winds from northerly directions obtained in the Punjab and light airs and calms in the Gangetic Plain. Winds were increasing in the Peninsula and were from their normal cold-weather directions. Skies had cleared in Baluchistan and were less clouded in the Punjab than on the previous day. They were overcast in Kashmir and more or less heavily clouded in Berar, Central India and the Western and Central districts of the Central Provinces. Baluchistan and the North and Central Punjab had obtained light to moderate rain and Berar and the Central Provinces some local thundershowers. Light snow had fallen in the Murree and Kashmir Hills.

Temperature had fallen 3° in Baluchistan and 2° in the Punjab, and was during the previous 24 hours in moderate excess in the former and normal in the latter area. The temperature conditions were practically unchanged in other districts.

Saturday, February 11th.—The barometric changes of the previous twenty-four hours were unimportant except in the areas affected by the depression.

Pressure had increased briskly in the area covered by the disturbance on the previous day and had fallen rapidly in the central districts of the North-Western Provinces to which area it had now been transferred. Pressure was in somewhat greater defect in the depression than on the previous day. Winds had shifted to southerly directions in Lower Bengal and Chota Nagpur and were of moderate intensity. Winds were cyclonic in direction in the depression but were light. Unusually strong winds prevailed at Cherat, their velocity being at the rate of 44 miles per hour at 8 A.M. Light to moderate north-westerly winds had appeared over Sind, Rajputana and the Punjab. The air was abnormally dry in Gujarat and West Rajputana, the lowest humidity recorded at 8 A.M. was only 6 per cent. at Mount Abu. Skies were more or less heavily clouded in the North-Western Provinces and Central Provinces and numerous light to moderate showers had occurred in these areas and in Bundelkhand, Baghelkhand and the North Punjab. Light snow had fallen in the Murree and Kashmir Hills and hail in the hill districts of the North Western Provinces. A very rapid reduction of temperature had occurred in Berar, thus reducing the temperature considerably below the normal in that area. The mean temperature of the past 24 hours averaged 7° above the normal in Rajputana, 6° in Chota Nagpur, 5° in Central India and the North-Western Provinces, 4° in Bihar and Bengal and 2° in Assam, Orissa and the Central Provinces. Temperature varied but slightly from the normal in other districts.

Temperature.—The mean temperature of the week was in general excess by amounts averaging 2° for the whole Indian land area. The only area in which the mean temperature of the month was lower than usual included the Madras Coast and Madras Deccan. The deficiency in that area was however small and of no importance. The excess of the mean temperature of the week over the normal was least marked in Burma, Orissa, West Coast, Bombay Deccan, Mysore and South India and was largest in amount in a belt stretching from Rajputana to Chota Nagpur in which it ranged between 4° and 5°. It may be noted that in the area of increased temperature the day temperature was almost as largely above the normal as the night temperature.

The following table gives mean temperature variation data of the week:—

Rainfall.—The conditions under which the precipitation of the week occurred have been fully indicated in the general summary. The rainfall returns show that practically or absolutely no rain fell during the week in Burma, Assam Surma and Hills, Bengal (excepting Central Bengal), the eastern districts of the North Western Provinces, the South and Central Punjab, Rajputana, Central India and the whole of the Peninsula north of Lat. 12° N. The deficiency over the greater part of the rainless area was however very slight as the normal fall of the period is small in amount. In the area of effective rainfall the average amounts received ranged from a tenth of an inch in Assam Brahmaputra to 2·34 inches in the Punjab Hills and differed but little from the normal in Central and North Bengal, Chota Nagpur, North Bihar, South Oudh, the South-East Punjab and the west of the North-Western Provinces. The fall of the week was in moderate excess of the normal in South Madras, Malabar, Coorg, Madras, South-Central, the North-Western Provinces Hills and West Submontane and Baluchistan and in large excess in the Punjab Hills which obtained 1·59 inches more than their normal quantity, viz., 0·75 inch.

The most noteworthy daily falls recorded during the week were 2·94 inches at Dehra Dun on the 7th, 2·84 inches at Trivandrum on the 9th and 2·25 inches at Dharamsala on the 7th and the principal totals 6·70 inches at Srivilliputtur (Tinnevelly), 4·31 inches at Palampur (Kangra), 4·22 inches at Cochin (Malabar), 3·16 inches at Coonoor (Nilgiris) and Pithoragarh (Almora) and 3·09 inches at Dehra Dun.

The seasonal rainfall continues more or less in defect of the normal over the whole of the country with the exception of Bengal, Chota Nagpur, Bihar, Oudh, the eastern districts of the North-Western Provinces, Malabar, Coorg, South Madras and Madras South-Central. The deficiency is moderate to considerable in amount in Orissa, the western districts of the North-Western Provinces, the greater part of the Punjab and Baluchistan. It may be noted that no rain has fallen during the past six weeks in Sind and Rajputana areas which usually obtained light to moderate rain during the period.

SIMLA, the 16th February 1899.

T. W. HOLDERNESS,
Secretary to the Government of India.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Weekly Report on the state of the Season and Prospects of the Crops.

Madras.—For week ending 18th February.—No rain fell during the week except very slight showers in Ganjam and Vizagapatam. The water-supply is generally sufficient. Some sowings are being made. The standing crops are generally in fair condition. The harvest is yielding a fair outturn. Pasturage is scarce, but fodder is generally sufficient. Prices are generally falling.

Bombay.—For week ending 22nd February.—The standing crops have been damaged by frost in parts of the Upper Sind Frontier and by rats in one taluka of Bijapur. American cotton has been blighted in two talukas of Dharwar. The harvesting of the late crops is progressing in seventeen and preparations for next season are being made in nine districts. Cotton-picking continues in parts of Guzerat and Kathiawar. Fodder is sufficient except in parts of Sind. Agricultural stock is healthy. Prices have risen in seven, have fallen in three districts, and are stationary elsewhere.

Bengal.—For week ending 20th February.—Slight rain fell during the week in almost every district of the Province, except those of the Orissa Division. The rain was accompanied by hail in places in Bihar, but not much damage to the crops is reported. The general prospects of the crops continue favourable. The spring crops are maturing, and poppy is coming into flower. Sugarcane-pressing is approaching completion. Spring rice is still being transplanted. Lands are being ploughed for autumn rice and jute. The fodder-supply is everywhere sufficient. The price of common rice continues almost stationary.

North-Western Provinces and Oudh.—For week ending 22nd February.—With the exception of slight showers in a few districts clear weather has prevailed generally. The standing crops are flourishing, and are being irrigated where necessary. The pressing of sugarcane continues and planting of the new sugarcane crops has commenced in parts. The poppy crop is thriving and promises well. Damage to crops by rats is reported from some districts. Prospects continue favourable. Supplies and fodder are sufficient. Prices show a slight fall in a few districts but are otherwise stationary or rising.

Punjab.—For week ending 22nd February.—More or less rain has fallen in the Umballa, Ferozepore, Mooltan, Lahore, Sialkote, Rawalpindi, Peshawar and Dera Ismail Khan districts. Pressing of sugarcane and ploughings for the extra spring crops continue. The standing crops have been generally benefited in the districts where rain has fallen recently. Crops on unirrigated areas are failing from drought in Delhi. The condition of the standing spring crops is generally good to average. The gram and rapeseed crops are being damaged by caterpillars and rust in Ferozepore, and the sugarcane crop has been damaged by frost in parts of Sialkote. Cattle are generally in good condition. Fodder is sufficient except in Delhi, Shahpur and parts of the Umballa districts. Prices, especially of wheat, are rising in Hissar and Sialkote, falling in Shahpur, Rawalpindi, Peshawar and Dera Ismail Khan and are unchanged elsewhere. Wheat is selling from $15\frac{9}{16}$ to $20\frac{1}{2}$, gram 19 to 25, barley 19, bulrush millet 19 to 25, maize 25 to 34, great millet 25 and rice 13 to 14 seers per rupee.

Central Provinces.—For week ending 21st February.—The weather is clear. The nights and mornings are cool but the days are becoming warm. The recent rain has benefited the late sowings in Mandla. The recent cloudy weather has damaged the standing crops in Bhandara. The extent of the damage to crops caused by hail in Saugor and Seoni is being ascertained, otherwise prospects are unaltered. The threshing of the autumn crops has almost been completed and the pressing of sugarcane continues. The reaping of the winter crops is progressing. Employment for agricultural labour is scarce in the Haka tahsil of Damoh. Fodder is becoming scarce in the Bargarh tahsil of Sambalpur. The cheapest prices are—wheat 19½, gram 30, rice 22, and juar 28 seers per rupee. The dearest prices are—wheat 12½, gram 16, rice 11 and juar 20 seers per rupee.

Burma.—For week ending 18th February.—In Lower Burma threshing is nearing completion and winnowing is well advanced. Dry weather paddy has been sown in Tavoy. In Upper Burma cultivation of the dry weather crops is progressing and prospects continue fair or good. The price of paddy has risen from three to five per cent. in Rangoon and seven other districts of Lower Burma and ten per cent. in Thayetmyo and Pakokku. Prices are stationary elsewhere.

Assam.—For week ending 21st February.—Rain fell in most districts during the week. Land is being prepared for early rice in the Assam Valley districts and for low land rice in Sylhet. Gathering of mustard and pulses, pruning of tea and pressing of sugarcane are in progress. Prospects of the mustard crop are fair and of sugarcane and pulses generally good. Fodder is scarce in Cachar, the Naga, Khasi and Jaintia Hills and in parts of Sylhet. Water is insufficient in the Khasi and Jaintia Hills and in parts of Sylhet. Prices—common rice, Silchar 15 to 15¼, Sylhet, Dhubri, Gauhati and Tezpur 16, Nowgong 14, Sibsagar 13 and Dibrugarh 13½ seers per rupee.

Mysore and Coorg.—For week ending 22nd February.—MYSORE: The standing crops are in good condition. Paddy has been harvested in parts of Tumkur, Kolar, Mysore and Chitaldrug. Prices have fallen slightly in Bangalore, Hassan and Shimoga and risen in Kolar and Kadur.

COORG:—The threshing of rice and coffee-picking continue. Water and fodder for cattle are sufficient. Prices of food grains are stationary.

Berar and Hyderabad.—For week ending 22nd February.—BERAR: The weather is cool. Harvesting of the winter crops is in progress and ploughing of fields for the ensuing monsoon crops continues. A scarcity of fodder and water prevails in parts of the province. Prices are fluctuating.

HYDERABAD: No rain fell during the week. The harvesting of the spring crops is progressing. The winter rice crop is in fair condition. Prices are almost stationary. Prices—wheat 9¼, coarse rice 10½ and jawari 22 seers per current sicca rupee.

Central India.—For week ending 22nd February.—No rain fell in Central India during the week. Agricultural operations have been completed in Bundelkhand and are in progress elsewhere. The standing crops have been slightly damaged in Gwalior and Malwa, but are in good condition elsewhere. Agricultural stock is healthy and pasturage sufficient. Prices are above the normal in Bundelkhand and normal elsewhere. The condition of opium is good in Gwalior and Indore and fair in Malwa.

Rajputana.—For week ending 22nd February.—No rain fell during the week. Irrigation of crops continues Their condition is generally good but slight damage by frost is reported from Ajmere-Merwara and by hail from Kerowlee. Cattle are generally in good condition. Fodder is still scarce in parts of Sirohi, Marwar, Kherwara, Meywar, Haraoti, Ajmere, Jeypore and Bikanir. Prices are rising in Ajmere and five States, falling in Jeysulmere and steady elsewhere. Emigration from the distressed Ajmere villages and from Merwara continues: 79 persons emigrated during the week. The total emigration up to date amounts to 4,115 persons. The numbers employed on relief works were—3,962 in Merwara and 1,067 in Marwar. Prices—Ajmere 19, Beawar 22, and Marwar 15 seers per rupee.

Kàshmir.—For week ending 21st February.—The weather has been cloudy but is now fine. Prices continue below normal. The price of rice is 27 seers per rupee.

JAMMU PROVINCE :—For week ending 22nd February.—No rain fell during the week. The condition of the standing crops is fair. Fodder is sufficient. Prices are falling slightly, wheat selling at 18 and maize 25 seers per rupee.

Nepal.—For week ending 18th February.—Rainfall 0·16. The weather is sunny and clear. The price of rice is 8½ seers per rupee.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

FINANCE AND COMMERCE DEPARTMENT.

REPORT ON THE CASH BALANCES AND RESOURCE OPERATIONS OF THE INDIAN TREASURIES FOR THE TWELVE MONTHS FROM OCTOBER 1897 TO SEPTEMBER 1898.

No 888A, dated Calcutta, the 23rd February 1899.

ORDER—By the Government of India, Finance and Commerce Department.

READ—

Letter from the Comptroller and Auditor General, No. 1886, dated the 7th February 1899, submitting a report on the Cash Balances and Resource Operations of the Indian Treasuries for the twelve months from October 1897 to September 1898.

ORDERED that the letter and its annexures be published in the Gazette of India for general information.

H. H. RISLEY,

Offg. Secretary to the Government of India.

No. 1886, dated Calcutta, the 7th February 1899.

From—The Comptroller and Auditor General,

To—The Secretary to the Government of India, Finance and Commerce Department.

I have the honour to submit my report on the Cash Balances and Resource Operations of our Treasuries for the twelve months from October 1897 to September 1898.

Minimum Balances.

2. The following table gives the estimated Minimum Balances for all India for each month, from October 1898 to September 1899, and their distribution between the District Treasuries of the several Provinces and the Reserve Treasuries and Presidency Banks. The usual statements, marked A and B, showing the comparison of these balances with the estimates of previous years, are appended at the end. In the table the total balances at the Presidency towns have been shown as usual in a lump sum in a separate column:—

[In lakhs of Rupees.]

3. As soon as the special pressure on our cash balances was removed, steps were taken to reduce the number of temporary Currency Chests, and as many as 124 were closed during the year. The Accountants General have revised their minima with reference to this change and to the remark contained in the last Report. With a very few exceptions I have accepted them in the above table. The balances for all India have been estimated by me on the principle explained in previous reports.

Cash Balances.

4. The following statement shows the distribution of the actual balances in thousands of rupees on the first day of each month during 1897-98, with the corresponding figures of the previous year :—

5. During the period referred to in the above table the balances passed through two crises, once in December 1896 and again in October 1897. The former was caused by famine and plague, as stated in the last Report, and the same causes, together with the war on the North-Western Frontier, produced the latter. Both occasions required the adoption of special measures for husbanding the resources and working the treasuries with extremely low balances. Help was obtained in December 1896 by the investment of 200 lakhs of the Currency Reserve (vide last Report), and in October 1897 by a remittance of 100 lakhs from the Secretary of State. The low state of the balances gave rise to frequent calls for assistance from treasuries at short notice, and to meet them numerous Currency chests were used. They numbered 144 on 1st December 1896 and 212 on 1st October 1897. The reason why more Currency chests were required on the latter date, although the balance was 17 lakhs higher, was that the special receipt referred to above was 100 lakhs less, and the net outgoings of the months were 71 lakhs more than in the previous year.

6. The relief afforded by the currency investment of December 1896 was only temporary. The effects of famine and plague grew more serious in the subsequent months, and it became necessary to reduce the capital expenditure on Railways in July 1897, and to ask the Secretary of State to suspend his drawings in September 1897. These measures, however; proved insufficient, and in October 1897, when the balance was 495 lakhs lower than in October 1896, they were supplemented by the remittance from the Secretary of State mentioned above. The balances, however, remained very low until December, when Revenue collections improved the position and Famine Relief works began to be closed. The Secretary of State was able to resume his drawings by the middle of this month, and the balances rose steadily till they reached about 16 crores in April, being 2 crores higher than the corresponding figure of the previous year. A considerable improvement in Railway Revenue and in some of the principal heads of Revenue immediately after April, and the termination of the Military operations on the North-Western Frontier soon after, enabled Government to effect a reduction in the intended amount of the new loan and maintain easy balances throughout the second half of the twelve months under report.

7. The details given in the statement contained in para. 4 show that the balances in the hands of the Presidency Banks were kept at a fairly high level during the year, the reduction in the balances being, as far as possible, effected at Government treasuries.

Movement of Funds.

8. The following table shows the net result of Inter-Provincial transfers by "Foreign Remittances" and "Supply Bills" during the year, and compares the position of each province with the previous year, eliminating in the last column the changes in its balance :—

10. It appears from this statement that large improvements occurred in many provinces (especially North-Western Provinces, Central Provinces, Madras and Bengal), chiefly on account of a favourable agricultural season and the disappearance of famine. From these causes the revenue increased, expenditure on Famine Relief was discontinued, advances made in the previous year in connection with Famine were repaid, and the traffic on Railways revived. These improvements in the Punjab were, however, insufficient to raise the balances there higher than they had been in the previous year in consequence of war expenditure, and in Bombay in consequence of very large payments of Council Bills and the shortness of loan receipts there. The heads printed in italics in the above statement represent special transactions of 1896-97, which did not recur in 1897-98.

11. Details of Inter-Provincial Remittances shown in the table under para. 8 are given in the statement marked C annexed to this report. As compared with the corresponding statement of the last report, there was a decrease in the total amount of each kind of remittance, except transfers through Banks, the total of all kinds decreasing from 40 to 35 crores. This followed from easier balances which rendered fewer remittances necessary. The transfers through the Currency Department, under which the heaviest transactions occur, show the most marked decrease, viz., from 22 to 13 crores, their amount in the previous year having been abnormally high on account of their frequent occurrence. On the other hand, transfers through Banks, which are made for meeting the demands of trade, increased, the increase in the net amount remitted to Bombay alone having been 192 lakhs, the result of the brisk trade in wheat at Karachi and Bombay. The transfers between Bengal and India in the accounts of the Bank of Bengal are only technically remittances, and their amount was almost the same as in the previous year.

12. Of the differences between the amounts of Foreign Supply Bills of the two years given in the table under para. 8, the following only need be noticed. In Assam the receipts increased as the traders, especially in Sylhet, used this form of remittance more freely than before. As Bengal drew less on the Central Provinces, the net receipts of the former decreased and the net result of the latter was converted into a receipt on account of smaller payments of these bills. Larger amounts of bills were drawn upon Punjab in connection with the wheat trade, the payment of which reduced the net receipts of the province. The "Variation in balances" given in the same table shows that in both years the increase or decrease in the total balance was distributed among all provinces.

13. The following statement gives the usual particulars of the large Foreign Remittances, as well as the more important of the Local Remittances, including Supply Bills, local and foreign :—

the demand on Bombay having fallen off by 6 lakhs. The transfers through the Bank of Bengal from the treasury and the currency chest at Nagpore amounted to a net deposit of 2 lakhs against a net drawal of 4 lakhs in the previous year.

18. In Burma 117 lakhs were supplied by District Treasuries to Rangoon against 52 in 1896-97 to meet the increased drawings of the Bank of Bengal during the rice season. The total amount of local Bills sold on the Bassein Currency Agency was 13 lakhs more than during last year, the increase in the demand being caused by a plentiful harvest of rice and better prices. On the other hand, Bills on Henzada Currency Agency fell off by about 2 lakhs, the funds there being insufficient. The Mandalay treasury continued to be the depôt for the supply of coin to the treasuries dependent on it, and was the only permanent Currency Agency in Upper Burma. The issue of local Supply Bills showed an increase of 4 lakhs, due to larger demands at Mandalay.

19. In Assam there was an increase of 10 lakhs in the issue, and a decrease of 4 in the payment, of Foreign Supply Bills compared with last year. The steady decrease since 1892-93 in the issue of Bills by Bengal continued, no increase in their demand having arisen after the special arrangements made last year for issuing them as freely as possible. No remittance of coin was required from Bengal against 6 lakhs in the previous year.

20. In Bengal the remittances to Calcutta from the District treasuries increased by 10 lakhs, owing chiefly to an increase in the issue of Supply Bills, as the District treasuries had larger balances. The remittances to the Opium-paying treasuries were 49 lakhs less on account of the closure of Famine Relief Works. The remittances made to the several centres of trade to facilitate the drawing of Supply Bills decreased by 26 lakhs, larger local surpluses being available for the purpose. There was also a decrease of about 9 lakhs in the issue of Foreign Supply Bills on treasuries in the Central Provinces, as compared with the transactions of last year. The small coin depôt at Jalpaiguri has been closed.

21. In the North-Western Provinces and Oudh with the disappearance of famine, the treasuries required smaller supplies of funds. There was a decrease of 2,38 lakhs in the total volume of local remittances, namely, 1,64 lakhs in whole rupees, 60 lakhs in Currency Notes, and 14 lakhs in small silver and copper. The demand for Supply Bills on local treasuries also decreased by 33 lakhs, which is attributable to the stagnation in trade caused by the outbreak of plague in other provinces.

22. In the Punjab there was a very brisk demand, presumably in connection with the heavy trade in wheat, for Supply Bills on Bombay and Karachi, and the largest sales took place at Delhi, Simla, Rawalpindi, Dehra Ismail Khan, Peshawar, Bannu and Kohat. The amount of local coin remittances decreased as larger supplies were obtained from the local currency chests.

23. In Madras the effects of famine being over, the net amount remitted by District treasuries to Madras was about 2 lakhs more than in the previous year. The issue of Supply Bills and wire transfers on District treasuries fell off by 2½ lakhs, owing to a decrease in the demand in connection with the working of Cotton Presses, although the restrictions necessitated by the financial pressure of last year were removed.

24. In Bombay the balance in the hands of the Presidency Bank was generally kept above 40 lakhs, although the balance of the Province was low during the early part of the year. The remittances from the Reserve Treasury

14. The general result of the principal operations connected with the three Presidency towns are summarized as follows. The amount withdrawn from the District Treasuries in each case is larger than in the previous year owing to their higher balances:—

15. The following points in the Resource operations of the year under report may be specially noticed.

16. In India the treasuries no longer accumulate coins of local currency. Bhopali Rupees do not circulate now in Central India, having been called in by the Bhopal State as noted in the last Report, and Halli Rupees have been considerably superseded by Government currency at Hyderabad since 1897, the few transactions in Halli coin that now remain resulting in a net outgoing from the treasury and necessitating at times a purchase in the local market. Sambhar, although a surplus treasury throughout the year in every year, required help once during the year under report to meet a sudden demand of the Postal Department in connection with heavy Money Orders remitted by merchants returning in large numbers from Calcutta in consequence of a panic about plague. The Nepal treasury was able, for the first time since 1887-88, when orders were issued for the purpose, to meet all its requirements by the sale of Supply Bills which had not previously been in favour with the public.

17. In the Central Provinces 9 lakhs of Foreign Supply Bills were drawn during the year on Calcutta and Bombay against 14 lakhs in the previous year, to the District treasuries were about 73 lakhs less, while those in the opposite direction were somewhat more than in the previous year, because the latter was a year of famine. The heavy drawings of the Postal Department, however, continued in some Districts. The Bank of Bombay took over 55 lakhs for the use of its up-country branches. Karachi issued bills for 22 lakhs on Sukkur during May to July to strengthen its currency balance.

Small Silver and Copper Coin.

25. Statement D annexed to this report shews the absorption of these coins in the different Provinces during the year under review and in the three preceding years. Its most prominent feature is that coins other than half pice and pie pieces were returned from circulation into the Government treasuries. This unusual fact was the result of the extraordinarily large issues of the previous year which had overstocked local markets. The copper coins returned were so numerous that in many treasuries it was difficult to find sufficient accommodation for their storage. This quick return of the surplus stock in the districts lately affected with famine is a satisfactory feature, as otherwise the coins might have circulated at a discount to the injury of the people. The special features of the several Provinces are noted below.

26. In India the net issues to the public from the Reserve Treasury at Calcutta decreased by over 5 lakhs, owing partly to large receipts of coins returned from circulation, and partly to smaller demands of the trade which was not very brisk during the last six months. In the Central Provinces the treasuries were generally overstocked, and consequently required fewer remittances than in the previous year. Out of the surplus copper at Nagpur a portion was found uncurrent, and this has since been ordered to the Bombay Mint for use in dollar coinage. In Burma the absorption increased in the Lower Provinces due to a bumper rice crop, but is was more than counterbalanced by the decrease in the Upper Provinces due to large remittances in the previous year to famine-stricken districts. In Assam the demand for small coin exists chiefly in connection with the payment of wages in Tea Estates, the Assam-Bengal Railway, and the Military and Public Works Departments. In Bengal the absorption of small coin occurs in normal years in connection with tea, jute and silk trades, and the decrease from the last year is attributed to the large issues of that year on account of Famine Relief Works. In the North-Western Provinces, with the return of a good season after the famine of last year, the consumption of $\frac{1}{2}$ Rs. and $\frac{1}{4}$ Rs. increased, while there was a falling off in $\frac{1}{8}$ Rs. as they were issued in exceptionally large quantities in connection with Famine Relief Works. The return of single pice from circulation after the closing of Relief Works counteracted the effects of the great demand for them during the marriage season in April and May. In the Punjab the increase in the absorption of single pice was chiefly due to the concentration of troops on the Frontier, to larger demands of the Public Works Department, and to a large number of Hindu marriages. In Madras the heavy return of coins from circulation was a reaction from the excessive absorption for famine expenditure during the previous year. In Bombay the same cause accounts for the decrease in circulation.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.
FINANCE AND COMMERCE DEPARTMENT.

ANNUAL REPORT ON THE OPERATIONS OF THE SAVINGS BANKS IN INDIA DURING THE YEAR 1897-98.

No. 868A., dated Calcutta, the 23rd February 1899.

ORDER—By the Government of India, Finance and Commerce Department.

READ—

Report by the Comptroller and Auditor General, No. 1781, dated the 9th January 1899, on the operations of the Savings Banks in India during the year 1897-98 and the Statements annexed to it.

ORDERED that the Report and the Statements be published in the Gazette of India for general information.

H. H. RISLEY,

Offg. Secretary to the Government of India.

No. 1781, dated Calcutta, the 9th January 1899.

From—The Comptroller and Auditor General,

To—The Secretary to the Government of India, Finance and Commerce Department.

I have the honour to submit my Annual Report on the operations of the Savings Banks in India during the year 1897-98.

2. These Banks are of two descriptions, viz., Banks open to the public and Service Institutions; the former head now includes the Post Office Banks only; and the latter, the State Railways Provident Institutions, the Civil Engineers' Provident Fund, the Forest Officers' Provident Fund, and the Military Banks. The State Railways Provident Institutions are for the non-pensionable employés of the State Railways, the Civil Engineers' Provident Fund is for the Officers of the Public Works and Telegraph Departments, the Forest Officers' Provident Fund is for the officers of the Imperial and Provincial branches of the Forest Service, and for the officers of the Geological Survey Department, and the Military Banks are for the benefit of Non-Commissioned Officers and Privates of British Regiments.

3. I enclose the usual Statements marked I to VII, containing the accounts and statistics for the year.

4. The principal features of the returns are shown in the following table, which also compares them with those of the previous year:—

* Excludes R6,044, on account of interest on Presidency Savings Bank deposits.

5. The statement shows that on the 31st March 1898 there were 6,484 Government Savings Banks in India, containing 755,426 accounts, which earned interest from Government to the amount of R32,70,439, and held balances aggregating R10,55,67,332, exclusive of Government Securities held on behalf of the depositors to the nominal value of R7,42,400. As compared with the year 1896-97, there has been a decrease of 112 in the number of banks and an increase of 13,211 in the number of depositors. The balance of deposits has, however, declined by R33,00,584 and the amount of interest earned by R1,89,076. The causes of these decreases are probably to be found in the famine and plague which prevailed during the year. The volume of the transactions on account of Government Promissory Notes was less than in 1896-97, but the net result was an increase of R1,13,600.

6. Upon the working of the Post Office Banks, the Director-General of the Post Office will submit a detailed report, and it is therefore only necessary here to make some observations in respect of the other Banks.

7. There has been a large decrease of R2,27,609 in the balances in the Military Banks. The decrease occurs in all the commands. The chief cause which led to this result was the operations on the Frontier, Savings Bank transactions being suspended when corps proceed on Field Service. Military Savings Banks will shortly be closed, as their maintenance is not considered necessary now that the Postal Savings Banks afford the necessary facilities for thrift, and it may be that the prospective closing of these Banks has affected the deposits.

8. The Forest Officers' Provident Fund was created only in 1896-97, and the balance stands at R1,36,991.

9. The balances of the other Service Institutions still continue to increase, and now amount to R1,12,94,746, an increase over the previous year of R3,54,634. The transfer of the Burma State Railway to a Private Company accounts for the decrease in the number of Banks and depositors which appears under the State Railway Provident Fund Institutions.

10. The balances of the Savings Banks proper, including the Military Banks, amount to R9,41,35,595, which represents a decrease of R37,47,042 as compared with the balances of 1896-97. These balances are held by Government at call.

The several reports on the Progress of Education in India during the year 1897-98, with the orders passed on them by Local Governments and Administrations.

RESOLUTION.

The information regarding the state and progress of Education in India during the quinquennial period 1892-93 to 1896-97, given in the special reports submitted by Local Governments and Administrations in accordance with the instructions contained in Home Department Circular No. $\frac{\text{9-Education}}{\text{271-280}}$, dated the 18th July 1895, is being separately reviewed. The present Resolution gives a brief summary of the most striking features presented by the figures for the year 1897-98.

2. The total number of Public and Private Institutions in 1897-98 was 148,829 as compared with 152,025 in 1896-97 and 152,841 in 1895-96. The decrease was in Public Institutions, the number of which fell to 106,462 from 109,886 in 1896-97. The number of Private Institutions showed a small increase from 42,139 to 42,367. Primary (Public) Institutions which had risen to 102,036 in 1895-96 and 103,920 in 1896-97 fell to 100,507 in the year under review, the decrease occurring among both boys' and girls' schools. The number of Secondary (Public) Schools (5,333) showed an increase of 66. The number of Elementary Private Institutions rose from 36,959 in 1896-97 to 37,443 in 1897-98. Arts Colleges (124) showed an increase of 4, and the number of Professional Colleges (40) was the same as in the previous year.

3. Taking the population of school-going age at 15 per cent. of the total population according to the last census, the percentage of total scholars to total population of school-going age was 12·25 against 12·49 in 1896-97 and 12·05 in 1895-96; the percentages of male and female scholars on the total male and female population of school-going age was 21·84 and 2·33, respectively, as compared with 22·29 and 2·34 in 1896-97 and 22·02 and 2·34 in 1895-96. The total number of pupils under instruction decreased from 4,356,870 in the previous year to 4,274,275 in the year under review. Of the total number of scholars 3,874,809 were males and 399,466 were females against 3,954,712 and 402,158, respectively, in 1896-97. The number of pupils in Secondary (Public) Schools (551,141) showed an advance over the figures of the previous year (535,155), as also did the number in Private Elementary Institutions which increased from 503,106 in 1896-97 to 510,175 in 1897-98, but the number in Primary (Public) Schools decreased to 3,104,583 from 3,209,825 in 1896-97.

The decrease in the total number of pupils occurred mainly in Bombay, Bengal and the Central Provinces, and is attributed by the Local Governments to famine and plague.

4. The average monthly attendance at the different classes of Public Institutions during the years 1896-97 and 1897-98 is shown in the comparative statement in the margin. The total shows a decrease of 88,832 on the figures of 1896-97. The number of scholars in Arts Colleges on the 31st March 1898 was 14,842 against 14,420 in 1897. In Colleges and Departments of Colleges for Professional training there were 4,468 scholars on the rolls at the end of 1897-98 as compared with 4,363 in the preceding year. The increase in the number of pupils in the secondary stage of instruction was maintained during the year under review, the number having risen from 535,155 on the 31st March 1897 to 551,141 on the 31st March 1898; on the other hand, the number of pupils in the primary stage decreased from 3,209,825 to 3,104,583 or by 3·27 per cent. The reason for this decrease is as stated in paragraph 3 above. The number of scholars in Training Schools for Masters and Mistresses, which at the close of 1896-97 had risen to 5,667 from 5,046 in 1895-96, fell to 5,409 at the close of 1897-98. The attendance at other schools for special instruction showed a slight decline from 18,952 on the 31st March 1897 to 18,663 on the 31st March 1898.

6. The total number of pupils under instruction in all institutions on the 31st March 1898 was 4,274,275; of these 454,599 were receiving instruction in English against 438,846 in 1896-97; and 584,791 were studying a classical language as compared with 571,209 in the previous year. The number of vernacular pupils (3,907,894) showed a marked decrease of 81,638, which occurred mainly in the Primary (Public) Institutions for boys. In Private Institutions the number of pupils studying a classical language and a vernacular (294,144 and 338,573, respectively) compared favourably with the number of such pupils in 1896-97 (268,727 and 328,842, respectively); but the number studying English decreased from 5,210 to 4,396.

7. The classification of scholars according to race or creed, and the percentage of each class on the total number of scholars is shown in the following statement:—

RACE OR CREED.	1896-97.		1897-98.
	Number of scholars.	Percentage on total.	Number of scholars.	Percentage on total.
Hindus	2,935,597	67·38	2,886,279	67·53
Muhammadans . . .	966,632	22·18	922,566	21·59
Europeans and Eurasians . .	29,176	·67	29,855	·69
Native Christians . . .	114,695	2·63	117,658	2·75
Others	310,770	7·13	317,917	7·43

There was a decrease in the numbers of Hindu and Muhammadan scholars, and an increase in the case of Europeans and Eurasians, Native Christians and other classes. The greater proportionate decrease was among the Muhammadans, and the percentage of Muhammadan scholars therefore fell away whilst the percentage of Hindu scholars increased notwithstanding their numerical decline. Of the students at Colleges (19,310), 84·2 per cent. were Hindus, 6·8 per cent. Muhammadans, 3 2 per cent. Native Christians, and 2·1 per cent. Europeans and Eurasians. The Muhammadan students show a numerical increase of only 14 on the preceding year. Of those receiving a secondary education (551,141), 71·4 per cent. were Hindus, 14·0 per cent. Muhammadans, 5·5 per cent. Native Christians, and 4·5 per cent. Europeans and Eurasians. Of the 3,104,583 pupils under primary instruction at Public Institutions, 2,239,349 (72·1 per cent.) were Hindus; 607,271 (19·6 per cent.) were Muhammadans; 78,081 (2·5 per cent.) were Native Christians; 3,548 (·1 per cent.) were Europeans and Eurasians; and the remainder (176,334 or 5·7 per cent.) belonged to other classes. In the case of Hindus the numerical decrease was from 2,296,515 to 2,239,349 and in the case of Muhammadans from 617,159 to 607,271.

8. The total expenditure (direct and indirect) on public instruction, which in 1895-96 and 1896-97 amounted to R5,50,65,032 and R3,52,44,900, respectively, increased to R3,55,40,262 in 1897-98. The increase was distributed over all classes of education. The direct expenditure reached R2,82,16,389 as compared with R2,77,38,737 in the preceding year. The indirect expenditure which embraces charges on account of direction, inspection, scholarships, building, school grants and other miscellaneous items amounted to R73,23,873 against R75,06,163 in 1896-97. The decrease was due to smaller expenditure on buildings.

9. The expenditure on education was met from Provincial Revenues, Local and Municipal Funds, from fees and from miscellaneous sources, such as endowments, subscriptions, etc. A comparison of the sums spent from each of these sources during the years 1896-97 and 1897-98 and the proportion of such expenditure to the total cost of education is shown in the following statement:—

Sources from which expenditure on education is met.	1896-97.		1897-98.
	Amount.	Percentage to total cost.	Amount.	Percentage to total cost.
	R		R
Provincial Revenues	95,22,985	27·0	93,04,615	26·2
Local Funds	57,45,944	16·3	56,71,201	15·9
Municipal Funds	14,96,721	4·3	14,69,719	4·1
Fees	1,06,10,933	30·1	1,05,82,145	29·8

TOTAL	3,52,44,900	100·0	3,55,40,262	100·0

The contributions from Provincial, Municipal and Local Funds and fees all fell off, but the decrease was more than counterbalanced by a considerable rise in the income from miscellaneous sources.

10. The statistics for the year appear to the Governor General in Council to be satisfactory, except for the check in the progress of primary education which resulted from the prevalence of famine and plague.

THE PARIS INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION OF 1900.

The scope and magnitude of the Paris Exhibition of 1900 is succinctly given in the speech, made by H. R. H. the Prince of Wales, at the First Meeting of the Royal Commission, held at Marlborough House on the 17th February, 1898, and which is here reproduced from the official report:—

"The plans and classification which will be laid before you will give the Commission some idea of the scope and magnitude of the Exhibition. I will only mention on this head that it will be divided into 18 Groups, comprising 120 Classes, in which provision will be made for the display of every kind of Art, Industry, and Manufacture. The guiding principle is that similar products, from whatever part of the world they may come, should be shown side by side, and in this respect the Exhibition of 1900 will differ from its predecessors, in which the products of each country have usually been collected together. The arrangement, though less favourable to a striking national display, has many advantages, and admits of a ready comparison of the arts and industries of one country with similar arts and industries of others. No one who reads the official reports can fail to be impressed by the skill with which the classification has been compiled, and by the largeness of conception which marks the organisation of this great enterprise. I will only add that the scheme is being carried out on a scale of magnificence never before approached, even in Paris, and that the Exhibition bids fair to surpass any of its predecessors in extent and splendour.

"Evidence of the interest which the Exhibition has excited throughout the civilised world is to be found in the universal acceptance of the invitations to take part in it, and in the large grants which have been made by Foreign Powers. Germany, for instance, has already voted no less than £250,000, and I understand is prepared to give more if necessary, while smaller States, such as Switzerland, which has voted £66,000, have provided large sums from public funds, showing the value which they attach to this opportunity of displaying their productions and competing for the trade of the world. The French Section itself will occupy about half of the available space, and will offer a representation of French arts and industries such as no other nation can hope to rival in completeness.

"The importance of the Exhibition, and the influence which it is likely to have on the industry and art of this country, have been recognised by the appointment of a Royal Commission larger in numbers and more comprehensive in character than any previous Commission appointed for a similar purpose, and a grant of money has been placed at our disposal, which I fear will prove insufficient. I trust that we may be able to prevail upon the Treasury to considerably augment the grant.

"India, the colonies, and all the great interests and industries of the Empire are largely represented, while an unusually large number of members have been chosen from the great manufacturing centres of the United Kingdom. It is especially necessary at the present time to give prominence to the industrial section looking to the keen rivalry which exists in the department of manufactures, and of which evidence is forthcoming on every side. The Exhibition will afford an opportunity, of which I trust full advantage will be taken, of asserting the commercial supremacy which this country has happily enjoyed for many years. I look with confidence to all the members of this body, and in particular to those who are connected with the centres of industry, to further the objects of the Commission by every means in their power. It may be difficult or impossible for many of them to undertake duties entailing frequent visits to London, but they could render services of equal or greater value in their own neighbourhoods, and I trust that they will give me the benefit of their assistance and influence by forming local committees, or by any other means that may occur to them of promoting the success of the British Section and of stimulating manufacturers and others to take part in this great work.

"I wish to take this opportunity of impressing upon the Commission the importance of securing that all articles sent to Paris, whether their value be great or small, should be the best of their kind. They will be judged in comparison with similar things produced in other countries, and will be exposed to the severest criticism.

"It should also be remembered that this is not so much an occasion for competition of British exhibitors among themselves, as for competition between British and Irish exhibitors and those of foreign countries. For this reason the display of similar or identical objects by different exhibitors should be avoided as much as possible, and efforts should be made to secure variety with a view to making the most of the space at our disposal. It is difficult to avoid some duplication when several manufacturers of similar articles wish to show their goods, and it would be invidious to give the preference to one out of many, but it ought not to be impossible either to form joint exhibits, giving as complete a representation as possible of particular industries, or for manufacturers to come to some agreement among themselves which would bring about the same result. Such a plan, though it might call for some self-sacrifice on the part of individuals, would secure a degree of completeness which could not otherwise be attained, and would go far to promote the common interests of the industry as a whole.

"Space has been secured for our exhibitors in the buildings and grounds. The negotiations, though somewhat protracted, have been brought to a conclusion which will, I hope, be deemed satisfactory. The Exhibition, large as it is, is limited, and it was impossible to satisfy the demands of all competitors in full. We have, however, obtained allotments in every one of the 18 groups, and the area which we have secured is larger than the area placed at our disposal in 1878, and much larger than the area given to us in 1889. The French authorities have shown every disposition to meet our just requirements so far as they could do so without unfairness to others, and have shown a degree of courtesy and friendliness which I am glad to recognise.

"It is not to be expected that a Commission such as this can meet often, or that it could, as a body, perform many of the duties with which it is charged. These duties are so numerous and so varied that they could only be carried out by Committees comparatively small in numbers, and I propose to ask the Commissioners to assist me by serving on the Committees, of which the lists will now be read. A Committee is necessary for Executive duties, and another for Finance, over both of which I intend to preside. The other Committees, it will be observed, correspond closely with the groups of the classification.

"The interval of two years between the present time and the date fixed for sending in exhibits is none too long for the preparations which so large an enterprise will entail. I trust that full advantage will be taken of the time at our disposal, and that our united efforts will result in a display not unworthy of the Empire."

THE BRITISH INDIAN AND CEYLON SECTIONS OF THE PARIS EXHIBITION, 1900.

The Paris Exhibition Commission, finding that it would be quite impossible to accommodate in the main buildings, the exhibits from the Colonies and Dependencies of the various nations proposing to participate in the Exhibition, decided to group all Colonies and Protectorates, including the French, in the Park of the Trocadero, the countries interested being left to provide all the necessary buildings required for the display of their exhibits.

The British Royal Commission succeeded, after prolonged negotiations, in obtaining from the French Executive an allotment of an area of 60,000 square feet of space, in the Trocadero grounds, for the exhibits from India and the Colonies.

Of this space an area of about one-third has been allotted to the Indian and Ceylon Committee, and arrangements have been made to erect handsome and suitable pavilions on the site for the reception of approved Indian and Ceylon exhibits.

The Indian Section, as will be seen from the accompanying plans, etc., will be divided into three courts:—

(a) The Imperial, in which the exhibits of the Government of India and of Native States will be shown;

(b) The Private Exhibitors, in which the more artistic productions of Indian manufacturers, merchants, and others will be displayed; and

(c) The Commercial, in which the trade and economic samples will be exhibited.

The total space at the disposal of the Indian Committee is exceedingly limited, and intending exhibitors are therefore advised to make as early application as possible, to prevent disappointment.

In order to partially defray the heavy cost the Indian Committee have incurred in erecting the Indian Pavilion, a general charge for space will have to be made.

The rate will necessarily depend on the position of the space required, but the minimum charge for space on the ground floor will be at the rate of £1 per superficial foot.

Intending exhibitors can obtain forms of application for space and full information regarding the Indian Section of the Paris Exhibition from the official agents to the Indian Committee—

GENERAL REGULATIONS FOR EXHIBITORS

IN THE

BRITISH INDIAN AND CEYLON SECTIONS.

1. Opening and Close of Exhibition.—The Exhibition will open on the 15th April and close on the 5th November 1900.

2. Applications for Space.—Forms of Application for space must be returned to the Secretary of the Indian and Ceylon Committee as early as possible. All applications will be considered, but owing to the limited amount of space at their disposal, the Indian and Ceylon Committee cannot undertake to allot the whole or any part of the space applied for, their object being to secure the best possible exhibits. There will be a general charge for space in the Indian Section.

3. Date of Reception of Exhibits.—Accepted exhibits will be admitted into the Exhibition from 1st January to 28th February 1900.

4. Prohibition of Transfer of Space or Substitution of Exhibits.—No exhibitor will be permitted to transfer his allotment, or to allow any other than his own duly accepted exhibits to be placed thereon. All goods must be exhibited in the name of the person or firm who signed the form of application.

5. Forfeiture of allotted Space.—Space not occupied twenty-one days previously to the opening of the Exhibition will be forfeited, and allotted at the discretion of the Indian and Ceylon Committee of the Royal Commission.

EXHIBITS.

6. Position of Exhibits.—Exhibitors will be required to place their exhibits so as to contribute as much as possible to the general effect. The whole of the arrangements relating to show cases, signs, notices, and all similar matters, will be subject to instructions issued by the Secretary of the Royal Commission.

7. Maximum Height of Stands, etc.—No stand, including sign-board, may exceed twelve feet in height, without special permission.

8. Uniformity of Decoration.—In order to ensure uniformity of decoration and general effect, no exhibitor will be allowed to put up flags, banners, or any other kind of decoration, without special permission from the Secretary of the Indian Section.

9. Railing off Exhibits.—Exhibitors may place railings round their stands, subject to approval. In every instance the railings must be within the space allotted.

10. Partitions.—No partitions may be erected between the stands without permission from the Secretary of the Indian Section, nor anything put up to interfere with the sight of adjoining stands, or to impede the general view in all directions throughout the building.

11. Sign and Name Boards.—No sign or name board may be placed in such a manner as to interfere with the vista, or otherwise than parallel with the front of the stand. All signs placed over show causes or stands must be uniform in style. Instructions upon this point will be issued later, and the maximum dimensions will be specified.

12. Conveyance and Installation Expenses.—Exhibitors must bear all expenses of conveying, delivering, arranging, installing, and removing their exhibits; and also the cost of erecting all fixtures, platforms, screens, and counters. The floor must not be cut without permission from the Secretary of the Indian Section.

13. Supervision of Arrival, Installation, and Departure of Exhibits.—Exhibitors must personally or by their accredited representatives receive, unpack, and install their exhibits, and remove their cases within a period of six weeks after the close of the Exhibition. The Secretary of the Royal Commission will issue detailed instructions with regard to the installation and reception of exhibits.

14. Pricing Goods.—Exhibitors are particularly requested to mark their goods with the home selling prices, for the information of the jury and public. Prices, weights, and dimensions should be given in French equivalents as well as in British figures.

15. Placards and Handbills.—No printed or written placards, handbills, or descriptions may be displayed or distributed without the permission of the Secretary of the Royal Commission. Such permission may be withdrawn at any time.

16. Dangerous and Unhealthy Exhibits.—Dangerous articles, specially those of an explosive nature, are excluded. Percussion caps, fireworks, matches, and similar articles will only be accepted in the form of imitations, and on condition that they contain no inflammable matter.

Exhibitors of unhealthy products, or of products which may cause inconvenience, must conform at all times to any measures which may be prescribed by the Royal Commission in the interests of public health and safety.

Spirits or alcohols, oils and essences, corrosive substances, and such as are liable to injure other exhibits or inconvenience the public, will only be accepted provided they are contained in such vessels of convenient size, shape, and material as may be approved by the Royal Commission.

17. Unsuitable Exhibits.—The French Executive reserve the right to remove at any time any article which they may deem objectionable or unsuitable for exhibition.

18. Opening and Closing Exhibits.—All show cases, machinery, and exhibits generally, must be uncovered and properly cleaned each day previous to the hour at which the Exhibition is open to the public. They must not be again covered until the closing of the building.

19. Attendance of Exhibitors.—All exhibits must be on view on every day on which the Exhibition is open. If exhibitors or their representatives do not wish to be in attendance at the Exhibition on Sunday, the Royal Commission will be prepared, if specially requested, to undertake the superintendence of the exhibits on Sunday, on terms to be arranged, but in that event the Royal Commission will not be responsible for any loss, damage, or accident, however occasioned.

20. Removal of Exhibits.—No exhibit may be removed before the close of the Exhibition without special permission from the French Executive. This rule does not apply to articles which exhibitors may be authorised to manufacture in the Exhibition.

CASES.

21. Labels.—All cases containing goods for exhibition must bear special labels, inside as well as outside, which will be supplied to exhibitors in due course.

22. Unpacking of cases.—All cases must be unpacked immediately on arrival. Any cases remaining unpacked fifteen days prior to the opening of the Exhibition will be liable to be removed to the Custom House, but neither the French Executive nor the Royal Commission will be responsible for any damage which may arise, or any expense which may be incurred in consequence of such removal.

23. Storage of Empties.—Exhibitors must remove from the Exhibition buildings and grounds, with the least possible delay, all empty packing cases and packing materials. The Royal Commission will make arrangements for the collection, storage and re-delivery of cases at a moderate charge on behalf of exhibitors who may desire to avail themselves of such facilities. Cases must be distinctly marked by the exhibitor for the purposes of identification.

GENERAL.

24. Freight and Duties.—Information regarding any reduction of freight charges, duties, etc., will be issued by the Secretary of the Royal Commission from time to time.

25. Customs' Duties. Forwarding of Goods.—The buildings of the Exhibition will be treated as bonded warehouses. Exhibitors may transmit their goods through the official agents for the Indian Committee, Messrs. Henry S. King & Co., or any forwarding agent, or direct to the Exhibition. Goods will be dealt with according to the ordinary regulations in force in bonded warehouses by a special customs' service connected with the Exhibition. Goods for exhibition only will not be liable to duty, but on goods removed from bond the usual rates will have to be paid.

26. Copyright.—No work of art or object exhibited in the buildings or grounds may be drawn, copied or reproduced in any form whatsoever without the exhibitor's written permission, countersigned by the French Executive.

The French Executive may, however, allow general views to be taken and reproduced.

27. Protection of Patents.—With regard to inventions, designs, and trade marks, exhibitors will enjoy the rights and protection afforded by the French Law of 23rd May, 1868, within the periods and under the conditions specified in the said Law.

28. Nature of Awards.—Awards to exhibitors will take the form of Diplomas signed by the Minister of Commerce, and by the Commissaire-Général.

These diplomas will consist of—

Grand Prize Diplomas.
Gold Medal Diplomas.
Silver Medal Diplomas.
Bronze Medal Diplomas.
Honourable Mention Diplomas.

29. Compliance with instructions.—Exhibitors, their representatives and workmen, must comply with all instructions issued by the Secretary of the Royal Commission.

30. Protection of Exhibits.—The French Executive will take all precautions for the protection of exhibits, but neither that Executive nor the Royal Commission are to be held responsible for loss or damage however caused. It is left to exhibitors to ensure their own goods should they desire to do so.

31. Liability of Exhibitors.—Every exhibitor shows at his own risk in every respect, and it is a condition that he hold the Royal Commission harmless, and indemnify it against any legal proceedings, whether in the French or British Courts, arising from any injury or accident caused or occasioned by his machinery or other article exhibited by him, or from any action which it may be necessary to take in enforcing compliance with the Regulations. The above rule applies to companies and firms as well as to individual exhibitors.

32. Co-operation of Exhibitors regarding Regulations.—As the above regulations are laid down solely in the interests of the general body of exhibitors, and to ensure the satisfactory working of the British Section, the Royal Commission trust that the exhibitors generally will co-operate in carrying them into effect.

33. Alteration of Regulations.—These regulations are subject to alteration and amplification from time to time.

34. Infringement of Regulations.—The infringement of any of the above regulations, or any of the regulations of the French Executive, will subject the exhibitor to the forfeiture of his space, and to the removal of his goods from the building, without any liability attaching to the French Executive, or to the Royal Commission or their representative, in any way whatsoever, in consequence of such removal. The question whether any such regulations have been infringed, and whether the exhibitor's space has been forfeited, and whether his goods shall be removed, is to be determined according to the sole discretion of the Royal Commission.

In the event of my application being granted (in whole or in part), I undertake to observe and to be bound by the above Regulations.

JUDICIAL.

No. 229.—In exercise of the powers conferred by sections 26 and 27 of the Cantonments Act, 1889 (XIII of 1889), the Governor General in Council is pleased to direct that the following be added after rule 15 of the rules under the said Act for all cantonments in British India, published with the Notification of the Government of India in the Military Department No. 1118, dated the 15th October, 1897, namely:—

Information to be given of infectious or contagious disorder.

"16. Whoever,—

(a) being a medical practitioner and in the course of practice becoming cognizant of the existence of any infectious or contagious disorder in any dwelling, other than a public hospital or dispensary, in the cantonment or its neighbourhood, or, in default of such medical practitioner,

(b) being the owner or occupier of such dwelling and being cognizant of the existence of any infectious or contagious disorder therein, or, in default of such owner or occupier,

(c) being the person in charge of, or in attendance on, any person suffering from any infectious or contagious disorder in such dwelling, and being cognizant of the existence of the disorder therein, fails to give information or gives false information to the Cantonment Authority respecting the existence of such disorder, shall be punishable with fine which may extend to fifty rupees:

Provided that a person not required by this rule to give information in the first instance, but only in default of some other person, shall not be punishable if it is shown that he had reasonable cause to suppose that the information had been, or would be, duly given:

Provided also that this rule shall not apply to venereal diseases, when the person suffering therefrom is under specific and adequate medical treatment, and by reason of habits, conditions of life, and of residence, is unlikely to spread the disease.

Explanation.—In this rule, the expression 'owner' includes the person for the time being receiving the rent of lands and buildings or either of them, whether on his own account or as agent or trustee for any person or society or for any religious or charitable purpose, or who would so receive the same if the land or building were let to a tenant."

NOTICES.

All communications relating to Act V (the Inventions and Designs Act) of 1888 should be addressed to the "Secretary to the Government of India, Department of Revenue and Agriculture (PATENTS BRANCH), CALCUTTA."

The office of the Secretary under the Act is open for the transaction of business from 11 A.M. to 4 P.M. on all days except Sundays and gazetted holidays.

The Government of India are advised that, as trade marks are not "designs" within the meaning of the Act, they cannot be registered under Part II.

The fees payable under the fourth and sixth schedules are now collected in cash and applicants are warned that they must be responsible for any delay in cashing cheques.

Copies of the weekly notifications, and of the quarterly lists, of applications and specifications filed in the Secretary's office are now on sale to the public at one anna and eight annas a copy, respectively.

Attention is requested to the rules made by the Government on the 10th October, 1895, in regard to the preparation of applications, specifications and drawings.

All applications made under the Inventions and Designs Act, V of 1888, will from this date (December 19th, 1896) lie in the visitor's room of the Patents Office for ten days from the date of the Gazette of India in which their filing may have been notified; or, if the tenth day is a holiday, till the evening of the office day next following.

At the time of delivering or sending an application for leave to file a specification, the applicant shall cause a duplicate copy of the application to be delivered or sent therewith to the Secretary.

G. W. FORREST,
Secy. under the Inventions and Designs Act, 1888.

CIVIL AND MILITARY STATION, BANGALORE.

NOTIFICATIONS.

Dated 14th February, 1899.

No. 9805.—In exercise of the powers conferred under sections 81, 84, and 137 of the Bangalore Municipal Law, 1897, the Municipal Commissioners for the Civil and Military Station of Bangalore have made the following bye-law, and the same having been confirmed by the Resident in Mysore as required by section 139, it is hereby notified for public information under section 180 (3) of the said law :—

SANITATION AND OTHER PURPOSES.

BYE-LAW NO. .—BUILDINGS.

Bangalore Municipal Law, section 81.

1. The roofs and external walls of huts or other buildings within municipal limits shall not be made or renewed of grass, mats, leaves, or other highly inflammable material, without the written permission of the President.

Bangalore Municipal Law, sections 84 (1) (b) and 137 (1) (l).

2. Before beginning to erect or re-erect any building, the person intending to erect or re-erect such building shall give to the President notice in writing of his intention. The power of sanctioning or refusing to sanction such building under section 83 shall be exercised by the President.

3. Every person giving such notice shall submit therewith a site plan and plans, and specifications of the proposed buildings in accordance with the following rules :—

(i) The site plan shall be submitted in duplicate, drawn to a scale of not less than one inch to 32 feet, and showing—

(a) The area to be occupied by the proposed buildings.

(b) The position, nature and use of all existing buildings thereon and of the proposed building and all appurtenant out-buildings.

(c) The nature of the ground on which the proposed buildings are to be erected, whether made or natural, whether rock, clay, gravel, sand or mixed, as the case may be; and in the case of made ground, the time when it was so made and the materials used in making it.

(d) The position of latrines or privies and the proposed method of drainage.

(e) The names (if any) or description of the adjacent roads, streets or lanes, with the width thereof, and the position and use of adjacent buildings.

Provided that in the case of buildings of which the value will be less than R500, it shall be sufficient for the site plan to show, to the satisfaction of the President, without scale, the size of the proposed building and its position on the land, together with the position of the land with reference to adjacent buildings or lands.

(ii) The plans of the proposed buildings shall be submitted in duplicate, drawn to a scale of not less than one inch to eight feet, and showing—

(a) The plan of the ground floor and of each floor, with sections and elevations on the same scale.

(b) The levels of the foundation and the lowest floor or plinths, with reference to the level at the centre of the adjacent roads or streets, and the level of the site.

(c) The depth and thickness of foundations.

(d) The height and thickness of the plinths or basement walls and of the walls above the plinth.

(e) The thickness of the floor or floors and the dimensions and structure of the roof.

Provided that in the case of buildings of which the value will be less than R500 it shall be sufficient in show in writing, to the satisfaction of the President, the levels at which the foundation and lowest floor are proposed to be laid.

(iii) The plans of every building of which the value will be not less than R500 shall be accompanied by a specification showing the nature and description of the materials to be used in the construction of the various parts thereof, including the dimensions of all beams, bressemers, posts, pillars and columns.

No. 9806.—In exercise of the powers conferred under section 137 (1) (i) of the Bangalore Municipal Law of 1897, the Municipal Commissioners for the Civil and Military Station of Bangalore have made the following bye-law, and the same having been confirmed by the Resident in Mysore as required by section 139, it is hereby notified for public information under section 180(3) of the said law:—

THE INDIAN LAW REPORTS.

PUBLISHED UNDER AUTHORITY.

The Indian Law Reports, published under the authority of the Governor-General in Council, appear in monthly parts, published as soon as possible after the first of each month, at Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, and Allahabad, and comprise four series,—one for the Calcutta High Court, a second for the Madras High Court, a third for the Bombay High Court, and a fourth for the Allahabad High Court. The cases heard by the Privy Council on appeal from each High Court are reported in the series for that High Court. Cases heard by the Privy Council on appeal from Provinces in India not subject to any High Court are reported in the Calcutta Series.

The Calcutta Series is distributed by the Bengal Secretariat Book Depôt, and the Madras, Bombay, and Allahabad Series are distributed direct from Madras, Bombay, and Allahabad, respectively.

In supersession of the previous advertisements, on and from the 1st January, 1889, the terms of subscription and sale will be as follows for current issues, as well as for back numbers of the Reports from 1870:—

II D

A Dictionary of the Economic Products of India.

By Dr. Geo. Watt, C.I.E.,

Reporter on Economic Products.

The first five volumes and Volume VI, Parts I, II, III & IV of the Dictionary are ready at the Office of the Superintendent of Government Printing, No. 8, Hastings Street, Calcutta, and will be supplied to non-subscribers on receipt of the price for the complete set, which is R45 in India, and 3 guineas in England (exclusive of the Index, for which a separate charge will be made): packing and postage, in India, 8 annas per volume; for England, 2 rupees 6 annas per volume. For copies bound in half calf or half morocco, R6 and 8 shillings, respectively, will be charged extra for the whole set.

The Dictionary is intended to deal with the products of India—animal, vegetable, and mineral; each product being treated after a uniform plan, the paragraphs of which give the scientific, vernacular, and European names; habitat or source; history; properties and uses (both chemical and industrial); trade statistics; markets, etc. The work is arranged alphabetically according to scientific nomenclature, but commercial and important vernacular names are also given as cross-references, so that little difficulty need be experienced in finding the account of a product even when its scientific name is unknown to the reader.

An important feature of the Dictionary consists in the fact that derived information is in every instance given under quotation marks, and with a reference to the original publication. Numerous contributors have, however, furnished the results of new discoveries, and confirmed the vernacular names, so that the Dictionary is not only a complete compilation of published information, but has been brought abreast of the most recent inventions and discoveries.

Volume I contains the letters A and B, and consists of 559 royal 8vo pages; Volume II embraces the letter C in 689 pages; Volume III contains the letters D, E, F, and half of G; Volume IV, latter half of G to middle of L; and Volume V contains the latter half of L to end of O; Vol. VI (which consists of four parts), Part I, contains letters P to R. The whole work completed in nine volumes (including Parts II to IV of Vol. VI), but a tenth volume has been issued, consisting of an Index to all the vernacular and other names contained in the Dictionary. The Index is practically a glossary of the vernacular and European names of the plants, animals, and minerals of India, and, as such, is a work of reference, which, it is hoped, will prove of considerable value.

PART IV.

Acts of the Governor General's Council assented to by the Governor General.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Act of the Governor General of India in Council received the assent of His Excellency the Governor General on the 3rd March, 1899, and is hereby promulgated for general information:—

ACT No IX OF 1899.

An Act to amend the Law relating to Arbitration.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the law relating to arbitration by agreement without the intervention of a Court of Justice; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Short title, extent and commencement.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Indian Arbitration Act, 1899.

(2) It extends to the whole of British India; and

(3) It shall come into force on the first day of July, 1899.

Application.

2. Subject to the provisions of section 23, this Act shall apply only in cases where, if the subject-matter submitted to arbitration were the subject of a suit, the suit could, whether with leave or otherwise, be instituted in a Presidency-town:

Provided that the Local Government, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, may, by notification in the local official Gazette, declare this Act applicable in any other local area as if it were a Presidency-town.

Exclusion of certain enactments in certain cases where Act applies.

3. The last thirty-seven words of section 21 of the Specific Relief Act, 1877, and sections 523 to 526 of the Code of Civil Procedure shall not apply to any submission or arbitration to which the provisions of this Act for the time being apply: I of 1877. XIV of 1882.

Provided that nothing in this Act shall affect any arbitration pending in a Presidency-town at the commencement of this Act or in any local area at the date of the application thereto of this Act as aforesaid, but shall apply to every arbitration commenced after the commencement of this Act or the date of the application thereof, as the case may be, under any agreement or order previously made:

Provided, also, that nothing in this Act shall affect the provisions of the Indian Companies Act, 1882, relating to arbitration. VI of 1882.

Definitions.

4. In this Act, unless there is anything repugnant in the subject or context,—

(a) "the Court" means, in the Presidency-towns, the High Court, and, elsewhere, the Court of the District Judge; and

(b) "submission" means a written agreement to submit present or future differences to arbitration, whether an arbitrator is named therein or not.

Submission to be irrevocable except by leave of Court.

5. A submission, unless a different intention is expressed therein, shall be irrevocable, except by leave of the Court.

6. A submission, unless a different intention is expressed therein, shall be deemed to include the provisions set forth in the first schedule, in so far as they are applicable to the reference under submission.

Provisions implied in submissions.

7. The parties to a submission may agree that the reference shall be to an arbitrator or arbitrators to be appointed by a person designated therein.

Reference to arbitrator to be appointed by third person.

Such person may be designated either by name or as the holder for the time being of any office or appointment.

Illustration.

The parties to a submission may agree that any dispute arising between them in respect of the subject-matter of the submission shall be referred to an arbitrator to be appointed by the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, or, as the case may be, to an arbitrator to be appointed by the President for the time being of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce.

Power for the Court in certain cases to appoint an arbitrator, umpire or third arbitrator.

8. (1) In any of the following cases:—

(a) where a submission provides that the reference shall be to a single arbitrator, and all the parties do not, after differences have arisen, concur in the appointment of an arbitrator;

(b) if an appointed arbitrator neglects or refuses to act, or is incapable of acting, or dies, or is removed, and the submission does not show that it was intended that the vacancy should not be supplied, and the parties do not supply the vacancy;

(c) where the parties or two arbitrators are at liberty to appoint an umpire or third arbitrator and do not appoint him;

(d) where an appointed umpire or third arbitrator refuses to act, or is incapable of acting, or dies, or is removed, and the submission does not show that it was intended that the vacancy should not be supplied, and the parties or arbitrators do not supply the vacancy;

any party may serve the other parties or the arbitrators, as the case may be, with a written notice to concur in appointing an arbitrator, umpire or third arbitrator.

(2) If the appointment is not made within seven clear days after the service of the notice, the Court may, on application by the party who gave the notice, and after giving the other party an opportunity of being heard, appoint an arbitrator, umpire or third arbitrator, who shall have the like power to act in the reference and make an award as if he had been appointed by consent of all parties

9. Where a submission provides that the reference shall be to two arbitrators, one to be appointed by each party, then, unless a different intention is expressed therein,—

Power for parties in certain cases to supply vacancy.

(a) if either of the appointed arbitrators refuses to act, or is incapable of acting, or dies or is removed, the party who appointed him may appoint a new arbitrator in his place;

(b) if, on such a reference, one party fails to appoint an arbitrator, either originally or by way of substitution as aforesaid, for seven clear days after the other party, having appointed his arbitrator, has served the party making default with a written notice to make the appointment, the party who has appointed an arbitrator may appoint that arbitrator to act as sole arbitrator in the reference, and his award shall be binding on both parties as if he had been appointed by consent:

Provided that the Court may set aside any appointment made in pursuance of clause (b) of this section.

10. The arbitrators or umpire acting under a submission shall, unless a different intention is expressed therein,—

Powers of arbitrator.

(a) have power to administer oaths to the parties and witnesses appearing;

(b) have power to state a special case for the opinion of the Court on any question of law involved; and

(c) have power to correct in an award any clerical mistake or error arising from any accidental slip or omission.

11. (1) When the arbitrators or umpire have made their award, they shall sign it and shall give notice to the parties of the making and signing thereof and of the amount of the fees and charges payable to the arbitrators or umpire in respect of the arbitration and award.

Award to be signed and filed.

(3) Where the arbitrators or umpire state a special case under section 10, clause (b), the Court shall deliver its opinion thereon; and such opinion shall be added to, and shall form part of, the award.

12. The time for making an award may, from time to time, be enlarged by order of the Court, whether the time for making the award has expired or not.

Power for Court to enlarge time for making award.

13. (1) The Court may, from time to time, remit the award to the reconsideration of the arbitrators or umpire.

Power to remit award.

(2) Where an award is remitted under sub-section (1), the arbitrators or umpire shall, unless the Court otherwise directs, make a fresh award within three months after the date of the order remitting the award.

14. Where an arbitrator or umpire has misconducted himself, or an arbitration or award has been improperly procured, the Court may set aside the award.

Power to set aside award.

Award when filed to be enforceable as a decree.

15. (1) An award on a submission, on being filed in the Court in accordance with the foregoing provisions, shall (unless the Court remits it to the reconsideration of the arbitrators or umpire, or sets it aside) be enforceable as if it were a decree of the Court.

(2) An award may be conditional or in the alternative.

Illustration.

A dispute concerning the ownership of a diamond ring is referred to arbitration. The award may direct that the party in possession shall pay the other party Rs. 1,000, the said sum to be reduced to Rs. 5 if the ring is returned within fourteen days.

Power to remove arbitrator or umpire.

16. Where an arbitrator or umpire has misconducted himself, the Court may remove him.

Costs.

17. Any order made by the Court under this Act may be made on such terms as to costs or otherwise as the Court thinks fit.

Forms.

18. The forms set forth in the second schedule, or forms similar thereto, with such variations as the circumstances of each case require, may be used for the respective purposes there mentioned, and, if used, shall not be called in question.

Power to stay proceedings where there is a submission.

19. Where any party to a submission to which this Act applies, or any person claiming under him, commences any legal proceedings against any other party to the submission, or any person claiming under him, in respect of any matter agreed to be referred, any party to such legal proceedings may, at any time after appearance and before filing a written statement or taking any other steps in the proceedings, apply to the Court to stay the proceedings; and the Court, if satisfied that there is no sufficient reason why the matter should not be referred in accordance with the submission and that the applicant was, at the time when the proceedings were commenced, and still remains, ready and willing to do all things necessary to the proper conduct of the arbitration, may make an order staying the proceedings.

Power for High Court to make rules.

20. The High Court may make rules consistent with this Act as to—

(a) the filing of awards and all proceedings consequent thereon or incidental thereto;

(b) the filing and hearing of special cases and all proceedings consequent thereon or incidental thereto;

(c) the transfer to Presidency Courts of Small Causes for execution of awards filed, where the sum awarded does not exceed two thousand rupees;

(d) the staying of any suit or proceeding in contravention of a submission to arbitration; and,

(e) generally, all proceedings in Court under this Act.

Amendment of section 21, Act I, 1877.

21. In section 21 of the Specific Relief Act, 1877, after the words "Code of Civil Procedure" the words and figures "and the Indian Arbitration Act, 1899," shall be inserted, and for the words "a controversy" the words "present or future differences" shall be substituted.

Crown to be bound.

22. The provisions of this Act shall be binding on the Crown.

Special provision as to application of Act to Rangoon.

23. (1) This Act shall apply within the local limits of the ordinary civil jurisdiction of the Recorder of Rangoon in cases where, if the subject-matter submitted to arbitration were the subject of a suit, the suit could, whether with leave or otherwise, be instituted within those local limits.

(2) For the purposes of this Act, the local limits aforesaid shall be deemed to be a Presidency-town and the Recorder of Rangoon shall have all the powers of a High Court.

THE FIRST SCHEDULE.

(See section 6.)

PROVISIONS TO BE IMPLIED IN SUBMISSIONS.

I. If no other mode of reference is provided, the reference shall be to a single arbitrator.

II. If the reference is to two arbitrators, the two arbitrators may appoint an umpire at any time within the period during which they have power to make an award.

III. The arbitrators shall make their award in writing within three months after entering on the reference, or after having been called on to act by notice in writing from any party to the submission, or on or before any later day to which the arbitrators, by any writing signed by them, may, from time to time, enlarge the time for making the award.

IV. If the arbitrators have allowed their time or extended time to expire without making an award, or have delivered to any party to the submission, or to the umpire, a notice in writing stating that they cannot agree, the umpire may forthwith enter on the reference in lieu of the arbitrators.

V. The umpire shall make his award within one month after the original or extended time appointed for making the award of the arbitrators has expired, or on or before any later day to which the umpire, by any writing signed by him, may, from time to time, enlarge the time for making his award.

VI. The parties to the reference, and all persons claiming through them respectively, shall, subject to the provisions of any law for the time being in force, submit to be examined by the arbitrators or umpire on oath or affirmation in relation to the matters in dispute, and shall, subject as aforesaid, produce before the arbitrators or umpire all books, deeds, papers, accounts, writings and documents within their possession or power respectively which may be required or called for, and do all other things which during the proceedings on the reference the arbitrators or umpire may require.

VII. The witnesses on the reference shall, if the arbitrators or umpire think fit, be examined on oath.

VIII. The award to be made by the arbitrators or umpire shall be final and binding on the parties and the persons claiming under them respectively.

IX. The costs of the reference and award shall be in the discretion of the arbitrators or umpire, who may direct to and by whom, and in what manner, those costs or any part thereof shall be paid, and may tax or settle the amount of costs to be so paid or any part thereof, and may award costs to be paid as between solicitor and client.

Endorsement by Home Department, No. 1360, dated 18th November, 1898, and enclosures [Papers No. 19].

2. Various suggestions have been made for amending the law so as either to oblige Hindus, Muhammadans and Buddhists to take out probate or letters of administration in order to establish rights to the property of persons deceased, or to exempt from that obligation Native Christians. We are of opinion that these suggestions are quite outside the scope of the present measure, which deals only with the due collection of the proper court-fees where there is an application with a view to obtaining probate or letters of administration; and we have, therefore, not considered the propriety of any such alteration of the general law on the subject of succession-duty.

3. We have recast the new section 19H of the Court-fees Act, 1870, proposed by clause 2 of the Bill, first, by providing that, where an application for probate or letters of administration is made to a District Court, notice shall be given to the Collector, and that, where such an application is made to a High Court, notice shall be given to the Chief Controlling Revenue-authority, which will, if necessary, communicate with the Collector concerned. Next we have proposed that, if the Collector is of opinion that an estate has been undervalued, he may summon the petitioner and make inquiry into the matter in such manner as he may deem fit; and that, if, after such inquiry (if any), he still thinks that there has been an undervaluation and the petitioner does not agree to amend his estimate accordingly, the Collector may proceed to move the Court to hold a judicial inquiry. It seems to us that by this procedure the expense and trouble of an inquiry by the Court will, in most cases probably, be avoided. Further, we have added a proviso to the effect that the Court shall not be set in motion after the expiration of six months from the date of the exhibition of the inventory required by section 277 of the Indian Succession Act, 1865, or by section 98 of the Probate and Administration Act, 1881, as the case may be. We have also inserted an express provision making the Collector a party to any judicial inquiry which may be held, and added a sub-section declaring that the finding of the Court in the matter shall be final, but expressly saving the provisions of section 19E of the Act. And, finally, we have provided for the making of rules by the Local Government for the guidance of Collectors in the exercise of the new powers to be conferred upon them.

4. The remaining additional provision proposed by the Bill as introduced has also been recast so as to provide that, before any order is made entitling a person to the grant of probate or letters of administration, a valuation of the estate must be made and submitted in the prescribed form and the Court is to be satisfied that the fee indicated in No. 11 of the first schedule to the Act of 1870 has been paid.

5. Section 20 of the Probate and Administration Act, 1889 (VI of 1889), amended sections 19E and 19G of the Court-fees Act, 1870. We propose to transfer this provision to its proper place, which is in the Act of 1870, and, in amplifying the Bill in order to do so, we have taken the opportunity of removing a doubt as to whether it confers power on the Chief Controlling Revenue-authority to remit excess court-fees under section 19E as well as penalties strictly so called.

* I have signed this Report because it can only be desirable to provide checks upon evasions of the existing Court-fees Act. For the reason, however, that sums paid on account of probate and administration are really succession-duties and not court-fees, and that any increased stringency as regards payment chiefly affects Indian Christians, I hope that their position in regard to succession-duties will receive favourable consideration whenever proposals are entertained for amending the general law in this behalf.

No. II.

A Bill to further amend the Court-fees Act, 1870.

WHEREAS it is expedient to further amend the Court-fees Act, 1870; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Short title and commencement.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Court-fees Amendment Act, 1899; and

Addition of two new sections after section 19G, Act VII, 1870.

2. After section 19G of the Court-fees Act, 1870, the following sections shall be added, namely:—

Notice of applications for probate or letters of administration to be given to Revenue-authorities, and procedure thereon.

"19H. (1) Where an application for probate or letters of administration is made to any Court other than a High Court, the Court shall cause notice of the application to be given to the Collector.

(2) Where such an application as aforesaid is made to a High Court, the High Court shall cause notice of the application to be given to the Chief Controlling Revenue-authority of the Province.

(3) The Collector within the local limits of whose revenue-jurisdiction the property of the deceased or any part thereof is, may at any time inspect or cause to be inspected, and take or cause to be taken copies of, the record of any case in which application for probate or letters of administration has been made; and if, on such inspection or otherwise, he is of opinion that the petitioner has under-estimated the value of the property of the deceased, the Collector may, if he thinks fit, require the attendance of the petitioner (either in person or by agent) and take evidence and inquire into the matter in such manner as he may think fit, and, if he is still of opinion that the value of the property has been under-estimated, may require the petitioner to amend the valuation.

(4) If the petitioner does not amend the valuation to the satisfaction of the Collector, the Collector may move the Court before which the application for probate or letters of administration was made, to hold an inquiry into the true value of the property:

Provided that no such motion shall be made after the expiration of six months from the date of the exhibition of the inventory required by section 277 of the Indian Succession Act, 1865, or, as the case may be, by section 98 of the Probate and Administration Act, 1881.

(5) The Court, when so moved as aforesaid, shall hold, or cause to be held, an inquiry accordingly, and shall record a finding as to the true value, as near as may be, at which the property of the deceased should have been estimated. The Collector shall be deemed to be a party to the inquiry.

(6) For the purposes of any such inquiry, the Court or officer authorized to hold the inquiry may examine the petitioner for probate or letters of administration on oath (whether in person or by commission), and may take such further evidence as may be produced to prove the true value of the property.

(7) The finding of the Court recorded under sub-section (5) shall be final, but shall not bar the entertainment and disposal by the Chief Controlling Revenue-authority of any application under section 19E.

(8) The Local Government may make rules for the guidance of Collectors in the exercise of the powers conferred by sub-section (3).

Payment of court-fees in respect of probates and letters of administration.

19I. No order entitling the petitioner to the grant of probate or letters of administration shall be made upon an application for such grant until the petitioner has filed in the Court a valuation of the property in the form set forth in the third schedule, and the Court is satisfied that the fee mentioned in No. 11 of the first schedule has been paid.

Recovery of penalties, etc.

19J. (1) Any penalty or forfeiture under section 19G may, on the certificate of the Chief Controlling Revenue-authority, be recovered from the executor or administrator as if it were an arrear of land-revenue by any Collector in any part of British India.

(2) The Chief Controlling Revenue-authority may remit the whole or any part of any such penalty or forfeiture as aforesaid, or any part of any penalty under section 19E or of any court-fee under section 19E in excess of the full court-fee which ought to have been paid."

Addition of schedule to Act VII, 1870.

3. To the Court-fees Act, 1870, the following schedule shall be added, namely:—

"SCHEDULE III.

FORM OF VALUATION OF (TO BE USED WITH SUCH MODIFICATIONS, IF ANY, AS MAY BE NECESSARY).

IN THE COURT OF

Re Probate of the Will of , (or Administration of the property and credits of ,) deceased.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to amend the Law relating to the Forgery of Currency Notes and Bank Notes was presented to the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 3rd March, 1899:—

WE, the undersigned, Members of the Select Committee to which the Bill to amend the law relating to the forgery of currency-notes and bank-notes was referred, have considered the Bill and the papers noted in the margin, and have now the honour to submit this our Report, with the Bill as amended by us annexed hereto.

From Chief Commissioner, Ajmere-Merwara, No. 4-C—690, dated 27th November, 1898 [Paper No. 1].

From Resident, Hyderabad, No. 370, dated 3rd December, 1898 [Paper No. 2].

From Agent to Governor General in Baluchistan, No. 8390, dated 7th December, 1898, and enclosures [Paper No. 3].

From Chief Commissioner, Coorg, No. 2335, dated 12th December, 1898 [Paper No. 4].

From Government, Bombay, No. 8552, dated 23rd December, 1898, and enclosures [Paper No. 5].

From Chief Commissioner, Assam, No. 133-L. & L.—502-T. J, dated 16th December, 1898, and enclosure [Papers No. 6].

From Chief Commissioner, Central Provinces, No. 9093, dated 17th December, 1898, and enclosures [Papers No. 7].

From Government, Burma, No. 434—1-C-7, dated 17th December, 1898, and enclosures [Papers No. 8].

From Government, Bengal, No. 6627, dated 23rd December, 1898, and enclosures [Papers No. 9].

Office Memorandum from Finance Department, No. 814-A., dated 21st February 1899, and enclosure [Papers No. 14].

From High Court, Calcutta, No. 654, dated 20th February, 1899 [Paper No. 15].

2. In clause 2 of the Bill we have added another provision (489A) rendering the counterfeiting of currency-notes or bank-notes a substantive offence by itself, and we have included a definition of "bank-note" for the purpose of making the expression cover the currency-notes of other countries as well as bank-notes strictly so-called.

3. We have further divided the new section 489A proposed by the Bill as introduced, into two sections (489B and 489C). The first will provide against trafficking in forged or counterfeit notes and will punish any person who "sells to, or buys or receives from, any other person, or otherwise traffics in or uses as genuine, any forged or counterfeit currency-note or bank-note, knowing or having reason to believe the same to be forged or counterfeit." The second will deal with mere possession, and in this case we think that a less severe penalty should be fixed, and that the onus should be thrown on the prosecution of showing that the possessor of a bad note not only knew or had reason to believe it to be forged or counterfeit, but intended that it should be used as genuine.

4. We have recast and shortened the drafting of the new section 489B proposed by the Bill as introduced—see section 489D of the amended Bill—and have followed the language of section 257 of the Code, which penalizes the making or selling of instruments for the counterfeiting of Government stamps.

5. Consequential amendments and additions have been made in clause 3 of the Bill, and it will be seen that the offence under the proposed new section 489C is to be made bailable.

No. II.

A Bill to amend the law relating to the forgery of currency-notes and bank-notes.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the law relating to the forgery of currency-notes and bank-notes; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Short title and commencement.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Currency-Notes Forgery Act, 1899; and

Insertion of new sections after section 489, Act XLV, 1860.

2. After section 489 of the Indian Penal Code the following sections shall be inserted, namely:—

'Of Currency-Notes and Bank-Notes.

Counterfeiting currency-notes or bank-notes.

'489A. Whoever counterfeits, or knowingly performs any part of the process of counterfeiting, any currency-note or bank-note, shall be punished with transportation for life, or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Explanation.—For the purposes of this section and of sections 489B, 489C and 489D, the expression "bank-note" means a promissory note or engagement for the payment of money to bearer on demand issued by any person carrying on the business of banking in any part of the world, or issued by or under the authority of any State or Sovereign Power, and intended to be used as equivalent to, or as a substitute for, money.

Using as genuine forged or counterfeit currency-notes or bank-notes.

Possession of forged or counterfeit currency-notes or bank-notes.

Making or possession of instruments or materials for forging or counterfeiting currency-notes or bank-notes.

Addition to Schedule II, Act V, 1898.

3. In the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, Schedule II, after the entries relating to section 489 of the Indian Penal Code the following shall be inserted, namely:—

"Of Currency-Notes and Bank-Notes.

489A.	Counterfeiting currency-notes or bank-notes.	May arrest without warrant.	Warrant.	Not bailable.	Not compoundable.	Transportation for life, or imprisonment of either description for 10 years, and fine.	Court of Session.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Weather Review of India for the week ending at 8 a.m. on Saturday, February 18th, 1899.

During the greater part of the week under review the ordinary cold weather conditions of pressure and circulation of the winds have obtained over India accompanied generally with fine and bright weather. These settled conditions were disturbed on three occasions during the week under review. Thus during the 24 hours ending at 8 A.M., on the 12th, numerous thundershowers were experienced over Bengal, Assam, Bihar and Chota Nagpur, then on the 14th, a slight storm was shown over Sind, and light to moderate rain was falling in Baluchistan and showers in the West Punjab. On the following day the 15th, a double disturbance was shown over North-Western India, and rain had been received in Baluchistan and the North and West Punjab and snow in Kashmir. By the morning of the 16th, the disturbed weather had passed away and fine weather prevailed till the 18th, when again a feeble disturbance appeared over the North-Western Frontier and the sky clouded over. During the greater part of the week the heat was greater than usual over a large part of the country, the excess being most marked over the North-Western Provinces, the Punjab, Sind, the Central Provinces and Berar. In South India the weather during the week was slightly cooler than usual.

Daily Summary.—Sunday, February 12th.—The barometer had fallen over the West Punjab and Baluchistan and Upper Burma, and had risen at several central stations but elsewhere the changes had been unimportant. The pressure conditions were approximately normal except that the barometer read somewhat lower than usual over Burma. The winds blew from the usual cold weather directions except in Bengal, where they were more than ordinarily variable. The skies were thickly clouded over North-Eastern India, where a series of thunderstorms had occasioned light to heavy fairly general rain, showers were at the same time reported from one or two stations in Persia and the North-Western Himalayas. The heat had been excessive over Burma, Bengal, the Indus Valley and Bombay, and had been nearly normal elsewhere.

Monday, February 13th.—The barometer had fallen over most parts of India, more particularly in the North-West and a feeble low pressure area has entered upper Sind. This was the only change of importance. The depression had drawn the wind into South-East in Baluchistan, but elsewhere the usual cold weather winds were reported. The skies had cleared over North-Eastern India, the showers had again been received over parts of Burma. On the other hand, cloud has increased over North-Western India, Kashmir and Baluchistan. The air was exceedingly dry over parts of Rajputana and North Bombay. The heat was much greater than usual over the depression area in upper Sind, and slightly greater than usual over Rajputana and Bombay. On the other hand the weather was cool over Bengal and Assam.

Tuesday, February 14th.—Pressure had again given way over nearly the whole of India. The change had been brisk to rapid in the North-West and the depression in Sind had intensified considerably. Hence humidity and the cloudiness of the sky had increased in the North-West, and rain had fallen in Baluchistan and the West Punjab while the winds had assumed cyclonic directions. In other parts of India except the North-West, the weather was quiet and fine. The heat was greater than usual except over North-Eastern India and Burma. The temperature excess was, as is usual under these conditions, greatest within the depression area in the North-West and amounted to 8° at Mooltan and Bickaneer. The previous night had been very warm throughout North-Western India.

Wednesday, February 15th.—Pressure had increased over Rajputana, North Bombay and the greater part of the Peninsula but had continued to decrease elsewhere. The Sind depression had drifted eastward and was shown between Agra and Jhansi, while a shallow secondary depression had been developed in the North Punjab. The north-west of India was thus under the influence of a double disturbance, so that rain had fallen in Baluchistan and the North and West Punjab, and snow in Kashmir where the air was damper and the sky cloudy. In other parts of India the weather was quiet and settled, and the winds light and variable. The heat was very excessive over the central north-west divisions of India the excess having been over 10° at Sirsa and 9° at Sambhar. In Burma and the south of the Peninsula the weather was cooler than usual.

Thursday, February 16th.—The barometer had fallen rapidly in Bengal and risen rapidly in North-Western India. The double disturbance over North-Western India had filled up, and a large high pressure area occupied that region while the lowest pressure were reported from Bengal. The weather had consequently cleared in upper India, and the irregular cyclonic winds had given way to the usual north-west and north-east winds of the cold weather. In Bengal south-west winds were blowing in from the Bay and the sky was cloudy over Bengal and Assam. Temperature had fallen more or less rapidly over North-Western India, and the area of excessive heat had moved eastward and was shown over the North-Western Provinces where the mean temperature was over 6° higher than usual. In the North Punjab, North Bombay and the west and south of the Peninsula and in Burma the weather was cooler than the normal.

Friday, February 17th.—The barometer had fallen over the Indus Valley but had risen elsewhere most so in Bengal. Pressure was high in the North-West and low over the Bay, and the winds blew from the usual cold weather directions. The sky was practically clear of cloud except in parts of North-Eastern India and of the Peninsula, and the only rainfall recorded was a few drops in parts of Assam, Burma and Malabar. The heat was less than usual over Rajputana, North Bombay, the west and south of the Peninsula and Tenasserim but exceeded the normal elsewhere. The largest opposite variations from the normal were +8°·0 at Barisal and —5°·2 at Rajkot.

Saturday, February 18th.—The barometer had fallen almost everywhere, and a trifling depression had entered Sind from the westward. Pressure was high in Rajpatana and low near Jacobabad, near Darbhanga, and near Gopalpur. The winds were feebly cyclonic in North-Western India but blew from the normal directions elsewhere. The only rainfall had been a trifling shower at Sibsagar. The weather remained cool over Rajputana, North Bombay, the west and south of the Peninsula and Tenasserim and hotter than usual elsewhere. The principal variations were +6°·8 at Sialkot, — 4°·3 at Rajkot and —5°·2 at Tavoy.

Temperature.—The principal feature in the temperature conditions of the week has been the progress eastward across Northern India of a well marked wave of heat. On the 12th the crest of the wave lay over Quetta (+6°·2) and Jacobabad (+5°·0); on the 13th over Mooltan (+7°·5) and Jacobabad (+7°·4); on the 14th over Mooltan (+8°·3) and Bickaneer (+8°·1); on the 15th over Sirsa (+10°·2) and Sambhar (+9°·8); on the 16th over Bareilly (+6°·7) and Sutna (+6°·8) and on the 17th and 18th over the Central Provinces and the North Madras Coast. The cold wave succeeding this wave of heat was neither well marked nor extensive, and hence the mean temperature of the whole country for the week has been above the normal.

The following table gives the temperature variation data for the week:—

Province.	February 1899.							Mean variation of week.

Mean for whole of India	+1·2	—0·1	+1·1	+1·8	+1·2	+1·3	+1·3	+1·1

The above shows that the heat was about normal on the 13th but was above the normal on all other days. The provincial variations exhibit a deficiency of temperature in South India, an excess in Bengal, Orissa, Bihar, Chota Nagpur, the North-Western Provinces, the Punjab, Sind, Rajputana, Central India, the Central Provinces, Berar and the Madras Deccan, and about normal conditions elsewhere.

Rainfall.—The rainfall during the week under review has been confined wholly to the more northern districts, and has fallen principally over the Punjab on the one hand and over Bengal and Assam on the other. The former was attributable to, and fell during the existence of, a moderate double disturbance which affected the weather in North-Western India between the 14th and 16th of February when rainfall varying in amount from a few cents to 2 inches in 24 hours was received over Baluchistan, the North and West Punjab, and Kashmir. The latter fall of rain, i.e, that in Bengal and Assam was due to a feeble disturbance which was transferred eastward from the North-Western Provinces to Bengal, Assam and Upper Burma on the first day of the week, and which occasioned numerous showers in Bengal, Assam, Bihar and Chota Nagpur on the 12th, and to Assam and Upper Burma on the 13th. The very light rainfall reported from some districts of the North-Western Provinces was also probably attributable to this disturbance. The rainfall table at the close of the summary shows that during the week under review effective rain, i.e, rainfall averaging one-tenth of an inch or over was received in fifteen of the rainfall divisions, viz., all the Assam divisions, East Bengal, Deltaic Bengal, Central Bengal, North Bengal, the Bengal Hills, both the Bihar divisions, the Central Punjab, the Punjab Hills, the North Punjab, the West Punjab, and the Baluchistan Hills. In all the remaining divisions of India the rainfall of the week was either actually or practically nil. The third column of the table shows that during the week there was a trifling excess of rainfall in the case of Upper Burma, Baluchistan and the West Punjab, and a moderate excess in the case of the Assam Valley and the North Punjab, but that in all other divisions the rainfall was short of the normal.

The three concluding columns of the table show that from the 1st of January to date the rainfall has been 20% or more in excess of the normal in Central Bengal, the Bengal Hills, South and North Bihar, the east of the North-Western Provinces, the East Submontane division of the North-Western Provinces, Malabar, South Central Madras, Coorg and South Madras, but that in all the remaining divisions the seasonal rainfall has been normal or in defect. Over a considerable part of Burma and of the Peninsula no rain whatever has fallen.

The more noteworthy totals recorded during the week at individual rain-gauge stations were as follows:—

Asst. Meteorological Reporter to the Government of India.

SIMLA, the 23rd February 1899.

T. W. HOLDERNESS,
Secretary to the Government of India.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Weekly Report on the state of the Season and Prospects of the Crops.

Madras.—For week ending 25th February.—No rain fell during the week except slight showers in the Circars. The water-supply is generally sufficient. Some sowings are being made. The standing crops are generally in fair condition. The harvest is yielding a fair to normal outturn. Pasturage is scarce, but fodder is generally sufficient. Prices have risen slightly in parts.

Bombay.—For week ending 1st March.—The standing crops have been damaged by frost, rats or white ants in parts of Sind. American cotton has been blighted in two talukas of Dharwar. Harvesting of the late crops is progressing generally and preparations for next season are being made in eight districts. Cotton-picking continues in parts of Guzerat and Kathiawar. Fodder is sufficient and agricultural stock is healthy. Prices have risen in five and fallen in six districts.

Bengal.—For week ending 27th February.—The weather during the week was unsettled, and rain is reported to have fallen in some parts of Lower Bengal. The general agricultural prospects are favourable. The spring harvest is proceeding. Poppy is in flower, and in some places lancing and collection operations have begun. Transplanting of spring rice is still going on, and ploughing for autumn rice and jute is in progress. Cattle are generally in good condition. The fodder-supply is generally sufficient. The price of common rice shows a slight rise in some districts, but is generally stationary.

North-Western Provinces and Oudh.—For week ending 1st March.—Showers are reported from a few districts, otherwise the weather has been clear. The standing crops are in good condition. Irrigation continues where necessary. Sugarcane is being pressed. The earlier sown crops are ripening and harvesting has begun in parts. Prospects are good. Markets are well stocked and fodder is sufficient. Prices are rising in a few districts but are otherwise stationary or falling.

Punjab.—For week ending 1st March.—Slight showers fell during the week in parts of the Hissar, Delhi, Sialkot and Rawalpindi districts. Rain is badly wanted in most districts. Ploughing for the extra spring crops continues. The standing crops on irrigated areas promise well, but prospects are only average on irrigated and below average on unirrigated lands. In Delhi the unirrigated crops are failing from drought. The rapeseed, barley and gram crops are being damaged by caterpillars in parts of Ferozepore and the standing crops by rats in parts of Umballa. Cattle are generally in good condition. Fodder is scarce in Delhi, Umballa, Lahore, Shahpur and Dera Ismail Khan, but is sufficient elsewhere. Prices, especially of wheat, are rising in Hissar, Delhi, Umballa, Sialkot and Peshawar, falling in Shahpur, but are unchanged elsewhere. Wheat is selling from $15\frac{7}{16}$ to $20\frac{1}{2}$, gram $18\frac{1}{2}$ to 25, barley 29, bulrush millet 19 to $24\frac{1}{2}$, maize 25 to 34, great millet 25 and rice 13 to 14 seers per rupee.

Central Provinces.—For week ending 28th February.—The weather is clear. The nights and mornings are still cool, but the days are growing warm. The threshing of the autumn crops has almost been completed and the pressing of sugarcane continues. The reaping of the spring crops is in full swing. The estimated outturn is 60 in Betul and Bhandara, and 90 to 105 in Mandla. In the northern half of Damoh crop prospects are gloomy. The demand for agricultural labour is improving in the Khurai tahsil of the Saugor district.

Recent showers have enabled the ploughing of fields for monsoon sowings to be commenced in Mandla. In Bilaspur a good deal of field embankment is being effected. The cheapest prices are—wheat 19½, gram 30, rice 22 and juar 27 seers per rupee. The dearest prices are—wheat 12, gram 16, rice 11⅞ and juar 20 seers per rupee. Wheat is selling dearer than usual in Damoh, Hoshangabad, Betul and the Nagpur country.

Burma.—For week ending 25th February.—In Lower Burma threshing has been completed except in one or two districts. In Upper Burma sowing of the dry weather crops continues, harvesting of the pea and other miscellaneous crops has begun and ploughing for early wet weather paddy is progressing in Mandalay and Shwebo Crop prospects continue unchanged. The price of paddy has fallen slightly in Rangoon and Thayetmyo and has risen in Tharrawaddy, Prome, Thongwa, Henzada, Thaton and Amherst.

Assam.—For week ending 28th February.—Rain fell in all districts except Goalpara. Land is under preparation for summer rice sowings in the Assam Valley districts and for lowland winter rice in Sylhet. Gathering of mustard and pulses, pruning of tea and pressing of sugarcane are in progress. Prospects of the mustard crop are fair and of sugarcane and pulses generally good. Fodder is scarce in the Naga, Khasi and Jaintia Hills and water insufficient in the two latter hill districts. Prices—common rice, Silchar, Sylhet, Dhubri, Gauhati, Tezpur and Nowgong 16, Sibsagar 13 and Lakhimpur 13½ seers per rupee.

Mysore and Coorg.—For week ending 1st March.—MYSORE: Prospects of the crops continue favourable. Paddy has been harvested in parts of Kolar, Tumkur, Mysore and Chitaldrug. Prices have fallen in Kolar, Hassan, Kadur and Shimoga.

COORG: The threshing of rice and coffee-picking continue in parts. Water and fodder for cattle are sufficient. Prices of food-grains are stationary.

Berar and Hyderabad.—For week ending 1st March.—The weather is warm. Harvesting of the winter crops continues and land is under preparation in all districts except Amraoti, for the ensuing rain crops. The fodder-supply is sufficient but a scarcity of water prevails in parts of three districts. Prices are fluctuating.

HYDERABAD: No rain fell during the week. Harvesting of the spring crops is progressing. The standing winter rice crop is in fairly good condition. Prices are falling. Prices—wheat 9½, coarse rice 10¾, and jawari 22½ seers per current sicca rupee.

Central India.—For week ending 1st March.—No rain fell during the week. Agricultural operations have been completed in Bundelkhand and are in progress elsewhere. Pasturage is sufficient. Prices of food-grains are above normal in Bundelkhand and normal elsewhere. The condition of opium is good in Gwalior, Bhopal and Indore.

Rajputana.—For week ending 1st March.—Agricultural operations are progressing satisfactorily and the state of the crops is generally good. The spring crops have been damaged by blight and frost in Ajmere-Merwara, Kotah and Kerowlie. Cattle are generally in good condition. A scarcity of fodder prevails in parts of Sirohi, Marwar, Kherwara, Meywar, Haraoti, Ajmere, Jeypore and Bikanir. Prices are rising in two States, falling in Meywar and steady elsewhere. Emigration from the distressed Ajmere villages and from Merwara continues: 167 persons emigrated during the week The total emigration from Merwara up to date amounts to 4,213 persons. 334 persons and 53 cattle have left Marwar for Sindh. The numbers employed on relief works were—243 in Ajmere, 4,278 in Merwara, and 1,036 in Marwar. Prices—Ajmere 19, Beawar 22, and Marwar 15 seers per rupee.

Kashmir.—For week ending 28th February.—The weather is fine. Prices continue below normal. The price of rice is 27 seers per rupee.

JAMMU PROVINCE: For week ending 1st March.—No rain fell during the week. The condition of the standing crops is generally fair. Fodder is sufficient. Prices are generally stationary, wheat selling at 18 and maize 24 seers per rupee.

Nepal.—For week ending 25th February.—No rain fell during the week. The wheat crop is in good condition. The price of rice is 8½ seers per rupee.

COMMUNICATES REMARKS ON THE PROGRESS REPORT OF THE IMPERIAL FOREST SCHOOL, DEHRA DUN, FOR 1897-98.

Circular No. 5—213-2F.

Extract from the Proceedings of the Government of India, in the Department of Revenue and Agriculture (Forests) : dated Calcutta, the 25th February 1899.

READ Circular No. 19F., dated the 18th October 1897, communicating remarks on the Administration Report of the Imperial Forest School, Dehra Dun, for the year 1896-97.

Read also—

(i) Report of the Forest School for 1897-98.

(ii) Letter from the Inspector-General of Forests, No. 1207, dated the 3rd October 1898, submitting the above Report.

RESOLUTION.

From the commencement of the year until the 10th January 1898 the Directorship of the School was in the hands of Mr. J. W. Oliver, who was on that date relieved by Mr. J. S. Gamble, M. A., on his return from furlough. Mr. F. Gleadow continued to hold the post of Deputy Director throughout the year, and Mr. A. F. Gradon that of 1st Instructor. Mr. B. B. Osmaston continued to fulfil the duties of 2nd Instructor until the 18th April, and his successor, Mr. A. M. F. Caccia, was appointed 2nd Instructor on the 6th May. Babu Upendra Nath Kanjilal held the appointment of Vernacular Instructor throughout the year, except from the 2nd April to end of June, when he was on privilege leave.

The School staff was also assisted by the Director, Botanical Department, Northern India, the Assistant Agricultural Chemist to the Government of India, and the officers of the School Circle. Honoraria to the amount of R710 were sanctioned for officers, not members of the School staff, who assisted in the teaching during the previous year.

2. The total number of students attending the School was 65, as against 75 in the previous year and 83 in the year 1895-96. Of these, 50 were in the Upper class and 15 in the Lower; whilst of the 50 students in the Upper class, 7 were students already in the Government service, 14 were private students in receipt of a stipend, 20 were private students without stipends, and 9 were students deputed from Native States. The Government of India view with some concern the steady decrease in the total number of students attending the School course. In 1893-94 the number stood at 106, and the attendance during the year under notice has, therefore, been 41 less than in that year. From Resolution No. X passed by the Board of Control of 1898, it appears that 40 students in the Upper class and 10 in the Lower is the number that can be properly admitted in any one year, i.e., that the attendance may be 100. It is evident, therefore, that the attendance at the School has fallen below what it might with advantage be. The reason clearly is the restricted grant of stipends. Of the new students admitted to the School during the year, private students without stipends formed 49 per cent. of the total, whereas in 1891 they formed only 21 per cent. This is satisfactory, but more students than come forward at present can and ought to be taught at the School. It will be necessary to carefully watch the attendance during the next few years, and not to permit it to fall below the number required for the recruitment of the service.

3. It is noticed with much satisfaction that Native States continue to send students to the School in fair numbers, and that many former students of the School are doing good work, not only in the Government of India Forest Department but in the service of Native States.

INDIAN BANKRUPTCY BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS moved that the Hon'ble Mr. Rivaz, the Hon'ble Mr. Allan Arthur, the Hon'ble Mr. Mehta and himself be added to the

Select Committee on the Bill to amend and consolidate the law of Bankruptcy and Insolvency in British India. He said:—"Perhaps I may add one word of explanation. We are not of course going to take up the question of the Bankruptcy Bill at this stage of the session; but a Committee has been standing for many years on this Bill. The only surviving member of that Committee is my Hon'ble friend Sir Griffith Evans. He, I presume, does not wish to go on with the consideration of the Bill by himself; at any rate, he has not shown any disposition to do so, and I therefore move to-day that some of my colleagues be joined with him in order that the Committee may consider whether this Bill, which has been pending so long, should be dropped, or whether it should in a future session be proceeded w th. I shall ask the Committee to meet and present an interim report stating whether in their opinion the Bill ought to be proceeded with or not."

The motion was put and agreed to.

COURT-FEES ACT (1870) AMENDMENT BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. RIVAZ presented the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to further amend the Court-fees Act, 1870. He said that he would defer any remarks that he had to make till he moved for taking the Report into consideration, which he hoped to do next week.

ARBITRATION BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS moved that the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to amend the Law relating to Arbitration be taken into consideration. He said:—" Hon'ble Members are aware that this is a Bill to extend to certain selected areas the provisions of the English Act of 1889. It is an adaptation of that Act to India. In the first instance, we have applied the measure to the Presidency-towns and to Rangoon. It is a measure which we believe from experience in England to be suited to the great mercantile cities in India. Possibly hereafter it may be well to extend it to other large cities in India where the conditions are similar to those in the Presidency-towns, but certainly it is a mode of procedure which would have to be extended with caution, and the Committee have provided that it shall only be extended to other areas by the Local Government with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council. I think that at this stage I need say no more. I will wait to see what other Hon'ble Members have to say on the subject."

The Hon'ble MR. TOYNBEE said:—"Your Excellency, I support this Bill in its present form, but I desire, at the same time, to express my regret that its provisions do not go far enough to extend to the masses the undoubted benefits which it will, if passed into law, confer on the commercial classes. I should have preferred a measure which would have empowered all the Civil and Revenue Courts throughout British India to assist the people to settle their disputes and differences for themselves without resort to the tedious and expensive procedure of those Courts. Some such larger and wiser measure is, in my opinion, called for in the interests both of the Government and of the people:—in the interests of Government, because the continued increase of litigation means a corresponding increase of State expenditure on judicial establishments which is not discounted (at any rate, so far as the general welfare of the country is concerned) by the increased Imperial revenue derived from court-fee stamps:—in the interests of the people, because it would save them much of their present ruinous expenditure on stamps and lawyers' fees.

"The settlement of disputes by arbitration, my Lord, is no novelty in the mufassal; but it has unfortunately fallen into disuse along with the gradual decay and extinction of the village-communities and of the village-panchayats which played such an important part in the daily life of the people one hundred years ago. In most parts of India, too, the age of personal government is past, and the reign of law has taken its place. In the earlier days of the British administration of India the officers of Government—both judicial and executive—settled numerous disputes out of Court merely by their personal influence.

"But in these later days all they can do is to refer those who ask for advice to the regular procedure of the Courts—a procedure which means ruinous delays, and expenditure on a scale which often involves generations of indebtedness.

"I venture therefore to hope, my Lord, that this Bill is only an instalment, or precursor, of a measure of much wider and more far-reaching scope—a measure, in short, which will benefit the great bulk of the population of India (which is concerned chiefly with the land and with disputes arising out of its ownership and cultivation) as this Bill will, when passed into law, benefit the commercial classes in the Presidency and other large and important towns."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble SIR GRIFFITH EVANS moved that for the first paragraph of clause 3 of the Bill, as amended by the Select Committee, the following be substituted, namely:—

Exclusion of certain enactments in certain cases where Act applies.

"The last thirty-seven words of section 21 of the Specific Relief Act, 1877, and sections 523 to 526 of the Code of Civil Procedure shall not apply to any submission or arbitration to which the provisions of this Act for the time being apply." I of 1877. XIV of 188

He said:—"This is really an amendment composed of two parts. The first I am responsible for, that is to say, the provision that the last clause of section 21 of the Specific Relief Act of 1877 should not apply to cases to which this Act applies. The last part of it is really more in the nature of a drafting amendment introduced to meet certain difficulties, and the credit of it is due to my friend the Hon'ble Legal Member. He proposed it in order to meet certain difficulties which he and I felt, and I think it meets them very successfully, but I move the whole amendment because it cannot very well be moved in two parts. The first part is the only part that I shall say anything about. The second part is not, I think, open to any discussion. The first part turns upon this: before this Act was introduced the only bar which prevented persons who had contracted to refer matters to arbitration resorting to Courts instead of going on with the arbitration was the bar contained in the last part of section 21 of the Specific Relief Act. That was a provision that if a person who had contracted to refer a matter to arbitration, afterwards refused to go to arbitration and filed a suit, his refusal, on being proved, should be a bar to a suit, and that is the only bar that there is all over India now. But we have provided another procedure altogether: we have provided that there should be, as there is in England, a power on the part of the Court to stay any suit which has been filed contrary to the terms of a submission to arbitration, if the Court is satisfied that there is no sufficient reason why the matter should not be referred to arbitration. That is a much wider provision. It catches a great many more cases than the section of the Specific Relief Act does, and it ought to meet the demands of justice in every case. It therefore seemed to me not only unnecessary but undesirable to have two checks—one, the check imposed by the power of the Court to stay proceedings, and the other, the somewhat arbitrary check imposed by the section of the Specific Relief Act. There are some cases where a man is perfectly justified in refusing to go to arbitration, where he has learnt by bitter experience that the other man is only playing and does not mean to go on with the arbitration. On the other hand, the section of the Specific Relief Act leaves a great many ways open of defeating an arbitration, which ways are closed by the power given to the Court as to the stay of a suit. I therefore move this amendment in order to provide that where this Act is in operation and the Court has the power of staying the suit if the suit ought not to be instituted, that there the last words of section 21 of the Specific Relief Act shall not have any effect."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS said:—"I accept my Hon'ble friend's amendment. He says it is in part a mere drafting amendment. It is a drafting amendment to get over this difficulty. As the Bill originally left the Select Committee we were repealing certain sections of the Civil Procedure Code locally and providing for further repeal locally as the Act was further extended. That is a rather awkward proceeding, and it is better to leave the sections of the Civil Procedure Code standing and to provide in terms that so far as this Act is in force in relation to submissions and arbitrations then so far the corresponding provisions of the Civil Procedure Code shall not apply. As regards the point of substance I was not sure for a long time whether it was necessary or advisable to adopt the course suggested by my Hon'ble friend Sir Griffith Evans. He has persuaded me that the power of the Court to stay summarily any suit brought in contravention of an agreement to go to arbitration is sufficient, and that we do not want the additional power that if a suit is not stayed the agreement to go to arbitration may be set up as a substantive defence. The present procedure can be taken at a much earlier stage, and the whole matter can be discussed on its merits on the application for stay."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble SIR GRIFFITH EVANS also moved that after the proviso to clause 3 of the Bill, as amended by the Select Committee, the following proviso be added, namely: —

VI of 1882. "Provided, also, that nothing in this Act shall affect the provisions of the Indian Companies Act, 1882, relating to arbitration."

He said:—"After we had finished our labours in the Select Committee it occurred to me that there were a large number of provisions in the Companies Act relating to arbitration in Companies. I consulted the Hon'ble Legal Member on the matter, and we both came to the conclusion that it was not desirable at present to interfere with those provisions, and this section is introduced in order to make it quite clear that this Act shall not affect the provisions of the Indian Companies Act. Whether that is absolutely necessary or not is, perhaps, a moot point, but a good deal of argument upon the subject will be stopped by the insertion of this section. It might also have been held that an alternative procedure was created.

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS said:—"I accept my Hon'ble friend's amendment. As he says, it is not clear that it is necessary, but it is safer on the whole. We were not prepared in Committee to overhaul the Companies Act. The Companies Act contains two very special arbitration procedures. I am not sure that in future the procedure under this Act might not be applied, but that will be a labour outside the work of this particular Committee, and it must be undertaken with special reference to the Companies Act."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble RAI BAHADUR P. ANANDA CHARLU said:—"I propose to move the following amendment only in case another amendment I have brought forward is accepted. I do not know if Your Excellency will permit me to withhold this till then:—

that the following sub-section be added to clause 10 of the Bill, as amended by the Select Committee, namely:—

'(2) Every proceeding before an arbitrator or arbitrators under this Act shall be deemed to be a judicial proceeding within the meaning of the Indian Penal Code.'"

His Excellency THE PRESIDENT:—"I have no objection if the amendment is a consequential one."

The Hon'ble SIR GRIFFITH EVANS moved that after clause 18 of the Bill, as amended by the Select Committee, the following clause be added as clause 19 (the remaining clauses being consequentially re-numbered), namely :—

"19. Where any party to a submission to which this Act applies, or any person claiming under him, commences any legal proceedings against any other party to the submission or any person claiming under him in respect of any matter agreed to be referred, any party to such legal proceedings may, at any time after appearance and before filing a written statement or taking any other steps in the proceedings, apply to the Court to stay the proceedings, and the Court, if satisfied that there is no sufficient reason why the matter should not be referred in accordance with the submission and that the applicant was, at the time when the proceedings were commenced, and still remains, ready and willing to do all things necessary to the proper conduct of the arbitration, may make an order staying the proceedings."

Power to stay proceedings where there is a submission

He said :—"I move what is practically that the section of the English Act, which enables Courts to stay proceedings in suits and providing circumstances under which they should stay proceedings, should be inserted in this Act. As the Bill was settled by the Select Committee, there was a provision that the High Court might make rules for staying proceedings, but there were no definite instructions given to them, nor were they told when they could stay proceedings or under what circumstances. As there was this section in the English Act which could be made available in the present Act with a very few small verbal alterations, and as that has been construed in the Courts in England and there are a number of valuable cases indicating how the discretion of the Court ought to be exercised and when, I thought it would be desirable to have a substantive section in, and not leave it to the various High Courts to make such rules as they might be advised."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS :—"I accept my Hon'ble friend's amendment. It may be convenient as we have eleven Courts in India with powers of High Courts to give them a lead by enacting the provisions of the English section. As regards the application of that section rules might still be required, but in inserting the English section we give a general line which is to be followed in staying suits when there is a submission to arbitration."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble RAI BAHADUR P. ANANDA CHARLU moved that in clause 19 of the Bill, as amended by the Select Committee, the following sub-clause be inserted after sub-clause (b) (the remaining sub clauses being consequently re-lettered), namely :—

"(c) compelling the attendance of witnesses and the production of documents before arbitrators and umpires."

He said :—"A distinction does exist between trials in regularly constituted Courts of law and enquiries held by arbitration. That distinction is sound, so far as the decisions of the latter are final and subject to no appeal, so far as the observance of strict rules for admission of evidence is not insisted on, and so far as you need not wait for your turn in a long list of pending cases. The distinction may also be pushed so far as to take away the powers of Courts to set aside awards of arbitrators and umpires except in instances of flagrant injustice. The plain reason at the bottom of all this relaxation of the rules, laid down for Courts to go upon, is that when parties choose to erect a tribunal of their own, which they were not primarily bound to do, they eschew the rigid rules of Courts just as they eschew the Courts themselves. All this I freely admit. To admit as much is one thing, and it is quite another to subscribe to what seems to me a violation of natural justice and the first principles of administering it, viz., the debarring one's birth-right to appeal to Law Courts, without providing that one shall be helped, if one personally is powerless, to bring before the arbitrators all the materials one relies upon, in the shape of witnesses and documents. When relations between two persons become strained, it is inevitably the case that each wishes to take the other at a disadvantage. That sin does not belong to one side only. One of the usual dodges resorted to, even without active dishonesty, is to ignore the hardships of the opposing litigant. Even the very best are not free from this failing. Where the contest is unequal, in the sense of one party being influential and rich, while the other is not, there is, I am sorry to say, too often an inclination on the part of common friends to keep aloof, aiding neither side if they can help it. To evade being got at or to plead lame excuses is the too frequent practice. This attitude, not unoften, develops in many into a positive disinclination to incur the blame of voluntarily assisting one side as against the other, particularly when that other is an influential one or one with whom they may have other business relations and whose unruffled good-will they lay much store by. In such cases, except partizan witnesses, others, who could give valuable evidence, would usually decline to come forward at the beck and call of the weaker litigant. It is a matter of every-day experience that partizan witnesses are as a matter of course disbelieved, while the others, if they feel inclined to go, too often wish to be served with processes of Courts to have a plausible excuse for seeming to favour one side more than another. Without imputing any motives to the members of influential firms carrying on large and varied business, I cannot help feeling that many a witness having business relations with them will prefer to be well in with them rather than voluntarily speak even truth in favour of persons that have displeased them, be it rightly or be it wrongly. To my mind these are not merely imaginary or supposititious cases. I regard them as likely events of every day, particularly if it becomes well known—as it is soon bound to become known—that, if a witness does not choose, he may safely stay away. I need hardly have dwelt at such length on what my colleagues in the Select Committee admitted to be an undoubted hardship: but then they called it a lesser evil than the chances of a party to an arbitration taking into his head to be obstructive and name a host of witnesses, whom he may not point out to the serving officer, in case he could take the safe position of one who might continually ask for adjournments on the ground that his witnesses have not been served and that it was no fault of his that they were not served. This latter conduct, which is the crux of the objection, seems to me extremely improbable. He can still play the obstruction game by producing a host of witnesses. He can still take oath or make affidavits that he exercised the utmost diligence to produce his witnesses and ask for adjournments. I am not at all sure that in such cases the award made without the evidence of such witnesses would not be set aside or directed to be re-considered. Where fresh evidence was discovered after the award was made, it was held in Eardley v. Otley, 2 Chit. 42, that it would be a good ground for a re-consideration of the award, provided it was made out that such evidence was not procurable by the exercise of reasonable diligence. I should like to know what essential difference there is between that case and those I have supposed. The test is the exercise of reasonable diligence. In that decided case, one effect of that diligence will be an application for the Court's process for the production of witnesses and documents. If such an application is not made, the party must fail. In the case I have supposed, it is nothing less than the helpless situation of the Tantalus of old; for he is diligent, he has made the discovery, but he cannot get his witnesses to go with him. Apprehensions of abuse for purposes of obstruction ought indeed to be reckoned with, but only to lead to the laying down of effectual safeguards to the contrary—not to the utter denial of all right to use what is proper. Even on the opposite alternative, viz., on the ground that in the circumstances supposed the award would not be set aside, my position is just as strong; for in that case the party is irretrievably condemned. One hypothesis would defeat the object of this Bill and the other would defeat justice irremediably. A sort of impression exists in certain quarters that there is some difference between mercantile arbitrations and legal arbitrations. In truth, there is no such difference, as Lord Langdale as Master of the Rolls clearly pointed out in Harvey v. Shelton, 7 Beav. 455:

'I wholly deny,' he said, 'the difference which is alleged to exist between mercantile arbitrations and legal arbitrations. In every case in which matters are litigated, you must attend to the representations made on both sides, and you must not, in the administration of justice, in whatever form, whether in the regularly constituted Courts or in arbitrations, whether before lawyers or merchants, permit one side to use means of influencing the decision, which means are not known to the other.'

"That was a case in which an arbitrator sought an explanation of a figure in an account book during the absence of one of the parties to the litigation. But the cases I have supposed are, if anything, much stronger. They are manifestly cases in which the parties know how to meet the case made by the opposite side, but can invoke no power on earth to help them in meeting it, and this for no fault of theirs. In plain English, the drawback I am complaining of amounts to turning arbitrations into engines for arbitrary acts. It will prove a fraud on power in the name of speedy justice. It is only next door to another preposterous demand made on behalf of the mercantile community and refused by the Select Committee, viz., that if bodies of that community had rules of their own that all disputes between them and their customers should be determined by arbitration, this Act should apply, even although the contracts themselves contain no agreement to go to arbitration. The last thing which I wish pointedly to refer to is that, in the English Arbitration Act of 1889, on which this Bill is modelled, a distinct provision exists, more effective and more direct than my amendment amounts to. It is section 8 of the Act, and it lays down that any party to a submission may sue out a writ of subpœna to witnesses to give evidence or to produce documents. I am not aware that all the litigants elsewhere are angels and all here are the opposite of angels."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS said:—"I must oppose this amendment for the reasons which I gave in the Select Committee. When we were discussing this question in the Select Committee my first impression was that we ought to insert the provision which my Hon'ble friend now moves by way of amendment. That provision corresponds, as he has pointed out, to a provision in the English Act—a provision with which I am familiar and which works well in England; but on the Committee were various Hon'ble Members who have had much experience of arbitration in India. I have had no such experience. According to their experience and according to their opinion a provision of this kind would be used in India for purposes of delay, for the purpose of increasing expenditure, and for purposes of vexation. In a matter of that kind where there is a fair doubt I think the best thing is not to introduce a new provision into the law. As the law stands at present in India, there is no power to compel the attendance of witnesses before an arbitrator, but as my Hon'ble friends Sir Griffith Evans and Mr. Allan Arthur pointed out—and they have had large experience of arbitrations—the people who go to arbitration are people who really want to get their suits settled, and no practical difficulty arises in getting the necessary evidence produced before an arbitrator. If that is so, it is clearly better not to introduce this provision at once. If, after a longer experience of the working of the Act, we find such a provision necessary, well then it is an easy thing to insert a small amendment, and, if I may say so, I think my Hon'ble friend's amendment is in the form which would meet the occasion. For the present, however, and in the present Bill, for the reasons I have given, I must oppose the amendment."

The Hon'ble MR. ALLAN ARTHUR said:—"I have had a good deal of experience of mercantile arbitrations both in Bombay and Calcutta during the last twenty years, and I can recollect only one occasion on which witnesses were called in. On that occasion I had no difficulty in getting the witnesses. I may say that on this point I consulted the Secretary to the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, and he says that during the last ten years there has not been a single occasion on which witnesses were called in cases of surveys by the Chamber of Commerce, and I may say that the Chamber undertakes a great many surveys every year. The Secretary of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce has had 29 years' experience of Calcutta, and he recollects only one occasion on which witnesses were called in an arbitration; and I think, in the light of this experience, to give arbitrators the power to call witnesses is unnecessary, first, because it has been found in practice that they are seldom called in, and, secondly, if they are wanted to be called, there is no difficulty in getting them. I not only think it unnecessary, but I also think it undesirable. I take it that the object of arbitration is to provide what might be called a rough and ready means of settling disputes, and if you give to an arbitration all the machinery of a Law Court I think you defeat the very object for which this Bill has been introduced. I further think that the arbitrators have to be considered. For instance, as a busy man I would have very great objection to sit in an arbitration if I knew that my co-arbitrator would call in a dozen witnesses and unduly prolong a case. I think this is the view that most merchants would take, and I am of opinion that if this amendment is passed you will probably not get the proper kind of man to sit on an arbitration. For these reasons I will vote against the amendment proposed by the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Ananda Charlu."

The Hon'ble SIR GRIFFITH EVANS said :—" When I heard the glowing speech of my Hon'ble friend next to me (Rai Bahadur Ananda Charlu) I began to wonder how we had got on all these years. There has been private arbitration going on ever since I have been in the country, that is, 31 years, and private arbitrators not appointed by an order of reference have never had these powers, and awards have been filed and the people never demanded this ' birth-right ' which my Hon'ble friend Rai Bahadur Ananda Charlu refers to. I imagine that with regard to that birth-right of appeal to the Law Courts, in arbitration cases most of them would be very glad to barter it for a mess of pottage and would be well advised in doing so. A submission to arbitration is in effect a contract not to resort to the Law Courts as regards a particular matter. The demand for this Bill arose from certain small difficulties connected with submissions to arbitration. One was with regard to a clause for arbitration including future disputes which is not provided for under the Civil Procedure Code—at least it was held by many of the Courts not to be provided for. The other was that a submission could not be enforced unless the arbitrators were named in it, or there was a provision that the Court should appoint them. It was mainly for these considerations that this Bill was introduced. But then how did it stand under the former law ? If a man had contracted to go to arbitration, the result was that if he refused to go to arbitration his refusal was a bar to a suit. Therefore he was barred from recourse to the Courts, and he had to go on with the arbitration, and the arbitrators had no power to summon witnesses. There he was writhing with the loss of his ' birth-right ' and never knew anything about it and never discovered it till the present moment. The next thing is this : we all know that in the mufassal applications for summonses for witnesses, and if they do not attend applications or warrants to seize their goods, are daily used as machinery for delaying a case. It seems to be a very unwise thing to go and alter the character of private arbitrations as they exist at present in India and turn them into miniature Courts of Justice. If it should be found that such a step is necessary, there will be time enough to do it afterwards. But it is this desire to provide for all possible cases of hardship and injustice which has led us in so many of our Indian laws to go into too elaborate a procedure which has turned out to be too expensive for the people and not worked well. I fear, there would be a very great probability, having regard to the way that litigation is worked in this country, of this provision being used for vexatious purposes : a man could come forward and ask for summonses for witnesses and delay the arbitration. If the arbitrators said to him that it was quite useless, and would not summon the witnesses, then no doubt an application would be made to set aside the award. That there may be cases of hardship is very possible, but Courts in India can only enforce the attendance of witnesses if they live within a certain distance from the court-house. So that, unless we also provided all the elaborate machinery of taking evidence on commission, there might still be hardship. Under the circumstances one would sooner run the risk of cases of hardship arising, and it must be remembered that the provisions that we have here for stay of execution leave it in the discretion of the Court to allow a man to institute a suit and to go on with it if it appears to the Court that there is a sufficient reason for not proceeding to arbitration. Then, there is another provision, that a submission may be revoked with the leave of the Court. This must meet a case when it could be shown that, owing to the circumstances of the case and the want of power in the arbitrators, justice could only be done by a Court of Law. I strongly desire to preserve the rough and ready character of private arbitrations. I cannot recall any instance when a difficulty has arisen as to witnesses and would strongly oppose this amendment. "

The Hon'ble RAI BAHADUR P. ANANDA CHARLU said:—"In defending my amendment against the hostile remarks of my Hon'ble colleague Sir Griffith Evans, I do not desire to imitate either his method or his style. He has appealed to his experience, though I know little of the length or the nature of that experience. I, too, speak on the basis of an experience of over 28 years. He says he knows no instance of the difficulties I have referred to. I say, for my part, that I have come across not a few. He has found corroboration in a representative of the Chamber of Commerce. But as no other is here with an acquaintance of the state of things in parts I come from, I must say, I suppose, that they are the majority. It may be that theirs is the experience of Calcutta, which is, in a great many respects, an English city; but I come from an Indian city, and I have lived and moved among the people with my eyes open to their difficulties and hardships. Though I have no support from a local colleague, there is a little matter of considerable significance to which I can appeal, as forcibly telling in my favour, but which has evidently escaped the keen eye of my learned colleague. He has gone through the pains of going over the enumeration of the difficulties, from a wish to cure which, he says, this Bill has had its origin. He has also enlarged on the established consciousness about the serious injury of giving arbitrators the power of compelling the attendance of witnesses and the production of documents. If there had been such a widespread conviction of the horrors of enabling parties to evoke that power of arbitrators, how comes it that, in the Bill as it was introduced, there is a clear provision to let in all that horror? How comes it, I again ask, that no doubt was expressed of its propriety in circulating the Bill for opinion, and no opinion has been called for on that point? I ask again, how comes it that, in giving opinions on the Bill, there is not a howl of horror against that provision from every part of the country? From these circumstances, it is pretty clear, I think, that the right I claim, for the parties who are unable to produce their witnesses, is by no means so outrageous as my Hon'ble friend would make out. My Hon'ble colleague has triumphantly asked how all these years arbitrations have gone on without such a power and without any complaint on that score. The answer is perfectly simple. The arbitrators were repeatedly moved by their own consciences to grant adjournments of the enquiry, over and over again, when the difficulties were brought home to them. In that way, arbitrations, instead of leading to speedy termination of the proceedings before them, had to be prolonged in the interests of justice. The present Bill curtails the powers of arbitrators to a great extent, and hence it is that I expect hardships hitherto not experienced."

The Hon'ble MR. REES said:—"I believe that the wide difference of opinion between my Hon'ble friend Rai Bahadur Ananda Charlu and the Hon'ble Members who have just spoken may be due, to some extent, to the fact that my Hon'ble friend, the Member for Madras, has in mind the Madras mufassal, and the extremely large suburban area which is included in the extensive city of Madras, and the picture he has drawn of litigants in the South, and the description he gave of them, I think, cannot be described as other than accurate. But as I understand the Hon'ble Member in charge of the Bill to say that if in practice it is found, after the measure has been in working, that it is desirable to introduce such an amendment as my Hon'ble friend has brought forward, it can then be introduced, in which case, since the Bill at present only refers to four or five great cities in India, there would seem to be no great harm in proceeding with it without prejudice to the considerations he has brought forward."

The motion was put and negatived.

The Hon'ble RAI BAHADUR P. ANANDA CHARLU then withdrew his first amendment.

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS moved that for sub-section (2) of clause 22 of the Bill, as amended by the Select Committee, the following be substituted, namely:—

"(2) For the purposes of this Act, the local limits aforesaid shall be deemed to be a Presidency-town and the Recorder of Rangoon shall have all the powers of a High Court."

He said this was purely a verbal amendment.

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS moved that the Bill as now amended, be passed. He said:—" In making this motion I have only one word to say. My Hon'ble friend Mr. Toynbee has called attention to a subject of great importance, namely, the possibility of extending arbitration proceedings to the mufassal and to proceedings in Revenue Courts as well as in Civil Courts. I quite admit the importance of his suggestion. I quite admit that it is a subject to which every attention ought to be given, but I think, if he examines this Bill carefully, he will see that its machinery will be absolutely inapplicable to cases of that kind. The whole subject will have to be considered not with reference to what may be called mercantile arbitrations, but with reference to the practice and procedure of panchayats in different parts of the country. However desirable such a measure may be, it would be impossible to overweight this Bill with it, and it would have been impossible in following the English Act to apply its provisions to cases of the kind mentioned by my Hon'ble friend."

The motion was put and agreed to.

CURRENCY-NOTES FORGERY BILL.

The Hon'ble SIR JAMES WESTLAND presented the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to amend the law relating to the forgery of currency-notes and bank-notes. He said:—" Hon'ble Members will no doubt be surprised to find that in the re-draft of the Bill which has been sent up by the Select Committee the whole Bill is printed in italics, that is to say, every single word of it has been altered. The real reason of that is that instead of following the English law on the subject we have thought proper to adopt rather the phraseology and form of the Indian Penal Code. I observe that in many opinions that were sent up to us the gentlemen expressing opinions were rather taken aback by the clause which indicates that under certain circumstances the burden of proof was to lie upon the individual accused. I do not know whether there is really much harm in that. It seems to me that if a person is found in possession of a Rs. 1,000 forged note, and if he refuses to give an account of it when asked to do so, the circumstance of his refusing to give an account of it would be strong evidence of his guilt. It was out of a case like that that the provision practically arose, that is to say, a man having a plainly forged Rs. 1,000 note presented it at the Currency Office for encashment; it was at once discovered there, and he was arrested and called upon to account for his possession of the note; he refused to say a single word about it. Now it is quite obvious that he had not honestly come by that note, and it was also quite obvious that if he had honestly come by that note he would have been willing to say where it had come from. It is also equally clear that in the case of small notes of Rs. 10, which people receive continually without examination, it would be rather dangerous to put upon the person receiving them the burden of proving that he has honestly come by them, and it was with reference to these small cases chiefly that the gentlemen who made an objection to the burden of proof being cast upon the accused person founded their remarks. There was also a difficulty as to the extent of knowledge or reason to believe which should form part of the evidence of proof of the offence. In examining this we looked at the provisions of the Penal Code with reference to the cognate offence of forgery of stamps, and our draft of the Bill as now laid before the Council is for the most part based upon, and follows the provision of, the Penal Code with reference to counterfeit of stamps. I apprehend therefore that, although as I say the whole Bill has been recast by the Select Committee, it will be found that the change is not a substantial one. It is only one of form, and the Select Committee accordingly in making their report have indicated that the Bill has not been so altered as to require republication and recommend that it should be passed in the form in which it now stands. I have no other remark to make upon the Bill, but I hope we shall be able to pass it before the close of the session."

CARRIERS ACT AMENDMENT BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS moved that the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to amend the Law relating to Carriers be taken into consideration. He said :—" I think the amendments in Committee are very small, and they are sufficiently explained in the Report of the Select Committee. I will reserve any remarks I have to make until I hear what other Hon'ble Members have to say on the subject."

The Hon'ble SIR GRIFFITH EVANS said :—" I have no objection to the passing of this Bill. It is a redress of one of the grievances and one of the smaller complaints by the Steamer Companies. Their most important grievance, however, remains unredressed. It will undoubtedly, I think, have to be remedied some day, and that is this : that they are handicapped in their competition with the railways by having an entirely different liability cast upon them. Railways have got the initial liability of a mere bailee for hire, that is to say, that they are bound to take the same care of goods as a man of ordinary prudence would of his own goods. On the other hand, the Insurance Companies have by law the initial liability of being absolute insurers against everything except the act of God or the Queen's enemies, and have therefore to bear the whole of the brunt. There are also other things with regard to which a Railway Company has an advantage. There are easier means provided for their entering into a contract to lessen that already smaller liability than are provided by the Steamer Companies. I am not going to weary the Council with this matter. I only wish to have, as it were, my protest recorded that the Steamer Companies have not got full justice or fair play in this matter. I have set out the whole position of the Steamer Companies in the debate on the amendment of the Indian Railways Act, 1890, which debate was on the 5th of March, 1896, and therefore I will not weary the Council by going over the same ground again. One reason why the Government of India would not place them on an equality with the railways was that they had the monopoly on the Brahmaputra for tea. Now that the Assam and Bengal Railway has gone up there, there is severe competition with the railway. It simply comes to this that the railway capital is either the capital of Government or is guaranteed by Government in nine cases out of ten. The capital which works the steam traffic on the great rivers which are the natural highways of India is entirely brought in by private enterprise, and that is handicapped, and I do not think that handicap can be continued. I desire therefore to place this on record, that more will in my opinion have to be done before long in the way of amending the Carriers Act."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS said :—" I am not prepared at the present moment to discuss the question which the Hon'ble Member has raised. The debate which he refers to took place before I joined the Government of India, and I am not prepared to express any opinion on the subject. This Bill, as he says, is a concession, and I am glad that he is prepared to accept it on the principle that half a loaf is better than no bread."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS moved that the Bill, as amended, be passed.

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Council adjourned to Friday, the 10th March, 1899.

NOTIFICATIONS.

Fort William, the 8th March, 1899.

No. 640-I.-B.—Whereas the Governor General in Council has, in certain cases, criminal jurisdiction within the Tributary and Political States of Chota Nagpur: In exercise of this jurisdiction and of the powers conferred by sections 4 and 5 of the Foreign Jurisdiction and Extradition Act, 1879 (XXI of 1879), and of all other powers enabling him in this behalf, the Governor General in Council is pleased to issue the following orders with respect to such cases:—

(1) The Deputy Commissioners of Lohardaga, Palamau and Singhbhum, respectively, shall, subject to the general or special orders of the Commissioner of Chota Nagpur, exercise, when employed in respect of such cases occurring within the limits of any of the said States, the powers of a District Magistrate, as defined in the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898 (Act V of 1898).

They shall also, respectively, exercise the powers of an Assistant Sessions Judge, as defined in the said Code, in respect of such cases occurring within the limits of any of the said States which the Commissioner, as Sessions Judge, may, by general or special order, make over to them for trial as such Assistant Sessions Judges:

Provided that no case shall be so made over for trial to any such Deputy Commissioner in the capacity of Assistant Sessions Judge which he may, in the exercise of the powers of a District Magistrate, himself have committed to the Sessions.

(2) The Commissioner of Chota Nagpur for the time being shall, in respect of all such cases arising within the limits of any of the said States, exercise the powers of a Sessions Judge as described in the said Code.

(3) The Government of Bengal shall exercise the powers of a High Court, as described in the said Code, in respect of all offences over which jurisdiction is exercised by the Commissioner or any such Deputy Commissioner.

(4) In exercise of the jurisdiction of a Court of Session conferred on him by these orders, the Commissioner, and in exercise of the jurisdiction of an Assistant Sessions Judge in respect of any case which he is directed by the Commissioner to try, any Deputy Commissioner, may take cognizance of any offence as a Court of Original Criminal Jurisdiction without the accused person being committed to him by a Magistrate, and shall, when so taking cognizance of any offence, follow the procedure laid down by the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, for the trial of warrant cases by a Magistrate.

(5) A trial before the Commissioner as Sessions Judge or before a Deputy Commissioner as Assistant Sessions Judge in the exercise of the jurisdiction conferred by these orders may be without Jury or the aid of Assessors, and may, subject to the orders of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, be held in such place as the Court may, in its discretion, fix for the purpose.

(6) These orders apply to all proceedings, except—

(a) proceedings against European British subjects, or persons charged jointly with European British subjects, and

(b) proceedings pending at the date of this notification, which should be carried on as if this notification had not been issued.

T, dated the 6th October 1898, sanctioning the application of the open line General Rules read above to the Howrah-Amta and the Howrah-Sheakhalla Steam Tramways.

Memo. from the Senior Government Inspector of Railways, Calcutta, No. 4817, dated the 9th December 1898, forwarding a letter No. 1757, dated the 6th December 1898, from the Managing Agents of the Bengal District Road Tramways Company.

OBSERVATIONS.—The Managing Agents of the Bengal District Road Tramways Company have represented that the carriages on the Howrah-Amta and Howrah-

Sheakhalla Steam Tramways are not provided with foot-boards, the floors being made sufficiently low to obviate the necessity for them, and have applied for sanction to the exemption of the tramways in question from the operation of rule 141 of the open line General Rules read above which requires every passenger and mixed train to be fitted with an appliance by which the guards can communicate with, or get access to, every passenger carriage in the train.

RESOLUTION.—The Governor General in Council is pleased to sanction, under section 47 (4) of the Indian Railways Act (IX) of 1890, the exemption of the Howrah-Amta and Howrah-Sheakhalla Steam Tramways from the operation of rule 141 of the open line General Rules read above which were applied to the tramways in question under the Government of India resolution No. 1105 R. T., dated the 6th October 1898, which was published in Part I of the Gazette of India of the 8th October 1898 under the Government of India, Public Works Department, notification No. 452, dated the 7th October 1898.

ORDER.—Ordered that this resolution be published under a notification in Part I of the Gazette of India as required by section 47, sub-section (3), of the Indian Railways Act, 1890; also that the General Rules referred to in the foregoing observations, with rule 141 expunged, be kept at railway stations as directed by sub-section (6) of the same section.

Ordered, also, that a copy of this resolution be communicated to the Government of Bengal and to the Senior Government Inspector of Railways, Calcutta, for information and guidance.

No. 93.—The Governor General in Council is pleased to order the following promotions and reversions of Executive and Assistant Engineers attached to State Railways, with effect from the dates specified:—

NOTICES.

All communications relating to Act V (the Inventions and Designs Act) of 1888 should be addressed to the "Secretary to the Government of India, Department of Revenue and Agriculture (PATENTS BRANCH), CALCUTTA."

The office of the Secretary under the Act is open for the transaction of business from 11 A.M. to 4 P.M. on all days except Sundays and gazetted holidays.

The Government of India are advised that, as trade marks are not "designs" within the meaning of the Act, they cannot be registered under Part II.

The fees payable under the fourth and sixth schedules are now collected in cash and applicants are warned that they must be responsible for any delay in cashing cheques.

Copies of the weekly notifications, and of the quarterly lists, of applications and specifications filed in the Secretary's office are now on sale to the public at one anna and eight annas a copy, respectively.

Attention is requested to the rules made by the Government on the 10th October, 1895, in regard to the preparation of applications, specifications and drawings.

All applications made under the Inventions and Designs Act, V of 1888, will from this date (December 19th, 1896) lie in the visitor's room of the Patents Office for ten days from the date of the Gazette of India in which their filing may have been notified; or, if the tenth day is a holiday, till the evening of the office day next following.

At the time of delivering or sending an application for leave to file a specification, the applicant shall cause a duplicate copy of the application to be delivered or sent therewith to the Secretary.

Gentlemen requiring their tuition should communicate with them at the office of the Board of Examiners.

PUBLISHED UNDER AUTHORITY.

The Indian Law Reports, published under the authority of the Governor-General in Council, appear in monthly parts, published as soon as possible after the first of each month, at Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, and Allahabad, and comprise four series,—one for the Calcutta High Court, a second for the Madras High Court, a third for the Bombay High Court, and a fourth for the Allahabad High Court. The cases heard by the Privy Council on appeal from each High Court are reported in the series for that High Court. Cases heard by the Privy Council on appeal from Provinces in India not subject to any High Court are reported in the Calcutta Series.

The Calcutta Series is distributed by the Bengal Secretariat Book Depôt, and the Madras, Bombay, and Allahabad Series are distributed direct from Madras, Bombay, and Allahabad, respectively.

In supersession of the previous advertisements, on and from the 1st January, 1889, the terms of subscription and sale will be as follows for current issues, as well as for back numbers of the Reports from 1876:—

PART IV.

Acts of the Governor General's Council assented to by the Governor General.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Act of the Governor General of India in Council received the assent of His Excellency the Governor General on the 10th March, 1899, and is hereby promulgated for general information:—

ACT No. XI OF 1899.

An Act to further amend the Court-fees Act, 1870.

WHEREAS it is expedient to further amend
70. the Court-fees Act, 1870; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Short title and commencement.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Court-fees Amendment Act, 1899; and

Addition of two new sections after section 19G, Act VII, 1870.

'70. 2. After section 19G of the Court-fees Act, 1870, the following sections shall be added, namely:—

Notice of applications for probate or letters of administration to be given to Revenue-authorities, and procedure thereon.

"19H. (1) Where an application for probate or letters of administration is made to any Court other than a High Court, the Court shall cause notice of the application to be given to the Collector.

(2) Where such an application as aforesaid is made to a High Court, the High Court shall cause notice of the application to be given to the Chief Controlling Revenue-authority of the Province.

(3) The Collector within the local limits of whose revenue-jurisdiction the property of the deceased or any part thereof is, may at any time inspect or cause to be inspected, and take or cause to be taken copies of, the record of any case in which application for probate or letters of administration has been made; and if, on such inspection or otherwise, he is of opinion that the petitioner has under-estimated the value of the property of the deceased, the Collector may, if he thinks fit, require the attendance of the petitioner (either in person or by agent) and take evidence and inquire into the matter in such manner as he may think fit, and, if he is still of opinion that the value of the property has been under-estimated, may require the petitioner to amend the valuation.

(4) If the petitioner does not amend the valuation to the satisfaction of the Collector, the Collector may move the Court before which the application for probate or letters of administration was made, to hold an inquiry into the true value of the property:

Provided that no such motion shall be made after the expiration of six months from the date of the exhibition of the inventory required by section 277 of the Indian Succession Act, 1865, X or, as the case may be, by section 98 of the Probate and Administration Act, 1881. V

(5) The Court, when so moved as aforesaid, shall hold, or cause to be held, an inquiry accordingly, and shall record a finding as to the true value, as near as may be, at which the property of the deceased should have been estimated. The Collector shall be deemed to be a party to the inquiry.

(6) For the purposes of any such inquiry, the Court or person authorized by the Court to hold the inquiry may examine the petitioner for probate or letters of administration on oath (whether in person or by commission), and may take such further evidence as may be produced to prove the true value of the property. The person authorized as aforesaid to hold the inquiry shall return to the Court the evidence taken by him and report the result of the inquiry, and such report and the evidence so taken shall be evidence in the proceeding, and the Court may record a finding in accordance with the report, unless it is satisfied that it is erroneous.

(7) The finding of the Court recorded under sub-section (5) shall be final, but shall not bar the entertainment and disposal by the Chief Controlling Revenue-authority of any application under section 19E.

(8) The Local Government may make rules for the guidance of Collectors in the exercise of the powers conferred by sub-section (3).

Payment of court-fees in respect of probates and letters of administration.

(2) The grant of probate or letters of administration shall not be delayed by reason of any motion made by the Collector under section 19H, sub-section (4).

Recovery of penalties, etc.

19J. (1) Any excess fee found to be payable on an inquiry held under section 19H, sub-section (6), and any penalty or forfeiture under section 19G may, on the certificate of the Chief Controlling Revenue-authority, be recovered from the executor or administrator as if it were an arrear of land-revenue by any Collector in any part of British India.

(2) The Chief Controlling Revenue-authority may remit the whole or any part of any such penalty or forfeiture as aforesaid, or any part of any penalty under section 19E or of any court-fee under section 19E in excess of the full court-fee which ought to have been paid.

Sections 6 and 28 not to apply to probates or letters of administration.

19K. Nothing in section 6 or section 28 shall apply to probates or letters of administration."

Addition of schedule to Act VII, 1870.

3. To the Court-fees Act, 1870, the following schedule shall be added, namely:—

"SCHEDULE III.

(See section 19I.)

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Act of the Governor General of India in Council received the assent of His Excellency the Governor General on the 10th March, 1899, and is hereby promulgated for general information :—

ACT NO. XII OF 1899.

An Act to amend the law relating to the forgery of currency-notes and bank-notes.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the law relating to the forgery of currency-notes and bank-notes; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Short title and commencement.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Currency-Notes Forgery Act, 1899; and

(2) It shall come into force at once.

Addition of new sections after section 489, Act XLV, 1860.

2. After section 489 of the Indian Penal Code the following sections shall be added, namely :—

'Of Currency-Notes and Bank-Notes.

Counterfeiting currency-notes or bank-notes.

'489A. Whoever counterfeits, or knowingly performs any part of the process of counterfeiting, any currency-note or bank-note, shall be punished with transportation for life, or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

'Explanation.—For the purposes of this section and of sections 489B, 489C and 489D, the expression "bank-note" means a promissory note or engagement for the payment of money to bearer on demand issued by any person carrying on the business of banking in any part of the world, or issued by or under the authority of any State or Sovereign Power, and intended to be used as equivalent to, or as a substitute for, money.

Using as genuine forged or counterfeit currency-notes or bank-notes.

Possession of forged or counterfeit currency-notes or bank-notes.

Making or possessing instruments or materials for forging or counterfeiting currency-notes or bank-notes.

Addition to Schedule II, Act V, 1898.

3. In the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, Schedule II, after the entries relating to section 489 of the Indian Penal Code the following shall be added, namely :—

"Of Currency-Notes and Bank-Notes.

489A .	Counterfeiting currency-notes or bank-notes.	May arrest without warrant.	Warrant.	Not bailable	Not compoundable.	Transportation for life, or imprisonment of either description for 10 years, and fine.	Court of Session.

Bills introduced in the Council of the Governor General of India for making Laws and Regulations, Reports of Select Committees presented to the Council, and Bills published under Rule 23.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to consolidate and amend the Law relating to Glanders and Farcy was presented to the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 10th March, 1899:—

WE the undersigned, Members of the Select Committee to which the Bill to consolidate and amend the Law relating to Glanders and Farcy was referred, have considered the Bill and the papers noted in the margin, and have now the honour to submit this our Report, with the Bill as amended by us annexed hereto.

From Chief Commissioner, Coorg, No. 2268, dated 30th November, 1898 [Paper No. 1].
From High Court, Calcutta, No. 2980, dated 6th December, 1898 [Paper No. 2].
From Resident, Hyderabad, No. 387, dated 21st December, 1898, and enclosures [Papers No. 3].
From Chief Commissioner, Ajmere-Merwara, No. 29-C-690, dated 25th December, 1898 [Paper No. 4].
From Agent to Governor General in Baluchistan, No. 287, dated 11th January, 1899 [Paper No. 5].
From Chief Commissioner, Assam, No. 139-L&L-98-J., dated 10th January, 1899 [Paper No. 6].
From Government, Punjab, No. 33, dated 13th January, 1899, and enclosures [Papers No. 7].
From Government, Bombay, No. 277, dated 15th January, 1899, and enclosures [Papers No. 8].
From Government, Burma, No. 340-I.—V—I., dated 18th January, 1899, and enclosures [Papers No. 9].
From Chief Commissioner, Central Provinces, No. 417, dated 27th January, 1899, and enclosures [Papers No. 10].
From Government, Punjab, No. 88, dated 30th January, 1899, and enclosures [Papers No. 11].
From Government, Madras, No. 85, dated 31st January, 1899, and enclosures [Papers No. 12].
From Government, North-Western Provinces and Oudh, No. 626, dated 13th February, 1899, and enclosures [Papers No. 13].
From Government, Bengal, No. 746, dated 23rd February, 1899, and enclosures [Papers No. 14].

2. It has been suggested that the law should recognize the mallein test for glanders as being the most reliable at present known; but new and improved tests may be discovered hereafter, and it seems to us inadvisable that the Act itself should lay down any particular one. We have, however, amplified clause 7 of the Bill in order to admit of the application of such tests as the Local Government may from time to time prescribe, and we have at the same time made an addition to the rule-making clause (14) so as expressly to take power for the Local Government to regulate the use of tests and the isolation of horses while subjected to them, and to provide for recovering the expenses incidental to any necessary detention from the owners or persons in charge of the horses tested.

3. The words "some police-officer" at the end of clause 10 seem to be too vague. We have, therefore, altered the provision and provided that information of disease shall be given either to the Inspector or "to such authority as the Local Government may appoint in this behalf."

4. A clause on the usual lines—see clause 16 of the amended Bill—has been inserted to protect persons acting in good faith under the proposed Act.

No. II.

A Bill to consolidate and amend the Law relating to Glanders and Farcy.

WHEREAS it is expedient to consolidate and amend the law relating to glanders and farcy ; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Short title, extent and commencement.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Glanders and Farcy Act, 1899.

(2) It extends to the whole of British India ; and

Definition of "diseased."

2. (1) In this Act, unless there is *any*thing repugnant in the subject or context, "diseased" means affected with glanders or farcy or any other dangerous epidemic disease among horses which the Governor General in Council may, by notification in the Gazette of India, specify in this behalf.

Application of Act to local areas by Local Government.

3. The Local Government may, by notification in the local official Gazette, apply this Act, or any provision of this Act, to any local area, to be specified in such notification, within the Province.

Local Government to appoint Inspectors.

4. (1) When this Act has been so applied to any local area, the Local Government may, by notification in the local official Gazette, appoint such persons as it thinks fit to be Inspectors under this Act and to exercise and perform, within the whole of such local area or such portions thereof as it may prescribe, the powers conferred and the duties imposed by this Act on such officers.

(2) Every person so appointed shall be deemed a public servant within the meaning of the 60. Indian Penal Code.

Power of entry and search.

5. Within the local limits for which he is so appointed, any such Inspector as aforesaid may, subject to such rules as the Local Government may make in this behalf, enter and search any field, building or other place for the purpose of ascertaining whether there is therein any horse which is diseased within the meaning of this Act.

Power of seizure.

6. Within such limits as aforesaid, the Inspector may seize any horse which he has reason to believe to be diseased.

Horse to be examined by Veterinary Practitioner.

7. (1) On any such seizure as aforesaid, the Inspector shall cause the horse seized to be examined as soon as possible by such Veterinary Practitioner as the Local Government may appoint in this behalf :

Provided that, when the Inspector is also a Veterinary Practitioner so appointed, he may make the examination himself.

(2) For the purposes of the examination the Veterinary Practitioner may submit the horse to any test or tests which the Local Government may prescribe.

Horse to be destroyed if found diseased: otherwise restored.

8. (1) If the Veterinary Practitioner certifies in writing that the horse is diseased, the Inspector shall cause the same to be immediately destroyed :

Provided that, in the case of any disease other than glanders or farcy, horses certified to be diseased as aforesaid may, subject to any rules which the Local Government may make in this behalf, be either destroyed or otherwise treated or dealt with as the Veterinary Practitioner may deem necessary.

(2) If, after completing the examination, the Veterinary Practitioner does not certify that the horse is diseased, the Inspector shall at once deliver the same to the person entitled to the possession thereof.

When horse diseased, place where it has been to be disinfected, etc.

9. (1) When any diseased horse has been in any building, shed or other enclosed place, or in any open lines, the Inspector may issue a notice to the owner of the building, shed, place or lines, or the person in charge thereof, directing him to have the same disinfected and the internal fittings thereof, or such other things found therein or near thereto as the Local Government may by rule prescribe, destroyed.

(2) On the failure or neglect of such owner or other person as aforesaid to comply with the notice within a reasonable time, the Inspector shall cause the building, shed, place or lines to be disinfected and the fittings or other things to be destroyed, and the expense (if any) thereby incurred may be recovered from the owner or other person as if it were a fine.

Owner or person in charge of diseased horse to give notice.

10. The owner or any person in charge of a diseased horse shall give immediate information of the horse being diseased to the Inspector or to such authority as the Local Government may appoint in this behalf.

Prohibition against removal, without license, of horse which has been with diseased horse.

11. No person in charge of any horse which has been in the same field, building or place as, or in contact with, a diseased horse, shall remove such horse except in good faith for the purpose of preventing infection, or under a license to be granted by the Inspector and subject to the conditions of such license.

Vexatious entries, searches and seizures.

12. (1) Whoever, being an Inspector appointed under this Act, vexatiously and unnecessarily enters or searches any field, building or other place, or seizes or detains any horse on the pretence that it is diseased, shall be punish*able* with imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or with both.

(2) No prosecution under this section shall be instituted after the expiry of three months from the date on which the offence has been committed.

Penalty for refusing to comply with notice under section 9, or for moving horse contrary to section 11.

13. Whoever refuses or neglects to comply with any notice issued by the Inspector under section 9, or removes any horse in contravention of section 11, shall be punish*able* with imprisonment which may extend to one month, or with fine which may extend to fifty rupees, or with both.

14. (1) The Local Government may make rules to carry out the purposes and objects of this Act.

Power to make rules.

(2) In particular and without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing power, such rules as aforesaid may—

(a) regulate entries, searches and seizures by Inspectors under this Act;

(b) regulate the use of tests and the isolation of horses subjected thereto, and provide for recovering the expense of detaining, isolating and testing horses from the owners or persons in charge thereof as if it were a fine;

(c) regulate the destruction or treatment, as the case may be, of horses certified under section 8 to be diseased, and the disposal of the carcases of diseased horses;

(d) regulate the disinfecting of buildings and places in which diseased horses have been, and prescribe what things found therein or near thereto shall be destroyed; and

(e) regulate the grant of licenses under section 11 and the conditions on which those licenses shall be granted.

(3) All rules under this section shall be published in the local official Gazette, and, on such publication, shall have effect as if enacted by this Act.

(4) In making any rule under this section, the Local Government may direct that a breach of it shall be punish*able* with imprisonment for a term which may extend to one month, or with fine which may extend to fifty rupees, or with both.

15. Any Veterinary Practitioner may be appointed by the Local Government to be both Inspector and Veterinary Practitioner for all or any of the purposes of this Act or of any rule thereunder.

Appointment of same person to be both Inspector and Veterinary Practitioner.

16. No suit, prosecution or other legal proceeding shall lie against any person for anything which is, in good faith, done or intended to be done under this Act.

Protection to persons acting under Act.

17. The enactments mentioned in the schedule are hereby repealed to the extent specified in the fourth column thereof.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Bill was introduced in the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 10th March, 1899:—

NO. 2 OF 1899.

A Bill to further amend the Indian Tariff Act, 1894.

WHEREAS it is expedient to further amend the Indian Tariff Act, 1894; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Short title and commencement.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Indian Tariff Amendment Act, 1899; and

(2) It shall come into force at once.

Addition of new section 8 A after section 8, Act VIII, 1894.

2. After section 8 of the Indian Tariff Act, 1894, the following section shall be added, namely:—

Additional import duty on bounty-fed articles.

"8A. (1) Where any country, dependency or colony pays or bestows, directly or indirectly, any bounty or grant upon the exportation therefrom of any article and the article is chargeable with duty under the provisions of this Act, then, upon the importation of any such article into British India, whether the same is imported directly from the country of production or otherwise, and whether it is imported in the same condition as when exported from the country of production or has been changed in condition by manufacture or otherwise, the Governor General in Council may, by notification in the Gazette of India, impose an additional duty equal to the net amount of such bounty or grant, however the same be paid or bestowed.

"(2) The net amount of any such bounty or grant as aforesaid shall be, from time to time, ascertained, determined and declared by the Governor General in Council, and the Governor General in Council may, by notification in the Gazette of India, make rules for the identification of such articles and for the assessment and collection of any additional duty imposed upon the importation thereof under sub-section (1)."

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

DURING the last two years there has been a rapid and large increase in the amount of bounty-fed sugar imported into India, especially from Germany and Austro-Hungary. This appears to be seriously affecting the important sugar industries of India, as it is reported that many refineries have already ceased to work and that others are on the verge of being closed.

2. The present Bill has been prepared with the object of enabling the Government of India to impose countervailing duties on bounty-fed articles at the port of importation and thus to preserve the sugar cultivation and industries of this country.

The following note by the Director of Railway Traffic, dated the 17th February 1899 with abstract returns of accidents to trains, etc., on the open lines of railway in India for the six months ending with the 30th June 1898.

I.—Accidents to trains, rolling stock, permanent way, etc.

Accidents to trains, rolling stock, permanent way, etc., during the six months ending with the 30th June 1898, as shown under abstract No. 4 on pages 16 and 17 of the accompanying returns, caused the death of 22 and injury to 67 persons. The table below shows that the number of deaths was in excess and the number injured below the average of the corresponding periods of the three previous years The increase in the number killed was mainly due to the collision on the North Western State Railway on the 25th April 1898 at Jhimpir station, in which four passengers were killed and six passengers and three servants were injured. The total number of accidents was also above the average:—

2. The following table compares the variations in the mean mileage worked, the train-mileage run and the number of accidents with the average, and shows that, with an increase of 7·53 per cent. in the mean mileage worked and of 9·06 per cent. in the train-mileage run during the six months ending with the 30th June 1898, the number of accidents increased by 436 or 16·37 per cent., as compared with the average of the corresponding periods of the three previous years:—

3. The following table shows the principal increases and decreases in the number of accidents of different classes on the standard and metre gauge lines, as compared with the average of the corresponding periods of the three previous years. No noticeable variations occurred on the special gauge railways:—

The failure of axles	+2	+11	+13	+54·17
Under the head "Other accidents"	+1	+15	+16	+31·37

It will be observed from the foregoing that the increases on the standard gauge lines occurred under "Trains running over cattle on the line," 127 accidents or 19·69 per cent.; under "The bursting of tubes, etc, of engines," 62 accidents or 91·18 per cent.; under "The failure of machinery, springs, etc., of engines," 67 accidents or 35·45 per cent.; under "The failure of couplings," 51 accidents or 124·39 per cent.; and under the head "Other accidents," 100 accidents or 113·64 per cent. On the metre gauge railways the noticeable increases occurred under "The failure of axles," 13 accidents or 54·17 per cent. and under the head "Other accidents," 16 accidents or 31·37 per cent.

4. Under the head "The bursting of tubes, etc., of engines," the largest number, viz., 53, occurred on the Madras railway; next to that line comes the North Western State railway with 42 accidents; under the head "The failure of machinery, springs, etc., of engines," the largest number, viz., 85, occurred on the North Western State railway; next to that line come the East Indian with 42, the Madras railway with 40 and the Great Indian Peninsula railway with 38 accidents; under the head "The failure of couplings," the largest number, viz., 43, occurred on the Bombay, Baroda and Central India railway; and under the head "Other accidents," the largest number, viz., 68, occurred on the East Indian railway, and next to that line come the North Western State and the Great Indian Peninsula railways with 55 and 29 accidents on each, respectively.

5. The number of cattle accidents was largest on the South Indian railway, viz., 165; next comes the Southern Mahratta railway with 156, then the Eastern Bengal State railway (standard gauge section) with 144 accidents, the East Indian railway with 125, the Bombay, Baroda and Central India railway with 106 and the North Western State railway with 97.

In relation to the train-mileage run the highest proportion was on the Bengal-Dooars railway, which gives an average of 1 accident in 4,751 train-miles run; the Assam-Bengal railway coming next with an average of 1 in 5,172; then the Eastern Bengal (standard gauge section), the Jorhat, the Rajpipla and the East Coast State railways with averages of 1 in 6,504, 1 in 7,470, 1 in 7,944 and 1 in 8,024, respectively. The lowest proportion was on the Great Indian Peninsula railway, viz., 1 in 303,268 train-miles run, the Bombay, Baroda and Central India railway coming next with 1 in 87,722, then the North Western State railway with 1 in 58,963, the East Indian railway with 1 in 57,026, the Rajputana-Malwa railway with 1 in 42,857 and the Indian Midland railway with 1 in 39,704.

6. Taking the total number of accidents to trains, rolling stock, permanent-way, etc., on each railway as given in table No. 3, the proportion of accidents to train-mileage run was highest on the Cooch Behar railway, on which 1 accident occurred on an average in 2,451 train-miles ; next comes the Assam-Bengal railway with 1 accident in 3,152 train-miles ; then the Bengal-Dooars, the Rohilkund and Kumaon (including the Lucknow-Bareilly section), the Tezpur-Balipara and the Dibru- Sadiya railways with averages of 1 in 3,156, 1 in 3,407, 1 in 3,846, and 1 in 4,672, respectively. The lowest proportion was on the Oodeypore-Chitor railway, viz., 1 in 23,188, the Great Indian Peninsula railway coming next with 1 in 23,016, then the East Indian railway with 1 in 21,536, the Gaekwar's Dabhoi railway with 1 in 18,006, the Jodhpore-Bickaneer railway with 1 in 16,974 and the Rajputana-Malwa railway with 1 in 16,667.

II.—Accidents from other causes not involving accidents to trains, etc.

7. The casualties to passengers, servants in the employ of railways or of contractors, and to others, from causes not involving accidents to trains (which are detailed in abstract No. 2) are compared separately, for each gauge, with the average of the corresponding periods of the three previous years in the table below :—

Gauges.	Six months ending with the 30th June 1898.								Average of the corresponding periods of the three previous years.
	Passengers.		Servants.		Others.		Total.		Passengers.		Servants.		Others.		Total.

TOTAL .	37	109	84	161	285	83	406	353	33	96	80	164	255	68	368	328

It will be seen from the foregoing table that the number of persons killed and injured, excepting in the case of servants injured, compares unfavourably with the average of the corresponding periods of the three previous years. The increase is attributable, to some extent, to the opening of new lines.

III.—Accidents in which the movement of vehicles used exclusively upon railways was not concerned.

8. The following table shows, for the several gauges, the number of persons reported to have been killed or injured by accidents, in which the movement of vehicles used exclusively upon railways was not concerned. Comparative average figures of the corresponding periods of the two previous years are also given :—

IV.—Statistical results.

9. The following table gives certain statistical results for the period under review, comparing the number of passengers killed and injured by accidents to trains, and from all causes with the number carried and the number of passenger-units carried one mile. Comparative results, based on the average figures of the corresponding periods of the three previous years, are also given :—

(a) Excluding the Tezpur-Balipara railway.

It will be seen that, except in the case of number of accidents per 100,000 train-miles run, proportion of passengers killed from all causes to number carried and proportion of passengers killed and injured from all causes to the unit mileage of passengers, the results generally compare favourably.

V.—Number of persons killed and injured by accidents to trains, rolling stock, etc., during the second quarter of 1898.

10. The following table gives the number of accidents, as classified in abstract No. 4 of the returns, which resulted in loss of life or injury to persons, and shows the railways on which they occurred :—

11. A brief description of some of the accidents which resulted in loss of life, or injury to persons, is given below:

East Indian railway.—On the 4th May 1898, the down Punjab mail train collided with a wagon standing foul of the points at Ásansol station. Two passengers were injured and the rolling stock was damaged.

On the 17th May 1898, some wagons while being shunted on to an up Patna-Gya train at Jehanabad station, collided with the coaching stock of the train. Three passengers were slightly injured.

On the 18th June 1898, an up goods train, which had been shunted into the up siding at Jámtára station to enable the up Bombay mail train to pass, was signalled to come out, but the driver instead of doing so backed his train, and before he had discovered his mistake a low-sided truck next the brake-van, containing cases of heavy machinery, telescoped into the latter, and both vehicles were thrown down the bank. The guard was killed and rolling stock considerably damaged.

On the 23rd June 1898, seven vehicles of the up Bombay mail train, when passing over points on entering the station at Raneegunge, ran off the line, and five of them were overturned. The accident was due to the breakage of the heel block caused in all probability by the flange of the leading wheel of the engine. One passenger was killed and nine were injured; and rolling stock was considerably damaged.

North Western State railway.—On the 25th April 1898 an up mail train was admitted on the down main line at Jhimpir station through the carelessness of the pointsman and collided with a down goods train standing there. Four passengers were killed and six passengers and three railway servants were injured, and rolling stock was considerably damaged.

On the 14th June 1898, a down goods train, while entering Gíllawála station against signals, collided with the coupled engines of an up goods train which were shunting in the yard, and the latter were hurled against a truck which was being hand-shunted. Two coolies were killed and rolling stock and permanent way were considerably damaged.

East Coast State railway.—On the 11th June 1898, a cart, while crossing the line through the level-crossing gate at mileage 361·4 near Sómpéta station, was run into by the engine of a down mixed train. The cartman was killed and the cart smashed.

Great Indian Peninsula railway.—On the 25th May 1898, a down Nágpur mail train collided with some wagons standing foul of a crossing at Wardha station. The head guard and a railway mail sorter were injured.

Bombay, Baroda and Central India railway.—On the 9th April 1898, a third class carriage of an up ordinary train, while entering the loop platform siding at Grant Road station, was derailed at the points. One passenger was injured.

Madras railway.—On the 16th April 1898, a mail train, while entering Jalarpet station, was admitted into the second instead of the main line and collided with some standing vehicles. Seven passengers were injured.

ORDER.—Ordered that the above note, with the abstract returns and appendices thereto, be communicated, for information, to the Local Governments and Administrations, and to the officers noted in the margin.

The Governments of Madras, Bombay, Bengal, the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, the Punjab and Burma.
The Chief Commissioners of the Central Provinces, Assam and Coorg.
The Resident at Hyderabad.
The Resident in Mysore.
The Agents to the Governor General for Rajputana, Central India, and Baluchistan.
The Consulting Engineers to the Government of India for Railways, Calcutta, Lucknow, and Assam.
The Managers, North Western State, Oudh and Rohilkhand State, Eastern Bengal State and East Coast State Railways.
The Engineers-in-Chief, Mari-Attock Railway, Indus Bridge Works, Bezwada-Madras, Hardwar-Dehra and Ghaziabad-Moradabad Railways.

Ordered also, that copies be forwarded for the information of Her Majesty's Government.

Ordered, further, that the above note, with the abstract returns, be published in the Supplement to the Gazette of India.

W. J. McELHINNY, Captain, R.E.,
Offg. Under Secretary to the Government of India.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Weather Review of India for the week ending at 8 a.m. on Saturday, February 25th, 1899.

Fine, quiet and unusually warm weather prevailed over a large part of the country during most of the week under review. During this period there was no rain of importance throughout the Indian area while there was a fairly steady increase of heat. On Sunday the 19th the highest maximum recorded was 99°·2 at Cuddapah, but on the following day for the first time this season a maximum exceeding 100° was reported, and from that occasion onward to the close of the week maxima exceeding 100° were daily reported. These quiet settled conditions were disturbed towards the close of the week by a fairly considerable storm. The first indications of this storm were afforded by the Ispahan and Teheran observations on the 21st. On the 22nd the disturbance was apparently still near Ispahan and was growing deeper, while on the 23rd it was approaching Quetta, on the 24th it had reached Eastern Rajputana and on the 25th West Bengal. The disturbance was a very rapidly moving storm having a pressure deficiency near its centre of between 0·20″ and 0·25″, but on the other hand it affected the weather only to a small extent. Dust-storms and dust-haze have been reported in the districts passed over by the storm and light rain, and snow and hail have been received in Baluchistan, Kashmir, part of the North-Western Himalayas and at the stations of Sirsa, Delhi, Dehra Dun, Meerut, Darjeeling and Sibsagar. A considerable fall of temperature occurred over Persia, Baluchistan and the Indus Valley as the storm advanced, but this fall did not extend eastward and a cold wave was never a marked feature of the disturbance.

Daily Summary.—Sunday, February 19th.—Pressure had fallen briskly over North-East India, thus intensifying the low pressure over Bihar and North Bengal, while it had risen in the North-West. Pressure was highest over the West Punjab and Rajputana and lowest in Bihar, and gradients were steep over the Gangetic Plain. A fresh westerly wind prevailed down the Gangetic Plain, while variable light airs prevailed elsewhere. The mean temperature was low over Bombay, the Central Provinces and Tenasserim and was normal or excessive elsewhere. A little snow and hail had fallen at Murree and Minimarg and light rain at Sibsagar and Moulmein.

Monday, February 20th.—There had been no important change in the general conditions. North-westerly to westerly winds light to strong in force prevailed over North-Western and Northern India and light variable breezes elsewhere. The mean temperature was low over Bombay, Tenasserim and Assam and was more or less excessive elsewhere. There had been no rain or snow.

Tuesday, February 21st.—Pressure had increased almost everywhere. The increase had been greatest and large over Bihar and North Bengal, so that the low pressure area in that region had filled up and pressure had become much more uniform generally. The wind directions had not changed much, but the force of the wind down the Gangetic Plain had diminished. Temperature had fallen in West Bengal and the North-Western Provinces and was below the normal in that area. It was also below the normal along the West Coast and in Tenasserim, and elsewhere it was generally excessive. Sibsagar reported a trifling shower. The most important changes on this day were in Persia where the barometer was falling rapidly with a cloudy sky.

Wednesday, February 22nd.—The changes over India were unimportant and pressure remained uniform throughout the country. In Persia, however, the barometer was still falling rapidly, the storm was intensifying and about ½″ of rain had fallen at Teheran and Bushire. In India, beyond a barometric fall in Baluchistan, conditions were unaffected by this disturbance and the weather was quiet with light and variable winds and no rain. The heat during the previous 24 hours had been less than usual over part of Burma, Bengal, the Gangetic Plain and the west and south of the Peninsula, but elsewhere the mean temperature was excessive.

Thursday, February 23rd.—A very rapid recovery of pressure had occurred in Persia and a rapid fall over Baluchistan and the Indus Valley. In the latter regions the temperature was rising, the wind increasing and becoming more southerly, and the sky clouding over, but the influence of the storm was very sharply defined, and except in the extreme north-west the weather over India remained quiet, fine and settled. The weather was cooler than usual over North-East and Central India, as well as parts of Burma and the South of the Peninsula, but elsewhere the heat was excessive more particularly at Quetta.

Friday, February 24th.—The storm, which was passing through Eastern Persia on the 23rd, had reached Eastern Rajputana where the barometer had fallen very rapidly and was 0·23" below the normal. The winds were cyclonic and squally over North-Western India in the storm area and the temperature was very high, but the weather was less disturbed than might have been expected and the rainfall amounts were everywhere small. Light snow and rain had fallen in Baluchistan and Kashmir and rain at Sirsa. Beyond the north-west the weather over India remained quiet and fine with lower mean temperatures than usual over North-Eastern India and Burma and higher mean temperatures over the Peninsula.

Saturday, February 25th.—The storm, moving very quickly, had reached West Bengal. There had consequently been a rapid barometric fall over North-Eastern India and a rapid barometric recovery over North-Western India. The winds were squally and cyclonic in the north-east, while light airs and calms were reported in the north-west. Dust-storms and dust-haze were reported from the central districts of the country. Light snow and rain had been received in Kashmir, and light hail or rain at Mussoorie, Ranikhet, Delhi, Dehra Dun, Meerut, Darjeeling and Sibsagar. The weather was much cooler than usual over the east of the Punjab and the west of the North-Western Provinces and slightly cooler over Central Bengal and Burma, but elsewhere the heat was excessive. Over the Peninsula the influence of the storm was not felt and the weather was quiet and warm.

Temperature.—The temperature conditions have been somewhat unsteady during the week under review over Burma, North-Eastern India, the central parts of the country and South India, but has been fairly steady in most other provinces. The most marked features in the temperature conditions were—(1) the low temperatures which appeared in the Upper Assam Valley on the 20th and subsequently spread over the whole of North-East India, and (2) the hot wave which preceded and accompanied the storm that entered North-Western India towards the close of the week.

The following table gives mean temperature variation data for the week :—

The general temperature of the whole country was higher than usual on each day of the week, the excess being greatest and amounting to 2° on the 24th and 25th. On the latter day every province except Burma reported an excess of temperature. The provincial variations show that the heat during the week was about normal in Burma, Assam, Bengal, Bihar, Chota Nagpur, the Central Provinces, the West Coast, and South India, and was more or less excessive in all other places, the excess being as much as 4° in Sind. The maxima or day temperatures were very steadily excessive during the week, and as mentioned above the thermometer for the first time this season recorded readings exceeding 100° on several days in Southern and Central India.

Rainfall.—The week under review has been one of exceedingly light rainfall. Most of the light scattered showers which have been received during the week were attributable to the rapidly moving depression which crossed Northern India between the 23rd and 25th, but there was some rain due to local causes in Assam between the 19th and 22nd. As mentioned in the general summary the rainfall accompanying the depression was exceedingly slight considering the intensity of the storm and the rainfall table at the close of the summary shows that effective rain, i. e., rain averaging over one-tenth of an inch was received only in three of the rainfall divisions, viz., East Bengal, the Assam Valley, and the hills of the North-Western Provinces, though rain in small and unimportant amounts was received in addition in the Surma and Hills divisions of Assam, Central Bengal, the Bengal Hills, the submontane divisions of the North-Western Provinces, the South-East and South Punjab, the Punjab Hills, the Baluchistan Hills and the north division of the East Coast. All other parts of the country were rainless throughout the week. In the case of East Bengal the average actual rainfall was slightly heavier than usual, and in the case of the Assam Valley and of Baluchistan the rainfall was exactly normal, but in all other places even where rain had been received the amount was less than the small normal fall.

As a consequence of this light and generally deficient fall the condition of the seasonal rainfall returns has not improved and indicates a considerable seasonal deficiency over a large part of the country. In the eastern and central divisions of Bengal, Bengal Hills, the Bihar division, the east of the North-Western Provinces, Malabar, South-Central Madras, Coorg and Berar, the total rainfall from the 1st of January has been more or less excessive and in the Assam Valley, North Bengal, Chota Nagpur, the Oudh divisions, the East Submontane division of the North-Western Provinces and the south of Madras, the total fall has been about normal, but in all the remaining divisions the rainfall has been short of the normal, and over a considerable part of the country no rain whatever was received during the whole period.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Weekly Report on the state of the Season and Prospects of the Crops.

Madras.—For week ending 4th March.—No rain fell during the week except scattered local showers. The water-supply is generally sufficient. Some sowings are being carried out in parts. The standing crops are generally in fair condition. The harvest is yielding a fair to normal outturn. Pasturage is scarce, but fodder is generally sufficient. Pri ces have risen slightly in parts of the Southern districts.

Bombay.—For week ending 8th March.—Slight rain fell in one taluka of Khandesh. The standing crops have been injured by drought in one taluka of the Upper Sind Frontier. American cotton has been blighted in two talukas of Dharwar. The reaping of the late crops continues in seventeen and preparations for next season are being made in ten districts. Cotton picking is progressing in parts of Gujarat, Kathiawar and Belgaum. Fodder is sufficient except in parts of Sind. Agricultural stock is generally healthy. Prices have fallen in five and risen in four districts.

Bengal.—For week ending 6th March.—The rain which fell during the week over a considerable part of Bengal Proper and in Orissa has benefited spring rice, which is still being transplanted, and helped the ploughing of lands for autumn rice and jute. The spring harvest is in progress, and generally promises to yield a good outturn. The pressing of sugarcane still continues in several districts. Opium is being collected in some districts, and the yield is reported to be fair. The fodder-supply is sufficient. Prices are on the whole stationary.

North-Western Provinces and Oudh.—For week ending 8th March.—With the exception of a slight shower in one district the weather has been clear and seasonable during the week. More rain is said to be needed in a few districts. The standing crops are thriving. Irrigation where necessary and the pressing of sugarcane continue. The spring crops are fast ripening and are being harvested in parts. The extraction of opium is in progress. Except for slight damage by frost and rats in places prospects are favourable. Supplies and fodd r are sufficient. Prices have risen or are falling in some districts, otherwise they are stationary.

Punjab.—For week ending 8th March.—Slight rain fell in parts of the Rawalpindi and Peshawar districts, but more is badly wanted throughout the province. Ploughings for the autumn crops continue. The condition of the irrigated crops is good to average. Some of the crops on unirrigated areas have totally failed and most of them are drying up for want of rain. Crops are being damaged by rats in parts of Umballa and by caterpillars in parts of Ferozepore. Cattle are generally in fair condition. Fodder is sufficient in all districts, except Delhi, Lahore, Shahpur and Dera Ismail Khan. Prices, especially of wheat, are rising in Jullundur and Lahore, falling in Peshawar and Dera Ismail Khan and are unchanged elsewhere. Wheat is selling from $15\frac{9}{16}$ to $20\frac{1}{4}$, gram 19 to 25, barley 29, bulrush millet 18 to $24\frac{1}{4}$, maize 25 to 33, great millet 25 and rice 13 to 14 seers per rupee.

Central Provinces.—For week ending 7th March.—The weather is generally clear and the heat is increasing steadily. Slight showers of rain fell in parts of the Chhindwara, Bhandara, Balaghat and Bilaspur districts during the week. The threshing of the autumn crops has nearly been completed and the pressing of sugarcane continues. The reaping of the spring crops is in full swing in the north of the Provinces and has nearly been completed in the south. The estimated outturn is 45 to 60 in Bhandara, 90 to 105 in Mandla and 90 in the Chhindwara Tahsil. In the northern half of Damoh crop prospects are gloomy. Damage estimated at a lakh of rupees has been caused by the hailstorm of the 11th February to the standing crops in 50 villages of Saugor. Employment for agricultural labour is scarce in parts of Saugor and the harvest migration has brought some beggars over the border from Lalitpur and village relief has been granted to 437 destitute and infirm paupers in the Khurai and Banda Tahsils. Prices continue very easy in Saugor, thus obviating distress. Fodder is scarce in the Bargarh Tahsil of Sambulpur. Wheat is selling dearer than usual in Damoh, Hoshangabad and the Nagpur country. The rates for gram and juar rate very low, and rice is singularly cheap, in Seoni, Balaghat and Chhattisgarh. The cheapest prices are—wheat 19½, gram 30, rice 22½, and juar 27 seers per rupee. The dearest prices are—wheat 12, gram 16, rice 11⅞ and juar 10 seers per rupee.

Burma.—For week ending 4th March.—In Lower Burma threshing has been completed. In Upper Burma most of the dry weather crops have been sown or transplanted. Harvesting of maize and gram has commenced in Minbu. The standing crops are doing well. The price of paddy has fallen nearly one-tenth in Rangoon and to a less extent in Prome, Thongwa and Bassein, but has risen slightly in Pegu, Amherst and Mandalay and very considerably in the Northern Shan States.

Assam.—For week ending 7th March.—Rain fell in all districts except Goalpara and the Garo Hills. Ploughing for early rice in the Assam Valley Districts and for low land winter rice in Sylhet continues. Gathering of mustard and pulses, hoeing of tea and pressing of sugarcane are in progress. The outturn of the mustard crop is below the average and prospects of sugarcane are generally good. Pruning of tea is finished. Land is being prepared for the jute crop in Goalpara. Fodder is scarce in Cachar, the Naga, Khasi and Jaintia Hills and in parts of Sylhet and water insufficient in the two latter hill districts. Prices—common rice, Silchar, Dhubri, Gauhati, Tezpur and Nowgong 16, Sylhet 17, Sibsagar 12 and Dibrugarh 14 seers per rupee.

Mysore and Coorg.—For week ending 8th March.—The standing crops are in good condition. Paddy has been harvested in parts of Tumkur and Chitaldrug and ragi (Eleusine coracana) in Mysore Prices have fallen in Bangalore, Tumkur, Kadur and Shimoga and risen in Kolar and Mysore.

COORG: The threshing of rice and coffee-picking continue in parts. Water and fodder for cattle are sufficient. Prices of food grains are stationary.

Berar.—For week ending 8th March.—The days are growing warm but the nights continue cool. Harvesting of the winter crops is well advanced and land is under preparation in all districts except Amraoti for the ensuing rain crops. Fodder and water are insufficient in parts of three districts. The price of jowar has fallen in Akola and Buldana.

HYDERABAD: Slight rain fell during the week. Harvesting of the spring crops is progressing. The standing winter rice crop is in fairly good condition. Prices of grain continue to fall in parts. Prices—wheat 9½, coarse rice 10½ and jowari 22¾ seers per current sicca rupee.

Central India.—For week ending 8th March.—No rain fell in Central India during the week. Agricultural operations have been completed in Bundelkhand and are in progress elsewhere. Agricultural stock is healthy and pasturage sufficient. Prices continue normal. The condition of opium is fair in Bhopal and Malwa and good in Gwalior.

Rajputana.—For week ending 8th March.—Agricultural operations are progressing satisfactorily except in Merwara. The state of the crops is generally good but they have been damaged to some extent by frost in Ajmere-Merwara. The average estimated outturn of the spring crops in Merwara is 6½ annas. Cattle are generally in good condition. A scarcity of fodder prevails in Sirohi, Marwar, Kherwara, Meywar, Haraoti, Ajmere, Jeypur and Bikanir. Prices are rising in Ajmere and 3 States, falling in 3 others, and steady elsewhere. Emigration from the distressed Ajmere villages and from Merwara continues: 90 persons emigrated during the week. The total emigration from Merwara up to date amounts to 4,243 persons. The numbers employed on relief works were—349 in Ajmere, 4,807 in Merwara and 964 in Marwar. Prices—Ajmere 18, Beawar 22 and Marwar 15 seers per rupee.

Kashmir.—For week ending 7th March.—The weather is fine. Prices continue below normal. The price of rice is 27 seers per rupee.

JAMMU PROVINCE.—For week ending 8th March.—No rain fell during the week. The condition of the standing crops is generally fair. Fodder is sufficient. Prices are generally stationary, wheat selling at 18, and maize at 24 seers per rupee.

Nepal.—For week ending 4th March.—No rain fell during the week. The weather is daily getting warmer. The price of rice is 8½ seers per rupee.

NOTICES.

All communications relating to Act V (the Inventions and Designs Act) of 1888 should be addressed to the "Secretary to the Government of India, Department of Revenue and Agriculture (PATENTS BRANCH), CALCUTTA."

The office of the Secretary under the Act is open for the transaction of business from 11 A.M. to 4 P.M. on all days except Sundays and gazetted holidays.

The Government of India are advised that, as trade marks are not "designs" within the meaning of the Act, they cannot be registered under Part II.

The fees payable under the fourth and sixth schedules are now collected in cash and applicants are warned that they must be responsible for any delay in cashing cheques.

Copies of the weekly notifications, and of the quarterly lists, of applications and specifications filed in the Secretary's office are now on sale to the public at one anna and eight annas a copy, respectively.

Attention is requested to the rules made by the Government on the 10th October, 1895, in regard to the preparation of applications, specifications and drawings.

All applications made under the Inventions and Designs Act, V of 1888, will from this date (December 19th, 1896) lie in the visitor's room of the Patents Office for ten days from the date of the Gazette of India in which their filing may have been notified; or, if the tenth day is a holiday, till the evening of the office day next following.

At the time of delivering or sending an application for leave to file a specification, the applicant shall cause a duplicate copy of the application to be delivered or sent therewith to the Secretary.

S. C. HILL,
Offg. Secy. under the Inventions and Designs Act, 1888.

CIVIL ENGINEERING COLLEGE, SIBPUR.

Agricultural Department.

UPPER CLASS.

Session 1899-1900.

The session of the Agricultural Department of the Civil Engineering College, Sibpur, will open on Monday, the 5th June.

Candidates for admission should apply to the Principal before the 15th April, 1899.

For admission to the Upper Agricultural class an applicant must have one of the following qualifications:—

(i) He must have passed the F. E. Examination of the Calcutta University, and be under 23 years of age.

(ii) He must have passed the B. A. Examination of the Calcutta University by the B. Course or possess other sufficient educational qualifications, be under 23 years of age, and, in addition, have received a nomination from the Bengal Government.

(iii) He must have had a general education qualifying him to follow the instruction in the Upper Agricultural Class, and must also receive a nomination from Government for admission as a special student. To be eligible for a nomination under this rule, a candidate must either have landed property of his own or be recommended by some influential landholder who desires to train him to take part in the management of his estate, or he must otherwise satisfy Government that he intends to make practical use of his agricultural training. Students entering under this rule will be termed special agricultural students. They will not be subject to any maximum limit of age, but will not be entitled to the privileges conferred on passed students under Rules 11 and 12, even though they should obtain fully signed diplomas in due course after passing the necessary examinations.

Applications for admission must be in the prescribed form, copies of which may be had from the principal.

Rules 11 and 12 referred to are as follows:—

(11) Two appointments annually are assigned to students holding a fully signed diploma

—one in the Provincial Executive Service and one in the Subordinate Executive Service. The right of selection for these appointments will rest with Government, and the students who gained the highest marks at the examination for diplomas will not necessarily be selected.

(12) Holders of fully signed agricultural diplomas who do not get the guaranteed appointments referred to in Rule 11, but who wish to compete for the examination for admission to the Provincial, Subordinate Executive and Opium Services, may submit their names through the Principal to Government for nominations. These applications for nominations will be considered, provided the applicants appear to His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor to be otherwise suitable for admission to these services.

LOWER CLASS.

The lower course of study will be open to students of the Sibpur College who have completed their second year in the apprentice department and to teachers sent from Training Schools with the sanction of the Director of Public Instruction, Bengal.

Further particulars will be supplied on application to the Principal.

NEW MEMBER.

The Hon'ble NAWAB BAHADUR SIR KHWAJA AHSANULLAH took his seat as an Additional Member of Council.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

The Hon'ble MR. GANGADHAR RAO MADHAV CHITNAVIS asked:—

"I. Is it not the fact that in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh the Government assessment is 50 per cent. and that the sír is assessed 25 per cent. lower than the raiyati standard?

"II. Is it true that in determining the assessment standard for revenue in villages in the Central Provinces during the new settlements Government was influenced by the theory that the Central Provinces are tracts mostly free from famine? Is it not the fact that experiences of the last five or six years have belied this theory?

"III. Is Government aware of the fact that the patel in the Central Provinces, before the advent of the British rule, though he suffered from want of fixity of tenure, realized many direct taxes, such as plough-tax, marriage-tax, a tax on offences, oil-tax, etc., which he was allowed to recover from tenants in addition to rents plus the free unassessed enjoyment of his home farm?

"IV. Will Government be pleased to state if Government, on a report made by the Commissioner of Settlements, was obliged to give relief to malguzars in the Wardha District, and if relief so kindly given and so gratefully appreciated is enough in view of the hardships and losses suffered by landowners since the new settlement?

"V. Will Government, in view of the above circumstances, be pleased, in consultation with the Chief Commissioner, to consider the advisability of ordering a lower assessment in cases of sír land in places where the assessment is 60 or 65 per cent. plus cesses, or by ordering a general relief to landholders of such tracts, and, where the margin for culturable waste does not exist, by ordering a fifty per cent. settlement as in the North-Western Provinces?"

The Hon'ble MR. RIVAZ replied:—

"Question I.—The answer to the first part of this question is that 50 per cent. of the net assets is the ordinary standard of assessment in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh. The answer to the second part is that the Local Government may allow the assessing officer, as a matter of grace, to make a reduction in estimating the rental value of sír lands, when the number of proprietors is great and their circumstances poor. In such cases 25 per cent. reduction on tenants' rates is usually prescribed as the maximum.

"Question II.—The share of the rental or malguzari assets which is taken by the State as revenue in the Central Provinces has been determined by a number of considerations, chief among which has been the standard of assessment found to have prevailed in the past and the observed ability of the malguzars to pay the assessments thus imposed. The standard of assessment has not been influenced by any theory, but by the ascertained facts of past experience. If vicissitudes of seasons occur in the Central Provinces as elsewhere, there are appropriate and sufficient remedies other than that of revising the standard of assessment; and these remedies, as the reply to a later question by the Hon'ble Member will show, are commonly applied.

"Question III.—The Hon'ble Member's description of the position of the patel in the Central Provinces before the advent of British rule is probably accurate. There is no doubt that the patels levied imposts from the cultivators which would be illegal under British rule. The Hon'ble Member need not be reminded that the patel's position under the Mahratta Government in the Central Provinces was not in all respects an enviable one.

"Question IV.—Abatements of land-revenue aggregating Rs. 3,197 in 1897-98, Rs. 3,197 in 1898-99, Rs. 2,771 in 1899-1900, and Rs. 54 in 1900-1901 have been granted in the Wardha District on account of temporary decline in the occupied and cropped areas. The Government of India have no reason to think that the relief thus given is insufficient.

"Question V.—The 'above circumstance' is presumed to be the alleged hardships and losses suffered by landowners in the Wardha District since the new settlement. The Wardha District was one of the least affected parts of the Central Provinces during the recent famine, and no circumstances have come to the notice of the Government of India which lead them to think that the relief asked for by the Hon'ble Member is required. In districts where the losses of landowners have been undoubtedly heavy, relief, through suspensions and remissions and temporary reductions of land-revenue, has been given on a large scale, and the Local Administration is fully competent to deal with the Wardha District if the relief already given is found by it to be insufficient."

COURT-FEES ACT (1870) AMENDMENT BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. RIVAZ moved that the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to further amend the Court-fees Act, 1870, be taken into consideration. He said:—" When this Bill was introduced it was explained that its object was, first, to provide a check on the under-valuation of estates by persons applying for probate of a will or for letters of administration: and, secondly, to place on a more satisfactory footing the existing law relating to the realization of the duties payable on probates and letters of administration.

The Select Committee have kept to these two points, and have abstained from considering various suggestions which have been made for altering the general law on the subject of succession-duty, either in the direction of obliging Hindus, Muhammadans and Buddhists to take out probate or letters of administration, or to exempt Native Christians from that obligation, as being quite outside the scope of the present measure. The alterations which the Committee have proposed in the Bill as introduced are confined to what they consider will be improvements in the procedure for giving effect to the object in view. These alterations are fully explained in paragraphs 3 and 4 of the Committee's report, and I need not take up the time of the Council by repeating what is there said."

The Hon'ble MR. REES said:—" My Lord, the Hon'ble Member has referred to the case of 'the Native Christians'. Under the existing law every Indian Christian's estate valued at over Rs. 1,000 pays succession-duty on the whole estate at 2 per cent., as it is compulsory upon their heirs and executors to take out probate or administration under the Succession Act, from the operation of which Hindus, Muhammadans and Buddhists are exempt. Similarly, under the Administrator General's Act, where no person has taken out probate or administration of a deceased Christian's estate within a month after his death, the Administrator General may take proceedings, and it is the duty of the District Judge to report in such cases to the Administrator General and to take possession of the property pending probate or administration.

"The exempted classes, or rather all Indians other than Native Christians, Hindus affected by the provisions of the Hindu Wills Act, and Parsis,—who have their own succession law,—only pay the 2 per cent. on such debts due to the estate as they cannot recover without the aid of a succession certificate, and they take out a certificate for the collection of such specific debts, and pay 2 per cent. on that amount and no more. Nor, in their case, can the Administrator General intervene except in the Presidency-towns, and only for the protection of the estate.

"The reason for this inequality of treatment is that the Succession and Administrator General's Acts are based on English law, and were intended to apply primarily to the English in India and to races having a foreign domicile but residing in this country, to persons other than Muhammadans and Hindus, the latter expression so clearly referring to a race and not a religious distinction that it includes Sikhs and Jains in this behalf. Sir Henry Maine on introducing the Bill had said that after exempting Hindus and Muhammadans the Legislature had been brought successively to except nearly every native race in India, and in accepting an amendment empowering the Governor General in Council to exempt any race, tribe or sect and also every part of such race, tribe or sect, he said :—

'If necessary, therefore, it would be possible to exempt Native Christians from the operation of the Act.'

"Similarly, in introducing the Bill for the exemption of Parsis from the Administrator General's Act, or certain parts thereof, the Legal Member of the Government said:—

'There is no doubt that the Act was originally intended to apply chiefly, if not solely, to Europeans and other persons with a foreign domicile residing in India.'

"The Indian Christians in Mysore and Coorg were accordingly exempted when the State of Mysore was under British administration.

"It is clear that what was intended was a race and not religious exemption. True, Buddhist and Muhammadan are religious designations, but Hindu also signifies inhabitant of Hindustan. The object was to exempt the inhabitants of Hindustan, who were subsequently given the permissive Probate and Administration Act.

"The object of the present amendment of the Court-fees Act is simply to prevent evasions of the existing law, but important changes are made, and I gratefully acknowledge, on behalf of the Christians of the South, the amendment now made in Select Committee in section 20, Act VII of 1889, whereby the Chief Controlling Revenue-authority's power to remit penalties is considerably extended.

"But the provision requiring valuation and prepayment of court-fees before issue of order entitling to probate and administration will work hardly as regards the Christians of the Malabar Coast. It may be said that they are in the same position as other Indian Christians; but in fact they are, as is shown above, not in the same position as their immediate neighbours in Coorg and Mysore, and it must be observed that they occupy, as a community, at many points along the coast, a higher position in the Hindu world than many other classes of Native Christians, and very generally have small estates which are dutiable. Their position is well known to those who have lived among them, and are familiar with the famous controversy of the Malabar rites arising out of the reluctance of Christians in this part of India to break entirely with the Hindu social system, the property law of which they were, till the Succession Act was passed, enabled to retain after becoming Christians.

"Though unlike most bodies of Indian Christians they have property, they are none the less far from rich, and prepayment of fees will hit them harder than Hindus, in regard to whom payment of court-fees on probate and administration is optional, and harder than Indian Christians elsewhere, who as a rule are few, and possess no sufficient property to bring them under the operation of the Act. Upwards of three-quarters of the Christian community in India are found in Madras and the States of Travancore, Mysore and Cochin, and on the Malabar Coast they form, in some districts, no less than 25 per cent. of the population. They, and the not inconsiderable number of Christians in other parts of India, are therefore entitled to a hearing.

"It is not, I know, convenient to make proposals of a general character on the amendment of a fiscal Act, but the Succession, the Probate and the Court-fees Acts have before now been amended by one and the same enactment, the subjects with which they deal being intimately connected, and it is a particular class which feels an amendment such as that now before the Council, the more particularly as the Madras authorities, acting, as it seems to me, on a right interpretation of Chapter IIIA of the Court-fees Act, enforce the existing law with the help of the local Revenue-officers.

"Had there been a fair prospect of support, I would have suggested, as an alleviation, that a clause be added to section 19I permitting the Court to require the applicant to furnish security, with one or more sureties, for the prepayment of the court-fee, which now becomes imperative. In the papers relating to the Bill the opinion is expressed over and over again that it is hard on the poor to raise the money for prepayment, and that under section 19I prevention in future, of what certainly was no doubt an irregular procedure, will increase that difficulty, as they will not now have the order on which they used to borrow the money for paying the fees. They cannot do without borrowing, and can no more get their estates administered than the planters can get their estates cultivated without advances. There are manifest objections to the acceptance of security for the payment of court-fees, but the incidence of this tax is as unequal as the circumstances are exceptional, and that the principle is not unknown to fiscal legislation is evident from the provisions of sections 41, 64, 106, 107, 128, 138, 144 and 161 of the Sea-customs Act (VIII of 1878), section 7 (5) of the Inland Bonded Warehouses Act (VIII of 1896), from section 5 of the Opium Act, 1878, and from the provisions for taking security from persons holding licenses or leases for manufacture or sale of exciseable articles in the Madras, Bombay, Bengal and Indian Excise Acts. In none of these cases, however, is security taken by a Court for money due on account of court-fees.

"The succession-tax is none the less a duty though paid in the form of court-fees, and any increased stringency as regards collection affects chiefly Indian Christians. I hope their case will be considered upon its merits whenever an amendment or consolidation of the existing law on this subject, which I think cannot be long delayed, is under consideration."

The Hon'ble MR. SMEATON said:—"As a member of the Select Committee and as a minor contributory cause of the inception of this Bill, I desire, with Your Excellency's permission, to make a few observations on the remarks which have just fallen from the Hon'ble Mr. Rees. The Hon'ble Member has referred in forcible terms to the hardship likely to be inflicted on the Native Christians of Southern Madras and to the complaints which they have made. But there are other large Native Christian communities in India besides those of Madras, and not a word of complaint has come from them. They are content to discharge the obligations which the law has imposed on them. Why should the Madras community be an exception? My Lord, I have personal experience of a large population of Native Christians in Burma—the Karens—who are, equally with the Madras people, affected by the Probate and Administration Law. These people are Christians of a robust type and are always content to pay their way as other loyal subjects of Her Majesty pay their way. In the time of the disturbances in Burma these Karens not only showed their loyalty by paying their taxes cheerfully, but embodied themselves into a battalion and shed their blood for the Government of Her Majesty; and I have never known of any claim made by a relation for exemption from probate or administration duties on the estate of a Karen killed in action. With regard to Native Christians, I recollect that on a recent occasion, while the Contract Amendment Bill was being debated, the Hon'ble Mr. Rees alluded to the prosperous condition of the peasantry of Madras; and the Native Christians, I presume from his remarks, form a large proportion of that prosperous community. I think I recollect the Hon'ble Member saying that the Contract Amendment Act was not required by them. They were too rich for that; they were too well off; there was no usury; raiyat lent money to raiyat on friendly terms and at nominal rates; there was no stringency in the money market; everybody was prosperous: we heard of hoards of money waiting for investment. Now, however, when the Court-fees Bill—a Bill designed simply to enforce payment of lawful dues—is proposed, we are told that the Native Christians can't afford to pay these dues. In short, my Hon'ble friend's argument comes to this: that the Native Christians are too rich for the Contract Act and too poor for the Court-fees Act. This, to say the least, is somewhat of an equivocal position and one hardly to be recognised by the Legislature. As regards the mixed Hindu-Christians, to whom allusion has also been made, it appears to me as if the intention of the advocacy of these bodies might popularly be described as 'running with the hare and hunting with the hounds'. As Christians, they are glad to have the benefits of probate and letters of administration: as Hindus, they wish to claim exemption from the lawful fees for these benefits. This, too, is a position which can hardly be recognised by the Legislature. In regard to the valuation and the stricter provisions made for collection of the revenue by the Bill now before the Council, I would remark that in two important points the Bill adopts the actual procedure which has been followed in Bombay for the last twenty-five years without difficulty, as has been vouched to us by the High Court of Bombay through its Registrar. The present Bill insists that for purposes of collection of legitimate dues the applicant for probate or letters of administration shall submit a schedule and a valuation, and that until this has been done no order entitling the applicant to probate or letters of administration shall be passed. This, my Lord, from the papers which are before the Council, has been the actual practice in Bombay, and I think we may consider ourselves in very good company indeed in following that practice, and adopting it in the present Bill. As regards security to which my Hon'ble friend Mr. Rees has referred,—the security instead of actual payment of fees,—it has also been found in Bombay that justifying sureties in certain cases of administration have, as a rule, a tendency to over-estimate the estates in order to secure higher fees, and therefore I should imagine the result of substituting security for payment of fees would not be so much to the advantage of the applicant as my Hon'ble friend seems to think. In regard, lastly, to the suggestion which my Hon'ble friend Mr. Rees made about the two per cent. fee on a valuation of estates: in the papers submitted by the representative of the Christians in Southern Madras an attempt was made to show that it would be more just if applications for probate or letters of administration were valued as suits are, and if the formulæ of valuation as given in Part III of the Act were to be adopted for the valuation of estates for purposes of probate and letters of administration. But, my Lord, a glance at the ad valorem schedule of that Act will show that, whereas the fee for probate or letters is two per cent. on the market-value of the estate, the fee for a suit averages between seven and eight per cent. on the value of the subject-matter calculated according to the formulæ of Part III of the Act. If, then, the formulæ of Part III were to be adopted for valuing estates for probate purposes, the advocate of the Southern India Christians could not object if the Government raised the fee from two per cent. to seven or eight per cent., in which case, I take it, these shrewd Christians would not thank their advocate.

"These, my Lord, are the only remarks which I have to make. My Hon'ble friend was on the Select Committee and has had somewhat the advantage of us, inasmuch as we did not know the line he would take in the debate. I hope, however, that the Bill may be found to have emerged from my Hon'ble friend's criticism without a blemish."

The Hon'ble PANDIT SURAJ KAUL said:—"My Lord, in supporting the motion now before Your Excellency's Council, I desire to offer the following observations. The Bill as introduced was carefully considered at the meetings held by the Select Committee and amended after thorough discussion. The Bill not only protects the interests of Government, but is also calculated to have a beneficial effect upon the private rights of those who may be affected by it. The Select Committee, I venture to think, has very wisely entrusted to the Revenue-officer of the district the work of preliminary inquiry into the true value of an estate in regard to which probate or letters of administration may be applied for.

"Some persons are of opinion that the Civil Court is a better agency than the Revenue-officers for determining the value of property in such cases. It is true that the Court has got the Subordinate Judge, Munsif or a Commission to do what is necessary, but on the other hand the Revenue-officers can resort to more valuable sources of information, viz., the revenue, settlement, and village records, (2) the personal and local knowledge of such Revenue-officers as the Tahsildar and the Deputy Collector, and (3) of the Collector himself. It is impossible to suppose that these officers will make an unduly high estimate of the value of property for the benefit of the Government. Whatever assessment of value may be made by the principal Revenue-officer of the district after proper investigation and consideration will certainly be a correct one, and under all the circumstances must be more reliable than any that could be made through the agency of a Civil Court. The estimate made will generally be such that it will neither cause any loss to Government nor make the party concerned pay more than the amount which is strictly due.

"No one will, I think, deny that in India, of all the officers in a district, the Collector is the one in whom people naturally place entire confidence, and upon whom they look as their sympathiser and just arbitrator between the Government and its subjects; and, this being the case, there can be no doubt that the action of these officers in such cases must and will always produce satisfactory results. The relations of Collectors with the people in their districts are as a rule all that they should be, and I may here say that it is to be regretted that frequent transfers of such officers are unfortunately calculated to affect those relations in an undesirable manner.

"My Lord, notwithstanding these considerations, the Select Committee has provided in the Bill that, in the event of an objector not being satisfied with the assessment of value by the Collector, the Court shall make a further investigation and thereupon come to a decision which shall be final and conclusive, and every possible contingency has thus, I think, been amply provided for.

"The Bill, as amended, is, in my opinion, a suitable measure and one that may, without any hesitation, be passed by Your Excellency's Council."

The Hon'ble SIR GRIFFITH EVANS said:—"The Bill is one to amend the Court-fees Act so as to give the Revenue-authorities greater facilities for recovering the full amount of the tax they are entitled to by the present law on probates and letters of administration. But if the present tax is in some respects anomalous and unjust in its incidence, and if the method of realizing it is unsatisfactory, it may well be the duty of those Members of the Council who so think to call these matters to the attention of Your Excellency's Government, and to point out that, if they agree to the proposed measure, it is only as a temporary makeshift, and that the only reason why they do not press for the necessary changes at present is that the limited scope of the Bill renders it impossible.

"In fact, the question reduces itself to the practical issue whether we should refrain from giving increased facilities for the collection of the tax until the tax itself is placed on a juster and more equitable basis. This renders it necessary briefly to consider the objections to the tax and to its method of collection, and to explain why, though regarding it as unsatisfactory, I do not vote against the Bill.

"This tax is in the nature of a succession-tax or death-duty. But there is no general succession-duty in India. It is only collected in cases in which probate or letters of administration are taken out of the Courts, or when a certificate is required from the Court to sue for the debts of a deceased person, but the tax is collected not as a direct tax, but in the veiled form of a court-fee on the document issued by the Court The result, however, is that a tax of two per cent. on the whole estate of a deceased person, including land, is payable by that class of Her Majesty's subjects in India which is compelled by law to take out letters of administration in case of intestacy.

"That class has to pay the tax equally, whether they make a will or not. This is a comparatively small class, consisting mainly of Europeans, Eurasians, Native Christians and Jews. The bulk of the inhabitants of India—Hindus, Sikhs, Jains, Buddhists and Muhammadans—are exempt from this compulsion. They pay practically under the Succession Certificate Act only on such debts of the deceased as they wish to recover through our Courts. If they should desire to take out probate or letters of administration, they are enabled to do so under the Probate and Administration Act, and then they must pay on the whole estate; but it is optional to do so or not.

"There is the further anomaly that if a Hindu makes a will in Bengal or the Presidency-towns his representative is compelled to pay the full tax—if he makes one elsewhere it is optional. There is a further anomaly that if the Hindu is governed by the Mitakshara school of Hindu law his representatives escape even the tax on debts if the property is joint, because the other members of the family succeed by survivorship and not by inheritance.

"The history of the various Acts which have led to these results was discussed in 1889 on the debate on the Bill to amend the Probate and Administration Act and on the Succession Certificate Bill, and attention was then drawn to the unequal incidence of the tax. Again, in the debate of the 27th March on the Budget of 1894 I drew attention to the fact that this tax operated practically, though unintentionally, as a tax on Christianity in India.

"I will not weary the Council with going into complicated details which will have to be considered some other time. The position broadly is this: it is possible that some day there may be a direct succession-duty in India as there is an income-tax, apart from court-fees. But in spite of severe financial pressure the Government has decided for the present against such a tax.

"They also decided that they could not fairly make it compulsory on the native inhabitants generally to take out letters of administration because it was a foreign procedure unknown to them and alien to their habits—a hardship and a thing difficult to enforce — and unnecessary for the protection of their estates.

"The Acts which render the taking out of letters of administration compulsory are the Succession Act of 1865 and the Administrator General's Act.

"The Succession Act consists of two parts—one a general law of succession, the other a procedure for taking out probates and letters of administration.

"The effect of the Act and the Administrator General's Act is to render the taking out of probate or letters of administration compulsory on all those who are governed by the first part, that is, by the general law of succession there laid down for all but the Hindus and Muhammadans, etc., who have their own personal laws of succession.

"Now this compulsion was introduced in the first instance not for fiscal purposes but for the protection of the estates of Englishmen and other migratory foreigners in India, and I admit that for them it is necessary.

"The general law of succession prescribed by the Succession Act was made applicable to all who had no personal law of succession of their own, and it was because on conversion Native Christians became relieved from the Hindu and Muhammadan law of succession that they came under the Succession Act. This was right and necessary to furnish them with a settled law of inheritance.

"But the compulsory procedure which compels them to take out letters of administration on intestacy is as alien to their habits and as unnecessary for the protection of their estates as if they had remained unconverted.

"It seems unjust that conversion because it changes the rule of inheritance should subject them not only to a tax but drive them into a legal proceeding which they do not want and is no benefit to them.

"The remedy is to place Native Christians in the same position as to letters of administration in cases of intestacy as their unconverted brethren.

"If they can afford the luxury of making wills, I think they may be content to be in the same position as a Hindu in Bengal or the Presidency-towns.

"The relief can easily be given not by exempting them from the Succession Act, but by enacting that the provisions of the Succession Act and the Administrator General's Act as to letters of administration in cases of intestacy shall not apply to them but they shall be in the same position as Hindus and Muhammadans and be subject to the Probate and Administration and Succession Certificate Acts.

"The other inequalities which concern the Europeans and others can wait until there is a full reconsideration of the whole question, for they must take out letters of administration and pay some court-fee upon them. But the injustice of the position of the Native Christian is so great that one may well press for its immediate redress.

"What the effect on the spread of Christianity may be I do not know any more than I can say what effect it would have in England if the profession of Buddhism rendered its professors exempt from succession-duties. Possibly many persons might see points in Buddhism as the Way of Deliverance which they do not at present.

"I press for this because these Native Christians are a feeble folk. It has been said by the Hon'ble Mr. Smeaton these Christians continue loyal. They are a very long-suffering people. How long-suffering is seen by the fact that the Catholic Christians can get no redress as to the hardship of the marriage laws.

Their converts are branded as bigamists, their children bastardized and the priests turned into criminals. They have been told to get redress under the Native Converts Act, which does not apply to them. Yet there has been no public outcry, no public reviling of the Secretary of State. So far as is known, they have not gone further than to pray for his enlightenment—prayers which, I trust, may be heard.

"I mention this to show that the absence of disloyalty among these Christians is no argument to show they are not suffering a great injustice. It only shows they are like the early Christians—ready to turn the other cheek when smitten.

"Then there is the further point that this Bill as originally introduced, throws on the Courts the duty of investigating the value of estates for revenue purposes. This is very objectionable in principle. The Courts ought to have nothing more to do with the valuing of estates than with the valuing of incomes.

"However, the evil has been somewhat abated by the Select Committee, and further by one of my amendments.

"The necessity for the Bill arises mainly from the Hindus and Muhammadans, who have an option of applying for letters of administration, trying to evade the duty. It is mainly because I recognise that this is very extensively done, particularly in the mufassal, that I appeal to these further facilities being given for the collection of this most unsatisfactory tax."
